Music Lovers' Cyclopedia

PUBLISHER'S PREFACE TO THE REVISED EDITION

WHEN the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" was first compiled, it was the editor's effort to make it the most nearly complete reference work of its kind in existence. That this effort did not fail is proved by a comparison of the original edition with other works since issued. A careful checking, item by item, proves that where other musical dictionaries and cyclopædias, however voluminous, contain at most a few hundreds of biographies and definitions omitted from this work, the best of them omit many thousands of biographies and definitions contained in the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia."

On account of the completeness of its contents and their extremely convenient arrangement, the book at once took its place on the reference shelves of libraries, public and private, large and small; and everywhere the worn condition of its bindings, and the testimony of its readers have proved how invaluable it has been found.

Originally published in two volumes at six dollars, we are now able to issue it in one volume at one dollar and a half, and the editor has seized the opportunity to bring it down to date by the addition of several thousand biographies. Great changes have taken place in music in the nine years since the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" was published in 1903. Two widely contrasted instances will prove this: Caruso, and "Parsifal."

Caruso swam into the ken of London and New York just after the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" went to press. "Parsifal" was, of course well known, but its libretto was omitted from the "Stories of the Operas" for the reason that it was then supposed to be the exclusive property of Bayreuth. Only a few months later it was produced in New York City, after a sensational controversy. The story of "Parsifal," therefore, appears in this new edition of the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia," along with the stories of many other operas that have since entered the repertoire of the leading opera houses. This means that the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" now contains the detailed plots of sixty operas.

Attention may be called again to the fact that the stories as told here give the places and dates of original production, and, where discoverable, the names of the creators of the rôles, the pronunciation of the names of the characters, and a full outline of the plot as it is unfolded on the stage by exits and entrances, with the titles of the principal musical numbers as they appear.

We beg to acknowledge here our indebtedness to G. Schirmer for permission to give the plots of the following operas whose American copyright he controls: "Louise," "Pelléas et Mélisande," "Ariane et Barbe-Bleu," "Hänsel und Gretel," "I Pagliacci," "Le Cid," "Le Jongleur," "Thaïs," "Manon," "I Giojelli della Madonna" and "Le Donne Curiose."

The phonetic pronunciation of every proper name and term is a further distinguishing feature.

Emphasis should also be laid on the number of special contributions by the most eminent musical authorities in America and England, men of the calibre of Sir Hubert H. Parry, Ernest Newman, James Huneker, W. J. Henderson, Richard Aldrich, and many others of distinction.

The fault to be found with dictionaries in general is that they are inclined to be provincial; those published in England have been parsimonious of German, French, Italian, and American names; and those published in these other countries have returned the discourtesy. It has been the ambition of the editor of the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" to avoid this disproportion by collecting the greatest possible number of important names from every country.

The compactness of the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" compels a decided brevity of presentation, but this in itself is rather a virtue than a fault, and it has been a great source of gratification to be constantly informed by musicians, both lay and professional, that the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" is the book to which they refer first, and the one in which they are least often disappointed.

It is a book compiled for the convenience of the lover of music who seeks information on the simplest subjects, as well as for the trained musician who has more abstruse needs.

Now that it is possible to issue the work in one greatly enlarged tome at one dollar and a half, the "Music Lovers' Cyclopedia" can be confidently announced as a musical reference book of unapproached completeness, a concise musical library in itself, an invaluable addition to any musical collection, however large.

THE PUBLISHERS.

The Preface

MUSIC is, indeed, the universal language. It passes current everywhere like gold. But none the less every nation puts a different stamp on its coinage, and each new sovereign of the realm makes some change in the design and the legend. In consequence a musical dictionary becomes largely a polyglot affair.

The object of this book is to present in a condensed and convenient form all the essential facts that may be required to guide the student of music, or needed as a reference for the professional musician.

To fit this work for the non-professional mind has been no easy task, but it has been the chief effort, and an introduction into the mysteries has been written especially for the uninitiated, who wish to be told some necessary truths without submitting to hard study or teaching.

The marriage of completeness with conciseness is a hard knot to tie. The present work cannot hope to compete with the great musical encyclopædias in certain respects. Yet, in other respects, it outdoes even the greatest of them. It has more biographies and more definitions than any of them. Each of the large encyclopædias shows a distinct bias toward one nation, period, or idea. The Music Lovers' Cyclopedia has practically every name and definition in each of them; by its catholicity it covers many fields quite unnoticed by any one book, and it has many names and definitions to be found in none of them.

The pronunciation of practically every name and term in musical use, forms a unique feature of the Music Lovers' Cyclopedia. This alone makes it a desirable and important supplement to any musical library, however large. Not only have general rules of pronunciation for sixteen languages been tabulated in a novel and convenient manner, but the pronunciation of names, terms, and frequently of phrases has been represented as closely as possible. Even the "given names" have been pronounced, for it is of little comfort, for instance, to be saved from calling "Bāt'-hôf-ĕn," "Bee-tho'-ven," and to be left to miscall his first name "Lŭd-wĭg" for "Loot'-vĭkh."

The Definitions are given as plainly as is compatible with succinctness. Space has been greatly saved, not by sacrificing fulness of explanation, but rather by grouping together words of similar meaning in different languages, so far as this could be done without undue violence to alphabetical arrangement. So far as possible the Music Lovers' Cyclopedia avoids that exasperating abuse of cross-reference, by which some of the Dictionaries bandy the reader from one term to another in a wearisome zigzag, finally, at times, to send him to a word that has been omitted.

In the Biographies the scheme has been to crowd the multitude of minor personages into very narrow space in order that a hundred or more of the greatest should find liberal room. The major dead musicians and those still living, minor as well as major, have been chiefly favoured. The work is particularly rich in living musicians, and the great masters are given biographies which, although condensed, are quite complete. As to the rest, the mere list of dates, with an abbreviated indication of special activities, must suffice, compensation being found, it is hoped, in the great number of these names.

The Contributed Essays are in many respects the most valuable part of the work, written as they are by notable authorities who have reviewed certain subjects peculiarly their own, in a brief yet luminous manner especially for the layman. Nothing is a more valuable mental property than a somewhat definite and decisive summing-up of the actual meaning and the true proportions of the great personages, schools, and phases of a subject; such a summing-up is rare, largely because it is so difficult. As one contributor wrote: "It is very hard to compress these oxen into cups of beef-tea." That these prominent scholars have expressed themselves so definitely and with such rounded completeness on the subjects explained here, is a matter of greatest value in a work of this kind, and of greatest interest to every one that cares for music.

The Stories of the Operas are told here in the only way in which, surely, they should be told; and that is by telling the story as it is unfolded on the stage, not by acts and by scenes only, but by the entrances and exits and by the principal songs. The pronunciations of the names of the operas in different languages, and of the characters, have also been given, as well as the dates and casts of the first productions.

A few Charts of actual value have been preferred to the mere ornaments of portraits. These latter would have to be very numerous to be at all comprehensive, and their introduction would defeat the prime purpose of the book, which is to be informing within limited compass.

In fact, the one idea of the work has been to present as much information as possible, as conveniently as possible — andante quasi allegretto.

That mistakes occur is inevitable. Every dictionary the Editor has examined has abounded in them, ranging from what scientists call the personal equation to what they call downright blunders. It is only to be hoped that most of the errors of this book will be rather amusing than exasperating or misleading. In any case, corrections and suggestions of any kind for future editions will be most gratefully welcomed.

The code of pronunciation as used in the book is explained on the top line of the Table of Pronunciations. It cannot hope to give more than approximate shades of sound.

The Editor is indebted to Miss Annie C. Muirhead for many valuable suggestions and a large contribution to the accuracy of the work. The stories of the three operas, "Louise," "La Bohême," and "The Cid," are from her pen. For everything else not specially signed or credited, the Editor must be held responsible. He wishes here to make grateful acknowledgment to his publishers, who first suggested the idea of preparing such a work, and to the distinguished gentlemen who have lent to the Music Lovers' Cyclopedia the prestige and value of their contributions.

An

Introduction

to Music

For the Uninitiated

A Free Translation of its Technicalities into Untechnical Language (especially for those who do not Read Music and do not Care to Study it).

THERE is almost as much humbug about the mysteries of music as there was about the oracles of Delphi. And the vast majority of music-lovers have as meek and uninquiring a dread of the inner art and science of composition as the old pagans had of priestcraft.

There is no deeper mystery about the tools and the trade of music than about those of any other carpentry and joinery. It is far easier for some people to write a melody than to drive a nail straight. But anybody who will earnestly try, can learn to do the one as easily as the other. And there are thousands of professional composers who ought to be earning honest livings driving nails home instead of starving to death dishonestly driving audiences home.

The one mystery of music is the one mystery of all art and all other human intercourse—personality. Everybody can write a novel or a play. Almost everybody does. So everyone can write a sonata or a string-quartet. But the number of those who possess the spark (divine, prenatal, accidental or howsoever secured)—the spark of magnetism, felicity, and eloquence, that number is small and is no more superabundant than on the day when little Hermes found the old tortoise-shell and made the first harp out of it.

The reason the Editor is desirous of taking the veil from certain of the arcana of music is not that he wishes to increase the number of composers—Heaven forbid! The one object is to increase the number of those who will listen to music intelligently and know just what they are hearing, and pretty well why they like this and dislike that. For like and dislike by pure instinct are relics of mere animalism.

The open highway to the enjoyment of so-called classic music is the hearing of it in large quantities. There is a short cut for those who lack the time or the inclination for this long training—and it is by way of learning the elements of musical form. For it is the crystallisation of human passion into some graceful and powerful form that gives music long life. Many wretched pedants think that the number of forms is limited; but this is a fallacy that is disproved every day.

Some form, however, is as necessary in music as in sculpture. And though the number and variety of forms available are as infinite and illimitable in music as in sculpture, still some definite shape must be in the artist's mind and must be discoverable by an unprejudiced, attentive, and educated audience.

If you do not already know the skeleton that underlies the shapely contours and full, fair flesh of melody and harmony, you can find some enlightenment in the anatomical lecture that follows, provided you will use your own scalpel, and carry out the suggestions made. It is not easy to avoid asking the reader to master the language and symbols of music, but much that is important can be learned from the following, without this long special study, if an occasional general truth will be allowed to stand without stating its exceptions, and if permission be granted to arrive at certain facts in a homely and button-hole manner.

I

FIRST, turn to a piano or organ—either of these is more convenient for illustration than a bow or wind-instrument. The highly-organized instrument before you is the result of centuries of blind groping in the dark, of unnumbered great failures for every little triumph. This is true not only of the mechanism of strings, hammers, keys, shape, size and materials of wood and metal, but of the very music the instrument is intended to send out upon the air.

If you will simply glide your finger-nail along the white keys you will produce a scale which in itself is the result not only of ages of experiment but of the bitterest conflict between scholarly musicians,—a conflict still raging. But this cannot be discussed here. Let us for the present take the instrument as we find it.

On the opposite page will be found a picture of the middle portion of the key-board, with the letter-names that have been, for convenience' sake, given to the tones marked on it. They are easily recognisable by the alternation of the black keys in groups of twos and threes. For convenience it might be well to transfer the letter-names to the white keys with ink, which will be easily washed off with a wet cloth.

The first thing noteworthy about the diagram is that this series of letter-names is made of only seven letters and begins over again at every eighth tone. This is because the eighth tone (or octave) is produced by a string or a column of air making just twice as many vibrations as the original tone; the 15th tone by 4 times as many, etc., and because each group of seven steps plus the octave or 8th step, is built on a uniform model of ratios. The series from one letter-name to its reappearance, as from c to c′, is subdivided into 12 half-steps or semitones.

This extended series of tones thus divided into octaves is the material from which all European and American music is made. Save for a few changes and choices made for convenience, this scale is based on human nature and physical law, and is not likely to be materially altered in our generation. Other fundamental facts will be discovered on studying this array of whole-steps (white keys—except e to f and b to c) and half-steps (from a black key to the next white—also from b to c and e to f).

You will observe that the black keys carry the same names as the white keys they interpose between, except that the letter-name carries the symbol ♯ ("sharp") for the key next below or the symbol ♭ ("flat") for the key next above. The same black key represents two white keys. If you are advancing from f to g, for instance, the black key between is a half-step above f; it is said to "sharpen" the note, by a half-step (or a "chromatic" degree); if, however, you are moving down the scale from g to f the black key is said to "flatten" the note g by a half-step (or a "chromatic" degree). The same black key serves conveniently then both as f♯ (f "sharp") and g♭ (g "flat") in our system of music. Tones not thus "chromatically altered" by a sharp or flat are said to be "natural." If you have struck g♭ or f♯ and wish to reassert the white key, the tone is now called g♮ (g "natural") or f natural.

The signs, ♯'s, ♭'s and ♮'s are called "sharps, flats and naturals," or in general "chromatics."

Put your finger at random on any of the white keys and move downwards on the white keys in strict succession. You will find (if you have a normal ear) that, whatever the tone you sounded first, you do not feel a willingness to stop till you reach a certain tone or one of its octaves. That tone will invariably be one of the notes lettered C.

If now you begin at random on any note and move upward keeping to the white keys except in the case of f, for which you substitute f♯, you will find that the letter c no longer gives a sense of repose, but that you unconsciously desire and demand one of the letters marked g.

If you run a scale on all the white keys except b, and substitute for this note the b♭, you will find no resting-place except upon one of the letters marked f.

It is a physical fact, then, that a scale with neither sharps nor flats finds its end on the note c; a scale with one sharp (which is always f) is based on the note g; a scale with one flat (b flat) is based on the note f. Hence one speaks of the scale of C, or of G, or of F.

If you try the substitution of some other single sharp or flat for the f sharp or b flat, you will get no satisfactory point of repose at all. But by keeping b flat and adding e flat you will find b flat a comfortable pausing-place; by adding a flat to the b♭ and e♭, you will find a pleasant scale ending on e♭. By adding flats in the following order (and only in the following order), b, e, a, d, g, c, you will construct symmetrical scales reposing always on the next to the last flat added.

By substituting sharps for the natural tones of the original scale of C, you build scales satisfactorily only by heaping up sharps in the following order, f, c, g, d, a, e, which scales are based respectively on the notes g, d, a, e, b, f, the point of repose being in each case a half-tone above the last sharp added.

The scales take their names from the note of repose. A scale together with all the chords that can be built upon its notes is called a key. The word "key" is often loosely used (and has been used in this essay thus far) to indicate a finger-lever which causes a string to sound; this is better called a "digital." From now on the word "key" will be used only to designate a group of harmonies and a scale belonging to some series of progressions ending on a certain note, as the "key of C," the "key of G" (which contains f sharp), the "key of D" (which contains f sharp and c sharp), the "key of E flat" (which contains b flat, e flat and a flat), and the others.

Since practically every musical composition has some principal key to which it harks back as its home, however far or often it may wander away, so you will find at the beginning of every new line of a composition a list of the sharps or flats in that key which predominates, and these sharps or flats affect every tone not otherwise marked throughout the composition. This group is called the key-signature.

A convenient trick of deciding the key from the number of sharps or flats is as follows: where there are flats the key is next to the last flat; where there are sharps the key is always the next letter-name above the last sharp. This is true of every key except three which are easily remembered, F with one flat, G with one sharp, C with neither flats nor sharps.

Before studying chords, it will be necessary to have another look at the diagram of the key-board. We have spoken of half-steps and whole steps. But it is possible also (and often desirable) to desert the monotonous progression of whole and half-steps and skip several steps, as one does in singing a tune. The space covered by a skip is called an interval. As geography has its imaginary equator, and as geometry has its imaginary lines without breadth and its planes without depth, so music has one imaginary interval which is no interval at all, but identity. The distance from a note to the very same note is called a prime. (This is sometimes useful when speaking, for instance, of a♭ and a♯, which are a prime apart, and are called primes of each other.) The interval from one white digital to the next white digital is called a second, the skip to the next but one is called a third (the original note being always numbered one), the skip to the third white digital is called a fourth, and so on; the interval of an eighth being called an octave. Also the tones separated by an interval may be called by the names of the interval as c and g, or d and a are called fifths; f and d, or g and e are called sixths, etc.

It will greatly clear the belt of fog we are now going through if you will pick out the examples on the key-board.

The skip from a white to a black digital results in an interval which is either greater or less than the nearest interval on the white digitals alone. The normal or greater of two similarly named intervals as c to e is called a major third, while c to e♭ is called a lesser or minor third. C to e♯ is greater even than the major and is called an augmented third, while c to e♭♭ ("double flat") is a diminished third.

Owing to the elasticity of the letter-names of the notes, an interval may be expressed or spelled in different ways, thus c to e♭ is called a minor third, but the very same tones may be called c to d♯, an augmented second, c–f♭♭ a diminished fourth, b♯–d♯ a major third, etc. The name of the interval depends upon the key we happen to have most in mind at the time.

It is a curious fact that all scales are made up of exactly the same intervals in exactly the same order. Try over any of the scales you wish, and you will find that you move upward by the following degrees, in the following order: (1) a whole step, (2) a whole step, (3) a half-step, (4) a whole step, (5) a whole step, (6) a whole step, (7) a half-step; this last bringing you to the octave of the note you started from.

As earnestly as the soul demands that in the last act of a play we shall see the villain sent to prison and the hero and heroine locked in each other's arms, so our nature demands this arrangement of tones, and when it says half-step or whole step we must move so, or leave the key we started in and take up another.

This explains why there is no black digital between the notes, b – c, and e – f: the scale of C, which has no sharps or flats, must still have its two half-steps at these points; there is accordingly no sharp or flat to be put there.

II

WE have now had a bird's-eye view of the natural arrangement of tones, one at a time. But we grow tired of one note at a time. Four men singing along a midnight street or a picnic group riding home in a moonstruck mood fall to singing favourite melodies and naturally avoid singing in unison. They spontaneously sing in chords. These chords are formed individually and succeed one another according to certain fundamental demands of the ear just as noticeably as the tones of the scale followed a rigid pattern.

First, let us combine various tones. Take the middle c′ and strike this tone with the right thumb while another finger strikes another tone above. c′ and c′♯ do not sound well together, nor yet c′ and d′; c′ and d′♯ (or e′♭) is not unpleasant, but rather sombre (it is indeed a minor harmony, the interval c′–e′♭ being a minor third); c′ and e′ make a pure, sweet concord, however. Let us keep c′ and e′ and see if we can add another tone, c′ + e′ + f′, is very bad; c′ + e′ + f′♯ is also rough; c′ + e′ + g′ is very comfortable. We have now a three-tone chord, which we may call a triad; it happens to be based on the 1st, 3d and 5th degrees of the scale.

Let us see if we can build triads on other tones of the C scale. We find by trying all the combinations on the note d′, that while the triad d′–f′–a′ is pleasant but sombre

(it is minor), the only clear harmony is d′–f′♯–a′; but as f♯ does not belong to the scale of C, we cannot include it. On the note e′ we find e′–g′–b′, minor, and e′–g′♯–b′ pleasant; this again is outlawed by the g♯. On f′, however, we can form a triad f′–a′–c′, which has no foreign chromatics and is yet satisfying. On g′ we find another triad, g′–b′–d″, which is native to the C scale and which impels us strongly to substitute the e″ above for the d″, and c″ for the b′; when we have done this we find we have the chord c′–e′–g′ again, only now arranged differently, as g′–c″–e″.

If we rearrange the chord on g′ differently, as b′–d″–g″, we shall be impelled to move on to c″–e″–g″, which is again our old friend the original triad on c′ in its original form.

This hankering after the original triad on the key-note whenever we form a triad on the fifth tone of the scale, is one of the most noteworthy and inescapable factors of the chord-world.

But let us proceed with our triads; on a′ we find a′–c″–e″ to be minor; the major chord b′–d♯″–f♯″ is doubly ruled out; while b′–d″–f″ is doubly minor, the fifth (b′–f″) being imperfect and the third (b′–d″) being minor.

It may be well to state here a handy way of telling the majority or minority of intervals; imagine the lower note to be the key-note; if the upper note would occur in a major scale on that key-note its interval is major or diatonic. Thus on b: the key of B has 5 sharps, f, c, g, d, and a; both d and f are sharp, therefore b–d♮–f♮ has neither interval major.

Looking back over the chords of the scale of C, we find the only major triads to be those on c′, f′ and g′. Since that on g′ is so urgent in demanding the main triad on C, it is called the dominant triad, and the tone g is called the dominant of the scale of C. f′ being beneath it is called subdominant, and its chord the subdominant chord; the note c being the foundation note of the whole scale and key is called the tonic (tonus being an old name for scale).

The principal chord-material of any scale is, then, made up of the triads on the tonic (or 1st), the dominant (or 5th) and the subdominant (or 4th).

Try another Key, F for instance, which has b♭. After testing all the combinations on the key-note or tonic f′ we find only f′–a″–c″; on g′ the triad, to be in the key, must be g′–b′♭–d″ (since b♭ is a characteristic of the key of F), and this is a minor chord; a′–c″–e″ is also minor, but b′♭–d″–f″ is a major triad; it is indeed a chord on the subdominant. We should expect also to find a major triad on the dominant (which, in the key of F, is the tone c), and so we find c″–e″–g″, which we recognise as the tonic chord of the scale of C. But strange to say it offers no repose in its new environment with the other chords of the key of F; on the contrary, we have an irresistible desire to move on from it to c″–f″–a″ (the same as the key-chord or tonic chord, f′–a′–c″, where we feel at home). The two remaining tones of the scale of F offer no satisfactory chords.

Let us try a key with one sharp in it, that is to say, the key of G. Beginning on g′ we find after groping about that the only chord endurable is g′–b′–d″. Building triads on all the other tones, a, b, c, d, e and f♯, we find all of them outlawed as unpleasant or at least minor, except two, which again, are on the subdominant and the dominant tones of the key of G, and are c″–e″–g″, and d″–f″♯–a″.

Taking the sum-total of the chords of these three keys, c, f, and g, we have the following chords: (C) c–e–g, f–a–c, g–b–d; (F) f–a–c, b♭–d–f, c–e–g; (G) g–b–d, c–e–g, d–f♯–a. You will see that each of the two subordinate keys has two of the chords of the key of C. This will be found the case with any group of three keys similarly differing only by one sharp or flat, that is to say, having their tonics a fifth above or below. On this account the keys based on the dominant and subdominant tones of the scale of any given key are said to be closely related in the first degree of relationship.

Add another flat and another sharp, that is, take the key of B♭ and the key of D, and we find the following principal chords: (B♭) b♭ –d–f, e♭ –g–b♭ and f–a–c; (D) d–f♯–a, g–b–d, a–c♯–e. Each of these keys has only one of the chords belonging to the key of C. These keys are then related, but only in the second degree

If we add three flats or three sharps and study the keys of E♭ and A we find the chords (E♭) e♭–g–b♭, a♭ c–e♭, b♭–d–f; (A) a–c♯–e, d–f♯–a, e–g♯ b♭. None of these chords occur in C, and these keys are said to be remote from it. On the other hand comparing E♭ with the key which had only 2 flats (B♭), we find that E♭ has two chords belonging to B♭. We also find that A has two of the chords belonging to the key with one sharp less, viz., D. We may generalise, then, by saying that the most closely related keys are those that differ by one flat or one sharp; the next nearest relations are those differing by two flats or sharps.

III

WHILE we are on the subject of heredity take another point of view of this family-tree:

The tone f′, which is four steps above c′, is called its subdominant; on looking below the note c, we find another f, but where it was four tones above, it is five tones below. The Key of F has added one flat to the key of C. Counting five more whole steps down (always counting the note you began on as first) we find the note B♭. The scale on that tone has yet another flat, two more than C. The tone a full fifth below (E♭) has three flats. So we find that moving downward by fifths we add one flat every step. A♭ has 4, D♭ has 5, and G♭ has 6 flats.

Now counting upwards from our starting point on c′, we find that the key based on the fifth (g′) adds one sharp; a fifth above G is D, a key with two sharps; a fifth above is A with three sharps, a fifth further is E with four sharps, and, as we continue, B with five sharps and F♯ with six sharps.

But the key of F♯ on our piano or organ passes over the very same digitals as the key of G♯, is identical with it in fact. We have therefore been personally conducted through the grand tour of keys by way of the circle of fifths, twelve in all.

We see therefore that all keys are related, and by careful procedure in chords a player can move through them all in succession with the greatest smoothness. The more modern the composition the more widely does it rove from key to key until in some works, Wagner's for instance, it is sometimes hard to say just what key we are driving at. Instead of keeping to the iron rails of one key as earlier music aimed to do, and only leaving the main line at certain definite set switches, the art has recently left the hard and fast railroad and taken to the pathless waters where, to use Wagner's words, it "swims in a sea of tone."

Some very formal minds grow speedily sea-sick and prefer the rigid grooves of the older school. Each one to his tastes. But the broadest mind will find pleasure both in land-travel and sea-change, insisting only that the composer shall have a plan and know what he is about, and not send his locomotives slashing and sinking in the buxom waves, nor drag his yacht gratingly along the hard ground. Live and let live is the best art motto.

One more point is worth noting in this increasingly important subject of key-relationships. Reverting for a moment to the key of C with its first cousins f and g, we find if we take the tonic triads of the three keys and arrange them as follows:

These tones include the complete scale of C. So it will be found of every key-scale that it contains within itself the tonic triads of itself, of its subdominant and its dominant keys.

This scale and key principle is further justified by a study of the mathematics and physics of music. And the Relationship of Keys is given a still greater importance in the more recent writers on the theory of music, especially in Riemann's beautiful theory of clang-keys (see this word in the Dictionary of Definitions).

IV

NOW that we have laboriously picked out our triads, they will be found more elastic than they look. Take the triad c′–e′–g′, the tonic triad of the key of C, which is now said to be in the root or first position, c′ being the root or generator of the triad. We can place the C′ uppermost and have e′–g′–c″, which is in effect the same chord, though a chord is said to be inverted when any note except its root is in the bass. The second inversion places the fifth in the bass, as g′–c″–e″ or g–c′–e′–g′ or g–e′–g′–c″. These 3 positions are all we have for a 3-tone chord or triad. They can be sounded anywhere on the key-board, however.

Still another possibility is to repeat some of these letter-names, as to sound the triad c′-e′-g′ with the right hand and touch the tone c an octave below with the left hand; or the tones c–g with the left hand and e′–g′–c″ with the right. This process called doubling may be carried on indefinitely. In a piano-duet, sometimes twenty notes or more are struck, all of them repetitions of the inner kernel or triad of three notes.

Strike the left hand note c first, then the right hand triad c′–e–′g′ twice; then strike the note f with the left hand and the subdominant triad c′–f′–a′ twice, now c and the tonic triad again; then strike g with the left hand and the dominant triad b–d′–g′ twice; and return finally to C and the tonic triad. This little plot in three instalments constitutes the whole harmonic accompaniment of many a modern popular song and many an old work of classic reputation.

You can usually tell the key of a song by humming it and picking out on the piano or organ its very last note; nine times in ten this will be the tonic or homenote of the composition. Suppose this to be B♭. How shall one find chords to accompany it? Build a major triad on b′♭; it will be b′♭–d′–f′; build a triad on the dominant or fifth (f), f′–a′–c″; build another on the subdominant or fourth (e♭), e′♭ –g′–b′♭. Play these three notes (B♭, f, e♭) with the left hand, and use triads with the right, rearranging the three notes in any of the inversions as they run most smoothly into one another. Your ear will help you find the right order of the chords. This will serve as a recipe for easy accompaniments.

More elaborate songs rove through so many keys with so little warning that only trained ears and hands can pick out their accompaniment; but it will clear up a deal of the construction of music if you will take some simple tune and study out its accompaniment on these lines, however painful the operation may be to yourself and your neighbors.

(Familiar songs requiring only these three chords are "The Star Spangled Banner," "God Save the Queen," "Home Sweet Home," "Suwanee River," "Dixie," etc., and most of the hymn-tunes.)

BUT the simple triads grow monotonous, and it is desirable, if possible, to enrich them. Take the all important dominant triad of the key of C (namely, g′–b′–d″) and see if we can lay another third on top of it like a musical brick. The next major third above d″ is f″♯. But f♯ does not belong to the key of C. The minor third f″♮ does beautifully, however, and we have a warm rich chord which more than ever goads us on to the tonic triad; the g′ holding over, the b′ and the d″ both merging into c″, and the f″ subsiding blissfully into e″.

A chord of 4 tones is called a chord of the seventh or seventh chord, because the interval between the first and last tones is a seventh (g′–f″). This chord, g′–b′–d″–f″, is a dominant 7th, then. If we wish, we can add another third, a″, and make a chord g–b–d–f–a, called a ninth chord. The dominant 7th, however, is far the more useful. In fact it is the most energetic chord in all music, and whatever key you may be in, if you stray into the dominant seventh of a foreign key, it drags you along eagerly and hales you into that foreign key to which it belongs and for which it is a most eager usher.

This seventh chord, pleasant as it is, is only a go-between, it offers no point of repose, but requires an almost immediate dissolution into another chord. The musical term for one of these restless chords is dissonance; the musical term for the necessity and process of merging it into another is called resolution. The word dissonant does not necessarily mean "ugly" or "harsh" in music, but merely implies lack of stability.

This dominant 7th chord has magical powers for transition. Take the tonic triad of the key of C major in the second inversion, that is, touch g with the left hand and e′–g′–c″ with the right. Now lift the finger off the upper g′ and place it on b′♭. Instantly you find it undesirable to go back to the c′–e′–g′ triad and you are impelled to lower that b′♭ to a′, bring the e′ up to f′, keep the c″ where it is and lower the g in the left hand to f. Now you feel at rest; if you will pause and look, you will find that the b′♭, which is characteristic of the key of F, has led you into the triad f′–a′–c″, which is the tonic triad of the key of F. If you revert to the state of affairs existing when that foreigner b′♭ entered the peaceful key of C, you will find that the chord formed by its entrance could be arranged to read c′–e′–g′–b′♭. This is a 7th chord on the tone c. But while the tone c′ is tonic of the key of C, it is the fifth or dominant of the key of F. Yet, though this 7th chord was built on the tonic of C, as it happened to be the dominant of F, it forced the key over into the tonality of F. This is the case with every dominant 7th chord.

It is possible by a slight diversion to throw the resolution of the chord into other keys, but this always comes as a surprise to the hearer. It may be justified and it may be pleasurable, but it is a surprise, and in a sense abnormal.

Going back to the first formation of the 7th chord, it will be found that the 7th chord, on other tones than the dominant, are rather murky or even distressing. These are called secondary 7ths and must be handled in gingerly manner.

VI

NOW if we take our dominant 7th of the key of C, that is, g′–b′–d″–f″, and raise the g′ a half-step so that the chord reads g′♯ b′–d″–f″, it will most naturally resolve itself into this chord, a′–c″–e″, a sombre chord which is minor because its third from a–c is minor (the major third being a–c♯, as c♯ would be characteristic of the key of A). This chord, a′–c″–e″, has the look of a chord in the key of C, but it seems to offer a sense of dejected repose and makes no demand for progress to the tonic chord, c′–e′–g′. We arrived at this chord by way of a curious chord with f♮ but g♯. The chord g′–b′–d″–f″ had been a minor 7th (the interval from g′ to f″ being less than the major interval, which would be g′ to f′♯), but this chord, g′♯–b′–d″–f″, is even narrower than minor. It is hence called a diminished 7th chord.

We have been led to believe that the first sharp of a major key was f, and that c followed, then g. This is true of a major key, but here we are under a different flag. You can construct a scale out of these two chords, the diminished 7th and its resolution, and g♯–b–d–f; a–c–e gives us a–b–c–d–e–f–g♯–a as an octave scale. This scale, which is closely related to the C major scale, is founded on a′, which is a minor third below c″. So it will be found that every major key has one of these disappointed relative keys a minor third below and differing from it, for harmonic purposes, only in the fact that the 7th tone of this minor scale is raised a half-step above the tone of the same name in the major scale (in the scale of A minor, the 7th tone, g♯, is the only tone foreign to the scale of C major, and it is a half-tone higher than the tone g; the key of C minor corresponds exactly with the major key a minor third above, that is E♭, except that where b is flattened in the key of E♭ major, it is made natural in the scale of C minor). This is the case with every major and minor key; the related minor key is a minor third below and raises the 7th tone of its major scale a half-step (as g to g♯; e♭ to e♮). Thus far we have concerned ourselves only with major scales, keys and intervals. But life would be very monotonous if it were all sunshine, blue sky and laughter. Music could not represent or stimulate human emotion, as it does, without a large armoury of sombre colours, bitter dissonances and, in place of a sense of cheerful repose, a feeling of resigned despair. These purposes are subserved by the minor key.

In looking at scales and intervals we find that certain of the intervals were to be distinguished as "greater" and "lesser." The Latin words meaning greater and lesser are major and minor. (And as the mediæval Latinity of the Catholic Church was the fountain-head of modern music, many of its terms persist.) On the major scale there were indeed four minor triads to only three major. There is abundance of minor material then in music. Its arrangement into scales and keys cannot be so easily explained as that of the major mode; indeed upon this subject scientists are mutually discordant and commonly as "troubled" (betrübt) as the great musical scientist Helmholtz found the minor scale itself.

Where doctors disagree, the layman would do best to pass by on the other side. Let us take the minor keys as we find them and thank Heaven for their existence as mirrors to the chillier, grayer moods of the mind. Music has indeed laid up something for a rainy day.

To go any further into the construction of chords would be to write a text-book on Harmony.

Those who wish to pursue the subject of chord construction and progression will find further information in such articles as Chord, Harmony, Thorough-bass, Parallel, Covered, Anticipation, Suspension, Interval, Altered, etc., in the Dictionary of Definitions.

GIVEN the scales for melody and the chords for harmony, with an unlimited variety of progressions, the subject of rhythm enters. There was a time when the music of the scholars was all in notes of equal length; such music was well called plain-song (planus meaning literally "smooth"). But popular instinct and popular music still had drum-rhythms and dances and finally forced the music of the scholars to return to humanity; and so-called mensurable (i. e., measurable) music began.

The definition of rhythm is so native and instinctive in everyone that it would be impertinence to foist it on the reader. It is to be noted, however, that in music it depends on the relative accent and duration of notes following a pattern more or less closely. The rhythm of a composition can be expressed by thumping it on a table with your fingers, for rhythm is independent of height or lowness of the tone and the volume of sound. Strum out in this way such tunes as "Comin' Thro' the Rye," "Yankee Doodle," "We Won't Go Home Until Morning," or the like, or airs of more dignity. If you mark the accents forcefully, the regularity of the rhythmical pattern becomes evident, and almost as monotonous as certain styles of wall-paper. If you tap with the left hand a regular beat like a clock's, only faster, the rhythm of the air will assume new vividness.

Take "Comin' Thro' the Rye" for example, the rhythm could be expressed by underlining with the right hand a series of numbers to be ticked off by the left hand :

If a bod-y meet a bod - y com - in' thro' the rye——— 1–2, 3, 4–5, 6, 7–8, 9, 10–11, 12, 13–14, 15, 16–17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24,

If a bod-y kiss a bod-y , need a bod-y cry——— 25–26, 27, 28–29, 30, 31–32, 33, 34–35, 36, 37–38, 39, 40–41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48

This covers two lines of the song, the rest of which follows the same model. We find 48 beats in the two lines of verse, 24 to each line. The rhythm is almost exactly stencilled all the way through ; it begins over again, after every sixth count, each 7th count having a marked accent, the 4th of each group of 6 having a lighter accent. If, since the rhythm is the same, we simply repeat the first 6 numerals and cut off with a line every group of 6, we shall have the song pictured in as simple a pattern as that of the maid's own print gown.

Call each of these groups a measure, the slanted line a bar, take a certain time or note-value as the unit in place of these numbers and you will have the musical terminology. As the notes are short the quick eighth note (one-eighth of a whole note) may be taken as the unit ; there are 6 of these in each measure, and the time of the song is said to be six-eighths or 6–8 time. This is a combination of triple and duple rhythm, for, while each measure contains 6 counts, these counts are divided into two groups of three each and there are two accents to each measure, consequently 6–8 time is sometimes used for marches.

But the typical march time for marches (as well as for many other moods, as "Auld lang syne," etc.) is, as you will find, divisible into measures of 4 counts each, with two accents to each measure. As the whole note is taken as the whole extent of each measure, the presence of four beats to the measure gives each beat a fourth or quarter-note value. It is therefore called 4–4 time, or simply common-time. Very quick marches are sometimes written in 2–4 time with one beat to the measure. Waltzes are written with 3 beats and only one accent to the measure. This time is called 3–4 time. Other rhythms are 3–2, a slow time (with 3 half-notes and 3 accents to the measure); 3–8 time (a light quick time with 3 eighth notes and one accent to the measure); 6–4 time (a slower form of 6–8 measure, differing from 3–2 only in having two accents to the measure); 9–8 (with 9 eighth notes and 3 accents), &c. (v. article on Time).

VIII

NO way of submitting music to the all-devouring decimal system has yet been brought into play. The measure-notes are all multiples of 2 and 4; whole notes, half, quarter, 8th, 16th, 32d, and 64th notes.

The larger divisions of music also fail to follow the decimal system. In the analysis of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" the measures themselves can be collected into groups of 2, 4 and 8. There is a slight pause after every other measure, a perceptible pause at the end of the 4th measure, a longer pause at the end of the 8th. The next group of 8 measures is likewise divisible into groups of 2 and 4.

This quality of divisibility into 4 and 8 measures is a fundamental law of musical structure. Because it is such a law many composers strive to hide its nakedness or re-shape it to special purposes, but these are exceptions which by their very sense of novelty and oddity prove and emphasise the general rule.

A group of eight measures is called a period; this period contains two phrases of four measures each; each phrase contains two sections, of 2 measures; and each section is generally divisible into its melodic or rhythmic motive or subject. The song "Comin' Thro' the Rye" is especially clean-cut in its divisions. They correspond in spirit to the comma, semicolon, colon and period of ordinary prose, but occur with far more regularity. Frequently the periods themselves can be collected into larger groups or compound periods corresponding to paragraphs. The first accent of a measure has a stronger accent than the second or third. So the first accent of the first measure of a period should receive a greater stress than the first accent of the first measure of a phrase, and so on. In the proper distribution of accents lies the larger part of musical punctuation, or, as it is called, phrasing.

IX

IN the first group of 8 measures of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" there is a general upward tendency to the melody. The second period begins on a high note (at the words "Ilka body") and has a downward tendency. This desire for a contrast is at the root of all musical form. This song is condensed even beyond the usual popular form, partly because of the stanza-form of its poetry. "The Last Rose of Summer" fulfils the typical song-form which contains a theme of one or more periods, followed by a contrasting or subsidiary theme of one or more periods, the song concluding with a repetition of the first or principal theme. Practically the same idea governs the typical dance-form though the themes are likely to be more elaborate and the second theme is still stupidly called a trio (from the fact that it was actually in old times given to a trio of instruments in order to contrast its simple song-like manner with the more ornate and broken progress of the principal theme).

It would naturally occur to composers seeking variety, to put this subsidiary theme into a different key, to emphasise the contrast. The key naturally chosen would be a closely related key. This is usually the case, and the contrast of keys is a most important part of classic forms.

The elaboration or variation of the themes in a way to show off the composer's scholarship and cleverness, was also as inevitable as human pride in skill.

The word variations has, in the general mind, a thought of "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Nearer my God to Thee" "with variations." "Variations" is an incorrect word here; the proper term for these cheap and gaudy works being embellishments, for the air is simply made a trellis for all manner of running vines and frippery.

The true variation of a theme is its genuine manipulation. Take the first 2 measures of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" as a theme; i.e., the notes to the words "Gin a body meet a body," sit down again before the piano and play this theme, picking out the notes as indicated from their letter-names as shown in the Chart.

Suppose the notes to be placed—

/c′, c′, c′, e′/, d′, c′, d′, e′/g g a g/c′.

If with the right hand you play the theme as indicated, and shortly after follow in with the left hand (as you would follow the leading voice in singing such a round as "Three Blind Mice"), you will use the frequent device called for evident reasons imitation, as here:

Right hand/c′ c′ c′ e′/d′ c′ d′ e′/g g a g/c′ - - -/&c.
Left hand /- - - - -/----------/c c c e/d c d e/&c.

This is imitation at the octave and at two measures' distance; imitation may be at a different interval and distance, at the fifth, for instance:

Imitation need not be so strict as this; it may be free, the intervals being slightly changed to enrich the harmony, for it is not every air that can be treated smoothly and strictly at the same time. Here, for instance, the a in the left hand might be reduced to a g. Imitation in the orchestra has vast scope. The trombones may proclaim a splendid phrase which the oboes will cackle over ludicrously, the flutes whistle gaily, the clarinets echo gurgingly, the 'cellos bemoan nasally, and the violins murmur deliciously.

But in piano or organ composition, imitation is more restricted. Sometimes a composer in mathematical mood will set an elaborate air jogging, and when it has gone a few spaces along, will start after it its very double. The two will race like twin snakes.

When the imitation is exact, whole step by whole step, skip by skip, whole note by whole note, and half-note by half-note, the composition is said to be a canon. The canon may set more than two snakes wriggling swiftly along at always the same distance from head to head. Fugue is only a special form of composition in which the canon plays a large part, the word "fuga" meaning "flight."

THE devices for varying a theme are infinite. It can be played in longer notes while another theme chosen from another part of the song ripples about it; or the duration of the notes can be shortened. The new treatment of a theme by lengthening its notes is called augmentation; the shortening of the notes is diminution.

The upper of two themes can be made the lower at different intervals than the octave; this is called inversion. Another form of inversion is the turning of a theme upside down, so that whenever it went up before, it goes down now, and vice versa; this is imitation by contrary motion.

A theme can be picked to pieces and different fragments of it tossed to and fro with the skill of a juggler (and about as much importance). The first 4 notes of "Comin' Thro' the Rye" could be taken as a figure and repeated. Thus:

c′ c′ c′ e′, e′ e′ e′ g′♯, g′♯ g′♯ g′♯ b′, etc.

This would be called a sequence. The themes could be played in octaves, or in varied and key-changing chords as:

If a bod -y
e♭-g-c¹, f-a♭-c¹, g-b♭-c¹, g-b♭-e¹

It could be ornamented as:

c′, c′, d′, c′, b′, c′, d′, c′, e′, e′, e′, e′.

In fact, there is no hinting here the dissection and reconstruction of which a theme is capable. As opposed to a melodious or lyric treatment, this method is called thematic. Common names for this sort of treatment are "development, elaboration, variation, working-out, free fantasy," &c., &c., the Germans calling it Durchführung, "going through."

XI

THE highest and noblest form of strictly academic and formal composition is the sonata, for the symphony is only a sonata for orchestra. We have now arrived hastily at a point where a rough explanation of this form is possible.

This is the way you should set about writing a sonata, or rather, one of the ways, for the sonata is elastic and has some room for individual tastes.

First you select a melody, one with an elocutionary and sententious manner, and containing many good texts to develop. You write it out plainly and emphatically in the key that suits it best. As a sidelight and a foil you select some more lyrical and song-like air, and for contrast you put it in another key, naturally one of the related keys, most naturally the nearest related key, or the dominant. Or you might put the second melody in the relative minor. Having stated your two subjects, you may choose to repeat them word for word, or note for note, so that there shall be no mistaking them; you may then add a concluding reflection more or less elaborate. This is the first section of the sonata.

Having stated the two texts, the principal and the subsidiary, you now propose to show their true profoundness, and your own true skill as an orator. You employ the devices of elaboration mentioned above, and you play battledore and shuttlecock with the two themes in all the keys you wish till they fly to pieces; then you juggle the pieces; you modulate from grave to gay; from cold to tropical, from whisper to shriek, from insinuation to fervid appeal, from metaphor to homely paraphrase; in fact, you invoke every art and artifice you can borrow from the schools or can find in the promptings of your own emotions. When you have exhausted all the devices propriety or your knowledge permits, you have finished the second section of the sonata, the so-called Working-out, or Development, or Free Fantasy, or Elaboration.

The third section consists of a re-statement of the first theme in the original or tonic key, followed by the second theme, not in its related key, but now in the same key as the first theme, in order that a definite key may be left in the mind to give an effect of unity. A short peroration or coda ends the sermon like a welcome benediction.

This is what is strictly called the sonata form. It is reasonable and based on a natural and artistic arrangement of ideas and their development.

The sonata is not complete in this one composition, or movement as it is called. Three or usually four contrasted movements are strung together. They usually have some faint suggestion of similarity of theme, but variety of mood and key is the chief endeavor. A slow movement (called from its slowness by one of the Italian words meaning "slow"—Andante, lento, largo), marked by deep pathos or tragedy, usually follows the passionate outburst. Then comes a lighter mood in one or two movements in the form of (a) an optimistic and prettily braided Rondo with one chief theme and two attendant themes; (b) a gallant Minuet; or (c) a witty and jocose scherzo.

The sonata ends with a Finale of stormy and brilliant character generally built on the same scheme as the first movement and written in the same key.

The whole group of three or four movements makes up a sonata. The first movement of the sonata is often also called the "sonata-form."

An overture (excepting one that is a medley of airs) is merely the first movement of a sonata, written out for an orchestra. A symphony is merely a whole sonata written to take advantage of the enlarged opportunities of a great orchestra of from 50 to 120 instruments. The sonata-formula is also the basis of the string-quartet, -quintet, etc., and of concertos for solo instruments with orchestra.

A symphonic poem is a symphony only in the breadth of its orchestration and its high demands. Like many smaller forms it forsakes the somewhat rigid arrangement of the sonata and other classical forms and lets the moods or the story it tells furnish the programme of musical events. A composition which has some programme other than the classic arrangement of keys and sections;—a programme for instance representing musically a storm or the tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet"—such a composition is said to be programme music. In its worst form, when programme music descends to cheap and unconvincing imitations of natural sounds instead of contenting itself with an artistic suggestion of them to the hearers' imagination, such music, if music it can be called, becomes quite as hopeless trash as that school of music which stoops to cheap and unconvincing imitations of classical masters and parrots devices which only the original spontaneity of the old master himself can keep alive. But generalisations are vain. What is poison as one man serves it up, is meat from another's hands. One failure or one triumph no more makes a rule than one bluebird brings the spring.

This hasty and incomplete sketch will have failed in its purpose if it leads its reader to the delusion that he need investigate no further the real mysteries of the art of music; if it lead to the delusion that because the art is founded on certain physical laws of inner and outer nature, the artistic imagination is to be hobbled to them; or if it lead to the delusion that any one form, symmetrical or natural soever, can suffice for all generations or all moods, or that any school of masters can hope to embody all that is good and solid in the art.

The classic masters were once living, breathing, passionate young artists, impatient of precedent and breaking rules for sheer pleasure as wanton boys smash windows. He who approaches them with intelligence and sympathy will find them still made of bone and blood, sinew and spirit. But once he has had the inestimable delight of their acquaintance, he must, above all things, avoid the belief that art and glory died with them. He should approach every new work, howsoever startling, with a readiness to be convinced that the new trumpeter, standing on the outer hilltop which we thought was the rim of the art, may, after all, be looking into a further world and be proclaiming to us new fields and streams, and a new horizon. And though his music may seem strange, blatant and incoherent to us at first, perhaps the fault is not with him, nor with us, but only with the great new wonder-land he sees beyond.

Music, like any other living speech, is always growing and must always be newly studied. If we would not have it a dead language we must be prepared for change, and be willing to learn.

Italian Music

WHATEVER currents of emotion, or of the mechanics of music, have varied and developed the art in Italy, two traits have been fundamental to distinctively Italianistic compositions—in each instance apparently spontaneous vital pulsations and principles. The first is the notion that without melody—especially sensuous, warm, obvious melody—music has no eloquence for the heart, no matter how admirable the harmonic structure may be. The second trait is lyricalism—the tendency to keep music ever in touch with the art of actual song, with the expressiveness that the human voice alone can afford.

It is true that in view of many widening phases of Italian musical genius we cannot claim that on these two commandments have hung all the law and the prophets which set Italy to creating for the rest of the world the most recently perfected of the arts; that gave Italy her long-time sovereignty in music; even now distinguish her in it. Still, they are the quintessence of Italianism in all "schools" and phases really reproductive. Let us note, along with these two general Italian concepts of music, the tendency to unite melodic beauty with melodic strength, a feminine, not a masculine, emotionality and melodiousness, and a failure, first and last, to reach in abstract music that interest and dignity which Germany, Austria, France, Scandinavia, and Russia have achieved. Thus we have two other salient Italian traits before us. The Italian "schools" of music, not excluding even the lofty ecclesiastical composers, if compared with the workers in the North, stand for Music as a thing of mere human heart and nerves and artless passion as contrasted with a vaguer, more mystic psychologic message. Only Italy could produce a Rossini or a Verdi; we cannot think of an Italian Bach, Beethoven, or Brahms; and vice versa the feeling holds good.

It is logical, therefore, that we find Italy to be really shining in only two forms of music. Both are her own special discoveries, or re-creation. The first is polyphonic church-music. The second is opera. Neither of these forms is of the more abstract and independent utterances of the art. But in each instance Italy has never been surpassed in dealing with them, either in principles or practice, and it is not likely that she ever will be, till music as a science and as an emotion is revolutionised. Let us add, in passing, that a third form—also lyric—is also Italy's direct invention, the sacred oratorio. But her accents in oratorio, as in her early developments of almost all other kinds of music, have been so outdone by French and German musicians that the Italian oratorio is to-day a fact for the student, not the auditor.

It would be as impossible to essay even a general historical sketch of Italy in music in a few pages, as to condense the story of Italian painting into equally few paragraphs. In Italy, the modern ideas of music, sacred or secular, all found creation or resurrection. All the rest of the world owes the art, as it is to-day, to one or another phase of Italy's early intense sensibility to it. Perhaps, indeed, music is the Italian art, in chief, rather than any other. Out of the mists of the early Christian Era, out of the thunders of mediæval wars and sieges, come to us the harsh but noble chants of Saint Ambrose of Milan (A.D. 333–397) and of Pope Gregory the Great (540–604); and as we reach the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, we hear, clear and full, some of the most magnificent and pure church-song ever written, in the masses, motets, anthems, psalms and other great polyphonic works by the Roman masters of vocal scoring, Palestrina (1524 ?–1594), and Allegri (1560–1652) and their contemporaries. At the same time, sacred oratorios began under Cavalieri (1550–15—) a course to which in a course of 200 years Handel, Haydn, and Mendelssohn were to give such dignity. But the great burst of Italian church-music occurs after the beginning of the seventeenth century, when Carissimi (1604–1674), the Venetian Marcello (1686–1739), the Neapolitans Durante (1684–1755) and Leo (1694–1746), Pergolesi (1710–1736), Jommelli of Naples (1714–1744) and Scarlatti, the Sicilian (1659–1725), shone out as suns in Italian church-music, by styles and principles not yet weakened. Thereafter, however, Italian church-music declined in excellence; and save for a few special and relatively recent works by Zingarelli, Rossini, and Verdi (quite of other voice and structure), its message has finished. In early instrumental composition Domenico Scarlatti of Naples (1683–1757) is of mark.

Opera, as has been observed, presents the phase of Italian genius in music at its most prolific, most powerful and—apparently—most natural eloquence. As is well known, it was in trying to revive old Greek drama, with its musical element, that, in 1681, a group of wealthy Italian dilettanti originated modern lyric drama. Under Caccini and Peri, by the broader ideas of Monteverde, Lotti, and others, the structure of opera became firm. In Alessandro Scarlatti, Pergolesi, Sacchini, and Piccini—mostly southern Italians—an enormous Italian operatic growth occurred; soon transformed or grafted to France, Germany and Austria. The consummation of the classical Italian opera appears in the Austrian Mozart, whose operatic voice is—fundamentally—Italian. From this point we pass, in Italian opera, to the greater modernists and romanticists, always Italian in their concept of opera, whatever their actual birth or locality—Paesiello, Cimarosa, Salieri, Zingarelli, Spontini, Rossini, Donizetti, Bellini, Mercadante, mostly Neapolitan or of meridional Italy. Their works have given place, in large measure, to the Contemporary School of Italian Opera, strikingly eclectic and much influenced for better or worse by Northern phases. The supremest and noblest figure here met is the gigantic Verdi (1813–1901), beyond doubt, one of the most astonishing and consummate emotional composers in all the story of music. Verdi is elsewhere in this book so fully treated, as are Rossini, Donizetti and Bellini, as to need no long essay here on his merits and career. Of his contemporaries, especially of what we may call the Neo-Italian "School" of operatic writing, the most important are Ponchielli, Boito, Cagnoni, Gomez, Puccini, Franchetti, Cilta and Giordano; with less distinct merits attaching to two other much advertised names, Mascagni and Leoncavallo.

At present, Italy is, beyond doubt, in the same plight of musical decadence (creatively estimated and measured by her past importance) as is almost every other land and race in the art. Only in opera has the Italian composer to-day a really attractive, spontaneous musical communication. For we can scarcely think that the few superior Italian symphonists and pianoforte writers are of general and real significance. Whether Italy can give any further impetus, indeed, to a form of art that appears to be thought-out and written-out is a question: but if the Italian fail to-day in his æsthetics it is easy to forgive the failure, considering his splendidly Hellenic utterances in the past.

German Music

NO other art is so indebted to distinctively Teutonic influences, no other art has been so civilised and dignified by the German minds and by the German temperaments as music. A special office of the Teutonic soul seems to be the bringing of intellect to bear on all those things for which it possesses emotional receptiveness and creative power. It is true that this very tendency sometimes ties down the wings of Pegasus, and dulls the lyre of this or that muse. Sensuous beauty can be the less in its being Germanized. But we can forgive the turgidness and clumsiness that come often as if in an intellectual extreme, when we think of Peter Fischer, of Albrecht Dürer, of the architects who have built the Cologne Cathedral or St. Stephen's, and of that sparkling galaxy of musicians whose names are peculiarly linked to Austria—Haydn, Mozart, Gluck, Beethoven, Schubert and Brahms; and of the more strictly German group that shows us as central figures Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, Weber, Schumann, and Wagner.

Whenever we ask ourselves what constitutes distinctively the high and true German school of musical creativeness, we are face to face with the same concept and result: the making of music an intellectual matter; a psychological thing to a degree not originative in any other country. The passion and fire of Italy's idea of music, as well as her lighter sensuousness in it, these are seized by the German heart and made into something deeper and more eloquent. The dance-forms of the South are transformed to a Ciaconna by Bach, a Minuet in Mozart's G minor symphony, or to the mystery of a Scherzo in Beethoven's terrific utterance. The symphony in German and Austrian concert-halls reached the supreme disclosure of music yet known to us. The love-ditties that merrily sighed or prattled or languished, alla mandolinata, in less serious lands, grew under the hand of Schubert and Schumann to be outcries from the world's heart. A romantic ballad could reach the height of tragedy, when Löwe gave it German voice. As for opera, Mozart so infused Italian principles with the force of his dramatic instinct as to give the world three consummate advances on all Italian models preceding, advances beyond which music in operatic conditions never has gone and never can go. Beethoven speaks with the soul forever in the three acts of "Fidelio." Weber and Marschner have built up the structure of a truly German-romantic opera to perfect effect. Wagner has brought into an absolutely stupendous demonstration a group of theories as to the lyric-dramatic opera—theories which, with all their error of expression even from so great a workman, are of psychological power overwhelming to the mass of opera-hearers to-day (not necessarily even musical) and which have indeed put a period for the time to any new phase of opera as drama.

In church-music and in religious music (to use a false term) the Germans and the German-Austrians have said what no other schools seem to have conceived in any ecclesiastic or devotional or spiritually reflective connection. The suave beauty of Italian polyphony as we find it in the church-music of Palestrina and Leo and of Marcello and Pergolesi grows colourless when our ears contrast it with the Mass in B minor of Bach and the D minor Mass of Beethoven. True, a lovely and devout Italianism created oratorio; but it was left for Handel to write "Israel in Egypt" and the "Messiah," and for Mendelssohn to consummate such a form of musical and of religious receptiveness as "Elijah."

In fact it is through a subtle appeal to the very core and essence of human nature just as it is, just as we meet it daily about us, as we know it to be struggling or repressed in our very selves, in our heart of hearts, that the German school has so influenced music. Its voice is the voice of mystic humanity in us; and something more. Haydn, Mozart, Gluck, Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, and Brahms have not degraded music in relation to our merely artistic ideal of it. They have not laid violent hands on it as art, and wrested it away from its earlier mysteriousness. They have brought it near to us by a wonderful natural gift and insight. But they have made music psychologically as nearly an articulate and organic thing as it is possible to make it. From Bach to the second Johann Strauss this is out of question. There is no clear outlook at present for any further mastery over it—mystic and ever-elusive art that it is—none for any more articulate soul messages. The German has entered within the holy of holies of musical art. To him has been granted the freest foot in its vague realm yet granted to any mortal.

Whether after such a glorious and dominant past the German is likely to go further for us than he has already done, we may well believe is not in the bounds of even the most thoughtful and the most psychologic of prophets in æsthetics to decide for us. All the future of music is at present a strange problem. We are certainly swinging back to the highest ideals and the truest expressions of them, in such large measure the express embodiments of German composers. We do so daily not only because the "German" symphony, concert overture, concerto, string quartet, pianoforte sonata, song, oratorio and opera are what they are, but because with the departure from the world of the last set of greater "German" composers a twilight seems to be settling down over all mortal musical creativeness.

The youngest, the most suddenly and prodigally florescent of all æsthetics, seems to demand a time of silence, of repose, of inaction. It seems to say, " I have done enough for awhile, I have given you enough for awhile. Let me sleep for a century or more." And such being music's good pleasure, we cannot deny that the German mind and temperament have given the most beautiful and solemn " last word " the art has published.

French Music

THE history and scholastic aspects of France in music are like the relationship of France to the development of the sister arts—of painting, of architecture, of sculpture, and even of literature. We do not find the gift of high origination—of invention—of striking out a new ground of principles—fresh forms and phrase. Instead, we find that the mission of the French composers from the first fruits of their musical creativeness (often so lavish and rich) to our own day has been to clarify, to refine, to suggest, often to imitate with a most subtle and elegant technical improvement, what Germany and Italy may have invented in one or another form, but have not carried out in the same degree of a lucid and logical eloquence. More than that, in several of the most dignified forms of music, in that music which approaches the abstract, as the symphony and the deepest expressiveness of chamber-music approach it, we find France has ever been singularly lacking in her contributions; and has not only made no advance on the same foundation, no successful rivalry, but has distinctly failed to take a firm place and to win universal recognition. Between the symphonies of Mozart or Beethoven and those of Saint-Saëns or Franck; between the songs of Schubert and Brahms and the lyrics of Godard and Massenet, from the string quartets of Haydn or Smetana to the best works of the Gallic hand, there is a long musical distance; and in sonata-writing for the pianoforte the French temperament has not in any wise distinguished itself.

The French troubadour (corresponding to the minnesinger of Germany's early musical day), a development under Italian influences in the South of France, is now a romantic and venerable figure before us as we study the mediæval growth of secular music in French social life. If we include the Franco-Flemish masters of religious church-music in the seventh, eighth, ninth and later centuries until the close of the sixteenth, France offers a series of composers for the Church of great learning and often lastingly instructive work. Such are de Meurs (1300?–1370?), Dufay (1350), Ockeghem (1430?–1495?) and Goudimel (1505?–1572). With this group, we are near to the great Italian church-composers represented by Palestrina (1514?–1594), who was taught by Goudimel.

The element of concrete, human emotion is strong in French temperament and art. We are therefore not surprised to find the opera a vigourous phrase in France's music-story; but with the establishment of Italian opera in France under Mazarin a foreign form for dramatic music was seized on by French composers and soon made into something their own, and unlike that which they imitated; and such it has continued even to our day. Cambert (1628?–1677), pioneer, and the great founder of French opera, Lulli (1633–1687), and the equally gifted Rameau (1683–1764), defined opera for France with grace and force.

The noble, sincere art of Gluck (who though a German by birth belongs to France in his purest glory) is eloquent to us to-day, though his "Orphée" and "Iphigénie" and "Armide" date from the last year before the French Revolution. Every dramatic and musical principle re-proclaimed by Wagner is contained in Gluck's best scores. From Gluck we advance to the truly modern epoch. The works of Lesueur (1764–1837) are not vital now; but Cherubini, "the French Beethoven," holds a high place for his best operas and his austere Requiem, a masterpiece of church-music. The galaxy of French opera-writers is met herewith—Méhul (1763–1817), Boieldieu (1775–1834), Grétry (1741–1813), Auber (1782–1871), Hérold (1791–1833), Meyerbeer (1791–1864), the most distinctively French composer as a stylist in opera of the period, Halévy (1799–1862), and Berlioz (1803–1869). With Berlioz (who is truly a Titanesque figure in modern French music, either for opera or concert, but ever grandiose rather than grand) we are in quite our own epoch. Gounod, Bizet, and Lalo are its strongest and most widely recognized creators of serious lyric drama. "Faust" and "Carmen" are of universal acceptance. To these masters has succeeded a prolific Germano-Gallic school of music, both secular and religious, under Wagnerian or Neo-Italian or other influence. The most salient, if not always vigorous expressions of this group, we soon find in the scores of Massenet, Salvayre, Chabrier, Reyer, Saint-Saëns, and Franck, de Lara, Leroux and Charpentier. We must not forget that Offenbach, the creator of satiric opera-bouffe, not only was a figure of brilliant originality under the second Empire, but, like Johann Strauss in Austria, seems destined to a longer vitality than was expected a decade ago and has created a school of imitators of wide vogue.

It is not likely that in any form of music France will originate more in the future than her brilliant and most representative composers have done in the past. But it is something—a great thing—in modern music to hold our interest and admiration by the art with which a work, from a song to a symphony, is written for us, the skill of mere means even to an imitated purpose. In this gift it is not likely that the French composers soon will fail us. We can hear them with pleasure where their message is neither new nor valuable in itself—a racial trait and grace.

English Music

IT is under restricted meaning that we can speak at all of an "English" school of musical art. However flexibly the word "school" be employed in defining musical utterances, after all it should stand for a distinctive individual product; and in case of a country and race, for an accent in symphony, oratorio, opera, chamber-music and song, that is national and individualised. It should not be reckoned as merely a product of influences from outside. In England nearly every form of music has been an importation; and almost every expression of the art that is effectively represented in the present or the past history of musical composition in England is derived or reflects Italy, France, or Germany. Musical composition and musical taste in England itself in the old-time of the art lagged behind the popular developments in Wales, Scotland, and Ireland (where the bardic expressions of music early were enjoyed by all classes), and creative productiveness was proportionately slow. The Italian musical influences in due course obtained, as did Italian literary influences, and later the German and French; and English composition to-day is a more or less disguised and eloquent product of Continental developments of the art, and English popular taste for music in abeyance and instructed by the Continental product.

There are, however, three exceptions to this general summary. The English Ballad—the true ballad—with its precise, definite rhythms and clear periods has an individuality at once strong in song, and admirable in sincerity and beauty. The Scotch and Irish lyric, or instrumental expression, is also distinct; and both interesting and beautiful. The second exception is represented by the finest developments of music for the organ and for its churchly usage; and the choral English anthem, and what appertains to English liturgical offices in music. Here we can review a noble musical structure. It was gradually perfected from the time of Elizabeth (in particular) as a product of English, Italian and German musical art fused together. Bright lights in it have been Dunstable, Tallis, Bird, and the gifted Purcell; the majestic Gibbons and Blow; the great organist Bull; the English fraction of Handel's work in oratorio and for the Protestant church service; and the busy group of contemporary English composers for the offices of the National church, who are not much under foreign influences of one sort or another. Although Handel is always to be reckoned as of England, and as developing the English "oratorio" to its climax, we cannot speak of "the great Saxon" as uttering an "English style," so much as a modification of German and Italian musical forms and accents, whether in an oratorio or an opera, a cantata, a suite or an organ-piece. Purcell, after all, was operatically Italian. Costa said little to be reckoned "English." Nevertheless in one field of opera to-day England has an assured and a brilliant individuality. It has not come in the serious opera, whatever successes have been won by such skilled workers as Benedict, Balfe, Stanford, and MacKenzie, Goring Thomas and others; but in the genius of Sir Arthur Sullivan for light opera. By Sullivan and in a lesser degree by Cellier, an English operatic message firmly and graciously has been given forth, allowing for all suggestions of influences from abroad. Sullivan's "Pinafore," "Mikado," "Ruddygore," and "The Yeoman of the Guard," are masterpieces of invention and of musical diction—not to be confused with Italian, French, or German products.

In modern secular music for the orchestra some superior symphonic work has come from Bennet, Cowen, and others; and particularly contemporaneous high lights in composition in large form for the orchestra or choral choir are Edward Elgar and Coleridge-Taylor. Both these vigorous writers are, however, of the modern German school rather than of any English style!

Altogether we must accept the fact that in England music is not an original art-expression, compared with the products in other and more genial lands. The English temperament is not yet to the manner born, musical. Musical productivity is a process of kindly foreign sunshine and of enrichment of a more or less England-born and England-working musical talent. If a genius of world-wide importance is to be expected from England and as "an English composer," he has been long on the way, and will now have hard work to win any "towering pride of place." Dignified national productivity is not national originality; nor a national voice and school in æsthetics.

Russian Music

THE youngest school (as a strictly national development of composition) of which the average student of music must seriously take account at present, is that of Russia. It has, however, reached a clear and, in large measure, a singularly impressive unfolding for the extra-Slavic world's notice within the century, in which distinctively Russian musicianship has made its place good in the concert-rooms, in the drawing-room, and in the operatic establishments of almost every corner of æsthetic Europe and America.

Like the Italian, and the Hungarian, and the Pole, so is the Russian, by nature, intensely musical. Often he is morbidly so. The peasant and the prince alike are born to quick musical Empfindlichkeit. The folk-songs and folk-melodies for the dance or more serious mood are immemorial, beautiful, and countless. All truly Russian melodies have a peculiar voice and character of their own—scale and rhythms are rich in melancholy, in passionate gaiety, in dramatic accent and in varied hints of the psychologic. A strain of Orientalism is not absent. The Russian sings or makes instrumental music by impulse and feels music by impulse (the balaika, a three-stringed guitar, is the original musical instrument of Russia).

Such being the popular aspect noted, we turn to the formal development of the art in Russia. This, as has been mentioned, is little more than a century old in cultivated activity. Its chief classic is—curiously—an operatic writer, Michel Glinka, of Smolensk (1804–1869), a gifted man in many other traits than music, a pupil of Dehn along with the two Rubinsteins. His two finest operas, "A Life for the Czar" and "Ruslan and Ludmilla," are, to Russian lyric drama, what Mozart, Gluck, and Weber are to Italian, French and German opera. Dargomizsky (1813–1869) is a link between Glinka and Anton Rubinstein. Anton Rubinstein, however, although popularly accounted as a Russian master-worker and although so great an influence for music in Russia (I am not speaking here only of his career as a pianist), was less a Russian than a German composer in matter and manner. His best music is superb; his birth and works honour Russia, but in symphony, pianoforte music and opera, Anton Rubinstein was Germanised early and stayed thus to the end, nolens volens.

Far more national in "school" is Borodin, a writer of the first order, whose opera, "Prince Igor," is a classic, though its composer has been dead only some fourteen years. Yet a further height of national Russian utterance in music comes with Balakireff, a native of Nijni-Novgorod, whose heart ever turns toward the folk-tunes of all Russia for thematic material. The most national Russian composer, however, and a veritable giant in the technical use of Slav themes is Tschaikowski, whose masterpieces are not to be questioned as to their being Russian music and strong developments of composition scientifically, measured by any school.

The contemporary Russian movement is represented especially in Rimsky-Korsakow, a giant for modern orchestration and a magician in orchestral effectiveness; in César Cui, a brilliant operatic writer; and in Alexander Glazounow, a pupil of Rimsky-Korsakow, and a symphonist of strong Slavic diction, as well as a technicist of orchestration equalled only by the most eminent writers of the day.

The actual profession of composition in music is yet a recent—one might almost say experimental—profession in Russia. We find one distinguished composer is a soldier, another a lawyer, another a marine officer, another a military official by his legal standing. Which gives us rather a curious perspective of amateurism, if of magnificent amateurism. However, this older aspect is each year passing away, the Russian conservatory system is widening and taking root in the greater cities; and while the most gifted contemporaries are not always concentrated on their own home-material for subjects, they have fairly impressed the world as a distinct school. Often they have astonished and fascinated it.

American Music

THE youth and lack of uniformity of the United States citizenry furnish excuses for the absence of a strictly national art hitherto. But, after all, there are not many countries that have preserved one form of government so long as the Constitution has been presiding over the assimilation of the world-pilgrims. Youth is a disease for which time is an almost certain cure, and too much uniformity of thought and character is favourable rather to stagnation than life.

At last, however, American music has arrived. It is only a healthy and somewhat bewildered child as yet, but it has the beginnings of an accent quite its own. The American composer has had a combination of advantage and disadvantage in the thoroughly foreign nature of most of his tuition. But so Germany and France took their start in Italy. As they gradually learned the importance of making their alien dexterity a medium for the expression of native and national emotions and personalities, so has America finally reached the stage of true introspection expressed with outward polish of manner.

The high favour of the foreign executant as pianist, violinist, 'cellist, opera and concert singer, and also as orchestral leader and yeoman, has been an obstacle to the wide and easy promulgation of the native composer's experiments and achievements.

Through the fog of a thousand discouragements and distractions, however, the cause has groped until a few sturdy figures have emerged already into prominence and even into importance. The forms in which the earliest successes have been found have naturally been the smaller. In grand opera there has been absolutely nothing achieved in a public sense, though doubtless there are enough manuscript grand operas to bankrupt a dozen impresarios. In the symphony there have been only a few works of large worth, though John Knowles Paine's "Spring Symphony," Edgar S. Kelley's humourous symphony "Gulliver," and Henry K. Hadley's "Youth" are full of personality, art, and genuine vitality. A number of overtures, symphonic poems and prologues have shown a right to exist, notably George W. Chadwick's "Melpomene," Arthur Foote's "In the Mountains," Frank van der Stucken's "Ratcliffe," and various works by Johann H. Beck, Harry Rowe Shelley, C. C. Converse, and Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, while Edward MacDowell's "Indian Suite," Henry Schoenefeld's "Sunny South Overture" and Kelley's "Aladdin" have exploited fields of local colour in which the American finds much novelty ready to hand. Various symphonic poems and orchestral suites deserve the mention space forbids them here. Of concertos there are many, Henry Holden Huss having written an especially excellent work for piano.

In the field of the sonata MacDowell has written two masterworks, the sonatas "Eroica" and "Tragica," and a piano "Fantasy" by Arthur Whiting is a notable innovation in the free manipulation of the sonata form. The religious choral works of Dudley Buck and Horatio W. Parker deserve serious acceptance. The marches for brass band written by John Philip Sousa have gained world-wide note for their military fire and novelty. In the realm of smaller piano pieces, cantatas, and songs, there is an embarrassment of riches. The piano-works of MacDowell, who gains eminence in all fields, and of Harvey Worthington Loomis are genuine creations.

In the short-song form these two men collaborate with such sterling individualities as Kelley, Ethelbert Nevin, Foote, Wilson G. Smith, James H. Rogers, Fred Field Bullard, Margaret Ruthven Lang, Ad. M. Foerster, Homer A. Norris, Howard Brockway and others, to give America a song literature whose importance is not surpassed in contemporary composition. There is also a large body of naturalised foreigners who, while hardly justifying the epithet American, are yet aiding to make American musical life one of great activity, a life which has accomplished more than might have been fairly expected, and gives promise most glowing.

Great Instrumentalists

IF the time of Beethoven, Schubert, and Haydn was a golden epoch in the field of musical creation, the present has become, in even a greater degree, the era of musical execution, for we have attained a standard of musical excellence far beyond anything ever dreamed of by the classical composers. Feats which Beethoven's critics derided as being too difficult for the violin (the high C in the "Egmont" overture for example) are now readily within the scope of all good orchestral players, and our concert pianists have now definitely shelved the cadenzas which the old masters wrote for their concertos as being too simple to display the modern points of technique.

Piano technique, beginning with Bach's "Well-tempered Clavichord," advancing with Clementi and Cramer, found its transition period in the time of Moscheles, and then culminated in two diverse ways—the poetry of Chopin and the brilliancy of Liszt. All of the pianists cited in these pages will be most easily measured by four standards, viz.: —Bach, for intellectuality; Chopin, for emotion; Beethoven, for a combination of both in equipoise; and Liszt, in such works as the "Don Juan" Fantasie, for technique pure and simple, or rather pure and difficult.

D'Albert achieves his chief triumphs in the Beethoven school; Von Bülow was pre-eminent in the last five Beethoven sonatas; De Pachmann leads the Chopin band; Paderewski is famous in Chopin as well as in the entire modern school; Rosenthal scintillates with all the pyrotechnics of the latest specialists. Occasionally one finds a Liszt who is almost equally great in all the schools, or a Rubinstein in whom intellectuality and emotion are well combined.

Less diverse are the schools of violin-playing, for here the evolution has taken two rather distinct roads: pyrotechnics on the one hand, and soulful expression on the other. While these two styles are sometimes combined, as for example, in the Mendelssohn concerto, they are sufficiently distinct to enable one to classify every soloist as belonging chiefly to the one or the other school.

Paganini, the greatest violinist that ever lived (as Liszt might be called the greatest pianist), was distinctly devoted to technical display, in which he so entirely distanced all competitors that some of his cadenzas cannot be played exactly as originally written by even the greatest technicists of our time. He was able to produce the twelfth harmonic with absolute clearness (his strings were made especially thin for this effect), the most intricate double harmonics had no terrors for him; special ways of tuning were studied out by him for special effects; but we learn from contemporary authorities, that his tone was neither broad nor especially sympathetic. Joachim, in our own day, has held the violin sceptre, and combined technique and expression in a marvellous degree. A host of woman-violinists has arisen, with Lady Hallé at their head, and as will be seen in other parts of this volume, the modern school has brought forth numerous young violinists of both sexes, among whom it might be hard to select an absolute monarch of violin-playing—such as Paganini undoubtedly was—from the technical side.

On other instruments, too, one can find definite leaders, as for example, Servais, on the violoncello ; Dragonetti, on the contrabass ; Thomas Harper, in trumpet-playing, etc. ; all illustrating in a large degree the triumph of technical skill and the modern tendency toward specialisation of effort in the music of the last hundred years.

II

Great Singers

IF, as may be seen in the article on " Great Instrumentalists " (pages 48–50), their technique has been advancing in modern times, almost the opposite may be said in regard to the art of singing. The studies required of the vocalist in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries would be appalling to the singers of to-day, and every operatic manager finds more difficulty in finding an adequate quartette for the " Barber of Seville " than in selecting forces for " La Bohême," or even such great works as " Aïda " or " Otello " ; even Wagnerian singers are becoming more plentiful than thorough coloratura singers.

The study of vocal art is the most ancient branch of technical musical work. Gaditanian singers were trained for performance in imperial Rome eighteen centuries ago ; the Phonarci, vocal teachers of Athens, preceded even these ; the early Christians made vocal conservatories of their orphan asylums in the third century ; Julian, a little later, endeavoured (in opposition) to found a Pagan singing-school in Alexandria ; the Copts in earliest times gave long cadenzas upon almost every syllable of their religious songs; Notker, in the tenth century, trained many dignitaries of the Church in singing; Guido, of Arezzo, in the eleventh century, taught sight-singing and the vocal syllables; the list might be carried on in an almost unbroken line down to our own times.

But the period of greatest vocal development is found in Italy in the seventeenth century. A whole race of vocal teachers culminated in Nicolò Porpora, whose pupils, Farinelli, Senesino, Caffarelli and many more, won the highest fame.

It may be mentioned en passant that Italy has always been prolific in natural tenors, and Spain even more so. Russia is the land of phenomenal basses; England is the natural home of the alto; America of the soprano. Whether such vocal characteristics are racial, alimentary or climatic has not yet been decided.

Yet the greatest sopranos of the world, Catalani, Malibran, Patti, do not belong to America. The highest soprano that history tells us of was Agujari, sometimes called "La Bastardella," who really sang, not squeaked, a full octave higher than the highest of our famous sopranos of to-day, and we have Mozart's authority for the good quality of her high notes.

It is not our purpose in such a very brief synopsis to speak of many of the famous singers, the list of whom alone would form a long article; we desire only to speak of those who are especially representative of some epoch or are recognised as absolute leaders in their field.

Such a leader was Luigi Lablache, the most wonderful of all bass singers. His ponderous voice could easily overtop the heaviest orchestra, yet was modulated with the skill and flexibility of a flute; the most showy cadenzas could be sung by him as easily as if he were a soprano leggiero, yet he could also sing the Priest's part in "The Magic Flute," or any rôle requiring ponderous majesty. Among great altos one thinks first of Alboni.

The list of leading tenors would be a difficult one to compile, yet Rubini, Mario, and the modern Jean de Reszké are representative.

A special list of Wagnerian singers might be added, but it may be observed that the title will soon lose its especial meaning, for many of the Italian and French artists are entering this field and proving that the same application of vocal technique is necessary in the singing of Wagner's rôles that is required in Mozart or Rossini. One may learn in Italy the vocal method to be applied to the operas of Germany.

A

A (G. ä; F. I. & Sp. lä.) 1. A musical pitch (435 vibrations per second, according to the standard adopted in France 1879 and at Vienna 1887, and called diapason normal). 2. Any octave of this pitch. 3. This tone designated in Absolute Pitch (q.v.) as a′ is invariable on the oboe, and is accordingly used as the tone to which the whole orchestra is attuned. It is hence called the normal tone. 4. The major key with three sharps. 5. The minor key relative to C major.

a, a or ab, L., I., F. By, from, for, to, at, in, etc.[1] ab (äp), G. "Off." Used of stops.

ab′acus harmon′icus, L. 1. A table of notes. 2. The arrangement of the keys and pedals of an instrument.

abanera (ă-bä-nā′-rä), Sp. Vide HABANERA.

abandon (ă-bäṅ-dôṅ), F. Lack of all restraint in emotion.

abbadare (äb-bä-dä′-rĕ), I. To take care.

abbandonar′si, abbandonatamen′te, abbando′ne, abbando′no, I. With abandon.

abbassamen′to, I. Lowering. A. di mano, (a) down-beat; (b) the carrying of one hand below the other in piano playing. A. di voce (vō-chĕ), I. Lowering of the voice. Diminution.

abbatimen′to, I. Down-beat.

abbellare (äb-bel-lä′-rĕ), I. To ornament. abbelitura(e) (too′-rä), abbellimen′to(i). Embellishment(s).

abbetont (äp′-bā-tōnt), G. With final emphasis.

a-b-c-d-i(e)ren (ä-bā-tsā-dē′rĕn), G. To sing the notes by their letter names.

Abend (ä′-bĕnt), G. Evening. -glocke. Curfew. -lied (lēt). Even song. -musik (moo-zēk′). Evening music.

abenteuerlich (ä′-bĕn-toi-ĕr-lĭkh), G. Venturesome.

abfal′len, G. To deteriorate. -gebrochen (äp′-gĕ-brôkh-ĕn). Interrupted. Vide CADENCE. Abgesang (äp′-gĕ-zängk). Refrain. It followed the two Stollen in the songs of the Meistersänger. -gestossen (äp′-gĕ-shtôs-sĕn). Staccato. -gleiten (äp′-glī-tĕn). To slide the finger from a black key to the next white key. Abkürzung (äp′-kür-tsoongk). Abbreviation. -leiten (äp′-lī-tĕn). To derive from. -lösen (äp′-lā-zĕn). To change fingers on a sustained tone. -nehmend (äp′-nā-mĕnt). Diminuendo.

abrégés (äb-rā-zhā), F. Trackers.

abreichen (äp′-rī-khĕn), G. On the violin, to extend the little, or draw back the first, finger.

Abreissung (äp′-rīs-soongk), G. Sudden pause.

[1] Phrases beginning with these and other prepositions will be found under their principal words.

abrup'tio, L. An abrupt halt.
Absatz (äp'-zäts), G. 1. Cadence. 2. A phrase.
Abschnitt (äp'-shnĭt), G. Section. abschwellen (äp'-schvĕl-len), G. Diminuendo. absetzen (äp'-zĕt-zĕn), G. To strike two keys successively with the same finger. absolute. Used of music that is self-derived and complete in its own form, meaning, and beauty, as opposed to operatic or programme music. abstammen (äp'-shtäm-men), G. To be derived from.
Abstand (äp'-shtänt), G. Interval. ab'stossen, G. To play staccato. Ab'-stosszeichen (tsī-khĕn). Staccato mark(s).
Abstrak'ten, G. Trackers.
Abstufung (äp'-shtoo-foongk), G. Shading. abtönen (äp'-tā-nĕn), G. To err from the key. ab(h)ub (ä'-boob). A Hebrew horn. abun'dans, L. Augmented. abwechselnd (äp'-vĕkhs-ĕlnt), G. Alternating.
Abweichung (äp'-vīkh-oongk), G. A variant.
Abyssinian flute. A beak flute.
Abzug (äp'-tsookh). 1. Lifting of a finger or a bow. 2. The sliding of the finger from one key to the next.
académie spirituelle (ăk-ăd-ā-mē spĭr-ēt-wĕl), F. A sacred concert. acathis'tus, Gr. Ancient Greek Church hymn in honor of the Virgin. accademia (ak-käd-ā-mē'-ä), I. 1. An Academy. 2. A concert. accarezzevole (äk-kä-rĕd-zā'vō-lĕ), I. Caressing. accarezzevolmen'te. Pleadingly. accell., acceldo. Abbr. of accelerando. accelerando (ät-chā-lĕ-rän'-dō), I. Accelerating (the velocity). acceleratemen'te. Swiftly. accelerato, (rä'-tō). Swift. accent (in F., ăk-säṅ). accento (ät-chĕn'-to), I. 1. Emphasis, force, on a tone, a chord, a beat. 2. An accent mark (q.v.). The first beat of every measure receives a primary accent. In 4-4 time, the third beat receives a lighter or secondary or sub-accent. 3. In 6-8 or 6-4 time the fourth beat takes a secondary accent. In 9-8 time the fourth beat has a secondary a., and the seventh a tertiary a. still lighter. The regular skeletonic accent of the standard measure is called the grammatical, metrical, natural or regular a.; this is modified by the rhythmical and the æsthetic, emotional, pathetic, poetical or rhetorical accent.
accent-mark. One of the numerous signs of stress; as > sfzorzando or ∧ (strictly tenuto); ′or ,, used (a) to indicate pitch (q. v.) as c'' and $C_{,,} = c^2$ and C_2; (b) as an abbreviation of foot (q. v.) as 8′ = 8-foot. accent'or. Leader of a chorus. accentuare (too-ä'-rĕ), I. accentui(e)-ren (ak-tsĕn-too-ē'-rĕn), G. To accent. To accentuate. accentua'to. With marked accent. accentuation. The act or art of properly distributing emphasis. accen'tus, L. Portion(s) of the ritual song of the Church, chanted by the priest at the altar; in contradistinction to the Concentus, sung by the assistants or choir. A. ecclesiastici, L. Melodic formulæ used in the Church in reciting, the collects, etc. They correspond with the comma, semicolon, interrogation, etc., of ordinary writing, and are of seven kinds, called immutab'ilis, monotone; me'dius, a minor third; grav'is, a fifth; acu'tus, sol mi mi sol; modera'-tus, rising a second and returning; interrogati'vus, falling a second and returning; final'is, sol la sol fa mi re—thus closing in the Dorian key.
Accessis'ten, G. Unpaid choristers. accessory notes. The subordinate notes of an ornament. accessory tones. Overtones. acciaccato (ät-chĭ-äk-kä'-tō), I. Violent.

Acciaccatur (ät-tsĭ-äk-kä-toor′), G. The doubling of the 6-4 chord on the dominant, the right hand alone resolving it.

acciaccatura (ät-chäk-kä-too′-rä), I. A short appoggiatura, usually a grace-note, struck at the same time with its principal, but instantly released.

accidentals, E. accidenti (ät-tshĭ-dĕn′-tē), I. accidents (ăk-sĭ-dän), F. Sharps, flats, and naturals, foreign to the key-signature.

accolade (ăk-kô-lăd), F. Brace.

accompagnamento (äk-kom-pän-ya-mĕn′-to), I. Accompaniment; figured bass. accompagnare (yä′-rĕ). To accompany. accompagnato (yä′-tō). Accompanied.

accommodare (dä′-rĕ), I. To tune.

accompagner (ăk-kôm-pīn-yā), F. To accompany. accompagné (ăk-kôm-pīn-yā). Accompanied. accompagnement (ăk-kôm-pīn-yŭ-măn). Accompaniment.

accompaniment. A part or parts added to other principal parts. a. ad libitum. Optional accompaniment. a. obbligato. Accompaniment essential. accompanist. One who plays accompaniments.

accoppiato (äk-kôp-pĭ-ä′-tō), I. Tied.

accord, E (in F., ăk-kŏr), 1. Consonance. 2. A chord; à l'ouvert, on the open strings; natural, a fundamental chord; parfait, a triad; renversé, inverted; de sixte ajoutée, chord of the added sixth. Vide ALTERED. accordant (ăk-kôr-dän), F. In concord. accorder (ăk-kôr-dā). To tune. accordeur (dŭr). 1. A tuner; 2. a set of 12 tuning forks giving the tempered scale. 3. Monochord. accordoir (ăk-kôr-dwär). A tuning-key, hammer, or cone.

accordamen′to, accordanza (dän′-tsä), I. Consonance.

accor′dance, accor′dature, E. accordatura (too′-rä), I. The system of tuning the strings of an instrument; thus, the a. of a violin is g-d-a-e.

accordare (dä-rĕ), I. To tune. accordan′do. Tuning; in tune.

accor′deon. A free-reed instr. inv. by Damian of Vienna, 1829. The tone is produced by a double set of bellows acting upon metallic tongues. The right hand presses buttons or keys giving an incomplete chromatic scale; the left hand has a few bass tones.

accor′do, I. 1. A chord. 2. An old Italian instrument of twelve or more strings.

accoupler (ăk-koo-plā), F. To couple. accouplez (ăk-koo-plā). "Draw the coupler."

accrescendo (ak-krĕs-shĕn′-do). I. Crescen′do. accrescimento (ac-crā-shē-mĕn-tō). Augmentation as of a fugal theme. punto d'a, the dot placed after a note to prolong it. accresciuto (shoo′-tō), I. Augmented.

acetab′ulum, L. An ancient instr. of percussion. Earthen vessels beaten as drums or clashed as cymbals.

achromat′ic. Lacking accidentals and modulations.

acht (äkht), G. Eight. Achtfusston (äkht′-foos-tōn) or 8-füssig (füs-sĭkh). Eight-foot tone. 8-stimmig (shtĭm-mĭkh). For eight voices or instruments.

Achtel (äkhtl), Achtelnote, G. Eighth note; quaver. Achtelpause, G. Eighth-rest.

A Chula (ä choo′-lä), Port. A dance like the fandango.

ac′ocotl. A Mexican plant from whose stalk an aboriginal wind-instr. of the same name was made.

acolyth′ia, Gr. The order of service in the Greek Church.

acous′tics (ä-kow′-stix, or ä-koo′stix), E., acoustique (ä-koos-tēk), F. The science of sounds.

Acoustics.

By J. S. Shedlock.

THE term Acoustics is derived from a Greek verb signifying to hear, and the science of acoustics tells us about the production and propagation, also the comparison, of sounds. When a pianoforte string is struck by a hammer or a violin string by a bow, it trembles, sways to and fro and thus sets the surrounding air a-trembling; the air-particles sway to and fro producing a wave as a light breeze sets a corn-field waving; so we speak of waving air, or waves of air. These waves strike the ear and their motion is passed on to the brain and becomes what is called sound; but by what wonderful process one changes into the other does not concern us here. ¶When the swaying to and fro of the particles of an elastic body is steady and sufficiently rapid, a musical sound results, otherwise, only noise. The word sound indeed is generally understood to mean a musical one, hence sound is contrasted with noise. We speak of the noise of thunder or of battle, but of the sound of an instrument or of the human voice. Nature frequently offers a mixture of sound and noise, as in a waterfall, in which sometimes the one sometimes the other predominates. ¶Vibration is the name given to the swaying to and fro of the particles of an elastic body, and of this motion the clock pendulum gives a clear and simple idea. The particles only sway but the motion is passed on. When a glass ball is pushed against one end of a row of glass balls touching one another, the ball at the other end flies off. The motion of the first ball has been passed on from ball to ball until it has reached the extreme one. Vibrations when steady and sufficiently rapid produce sounds which may be higher or lower, and the higher the sound the greater the number of swayings to and fro, or vibrations, within a given time. There are two special instruments by means of which air-vibrations can be easily counted: one is Savart's toothed wheel, the other the Siren. When one sound is higher than another, it is said to be of higher pitch; when lower, of lower pitch. The shorter a string, the higher its pitch. If a violinist, setting one of the strings of his instrument in motion by means of the bow, slides his finger along that string toward the bridge, the sound will become continually of higher pitch: for the string is gradually shortened, the ever-increasing portion behind the finger being cut off from the vibratory movement caused by the bow. There is, therefore, a topsy-turvy connection between the number of vibrations produced by a string, and the length of that string. ¶Vibration can be felt if a glass jar over which a bow has been drawn is touched lightly with the finger. Vibration can be seen when the string of a piano or violin is struck by a hammer or bow. Vibration can be shown by attaching a strip of sheet copper tapering to a point to one of the prongs of a tuning-fork. If the latter be set in motion, and the copper point be placed on a piece of smoked glass, it will give the exact record of the exact swaying to and fro of the fork. ¶Strings such as are used in the pianoforte and violin when set in motion would of themselves create very faint sound-waves. The sound has to be strengthened. In the pianoforte the motion is not communicated directly to the air, but first to a massive sound-board. In a violin the little sound-post plays an important part in passing on the vibrations from the string to the back of the instrument. The strengthening of tone by such means is apt to be overlooked. ¶Particles of air when set in motion by a vibrating body first move from their point of rest to a certain distance and then back through the point of rest to a similar distance in an opposite direction; the distance between these extreme points is the extent, or as it is named, the amplitude of the vibration. As the vibrating body returns to a state of rest, that distance gradually diminishes and finally vanishes, just as it does when, the chain giving out, the clock pendulum slows down and finally stops. The degree of loudness or softness of a sound depends on the extent or amplitude of the vibration, the wider the one the louder the other. Sound travels at freezing temperature at the rate of 1090 feet per second; with increase of temperature there is increase of velocity, for the air thus becomes more elastic. Sound travels faster in water than in air because the former is more elastic. The degree of closeness of the particles of the medium, air, water, gases of different kinds, through which sound travels has also an influence on velocity. ¶Sound diminishes in intensity according to the distance. Throw a stone into a pond and see how the expanding waves become feebler and feebler in proportion as they are distant from the spot which generated them. So it is with sound-waves. Intensity varies inversely as the square of the distance, i.e., if a sound is heard twenty feet away from the instrument producing it, at forty feet, twice the distance, it will only be a quarter as loud: the square of $2 = 4$, and the relationship of the two sounds is as one to four, or $\frac{1}{4}$. This is of course theory; in practice sound is mostly intensified in various ways, so that it does not lose its strength at this exact rate. ¶A string set in motion, that is into a state of vibration, produces a note higher or lower according to its length. That note, however, is not a simple sound, but one made up of many sounds. For in addition to the whole string vibrating, it divides into two, three, four, and indeed into many portions, all of which vibrate in themselves at the same time that the whole string is vibrating. And these portions being shorter give out higher sounds than that of the whole string, and they bear themselves the self-evident name of Overtones. They are also called upper partials because they are higher sounds produced by parts of the string. The swaying to and fro of these parts is not so great as that of the whole string, therefore the sounds they produce are fainter. The halves give a louder sound than the thirds, the thirds than the quarters and so on. All these sounds mix so thoroughly together as to give the impression of one simple sound, and it is upon their order and number, which differ in different instruments, that quality of tone depends. Here are the first eleven notes of such a compound sound—they can be heard and analyzed by pressing the "loud" pedal of a pianoforte, striking the low c indicated and listening intently and long. Out of the overtones which are repeated we secure easily  the simplest of all chords in harmony. ¶If the key of the lowest note  is pressed down on a pianoforte without producing any sound, and so held, then if the above chord is struck sharply, the fingers after the blow being instantly removed from the keys, then that chord will continue to sound, although the strings which produced it have ceased to vibrate. Portions of the string of the lowest note have been set swaying to and fro, for the key pressed down removing the damper from its string left it free to vibrate. These portions vibrate by what is called sympathetic attraction. Repeat the experiment, but immediately after the chord has been struck, raise the key of the lowest note, and the chord is no longer heard. ¶It has already been stated that by means of certain instruments the numbers of vibrations of sounds can be counted, and they can therefore also be compared. Of any two notes an octave apart the upper one has twice as many vibrations as the lower. Of any two notes a perfect fifth apart the relationship between upper and lower is as 3 to 2. Of any two notes a major third apart as 5 to 4, and a minor third as 6 to 5. We see then that the perfect consonances, the 8th, 5th, and 4th, have the simplest relationship, 2 to 1, 3 to 2, 4 to 3. Next in order come the imperfect consonances, the major and minor thirds, 5 to 4, and 6 to 5; in no case is a higher figure than 6 required. From these relationships the major diatonic scale can easily be constructed, and then if the relationships between each note of the scale and the succeeding one be taken, it will be found that the intervals between c and d, f and g, a and b are equal, that d to e and g to a are slightly smaller and that e to f and b to c are alike. The former are called tones, either major or minor, and the last two semitones.

adufe (ä-dhoo′-fĕ), Sp. Tambourine. adufero (fā′-rō). Player of it.
A-dur (ä-door), G. The key of A major.
æ′rophone. A kind of harmonium. ængstlich (ĕnkst-lĭkh), G. Anxiously.
æol′harmon′ica. A kind of seraphine.
Æo′lian. 1. Vide MODES. 2. The fifth of the authentic Gregorian modes. 3. An automatic reed instrument in which the performer controls the time, the stops, and the expression.
Æo′lian Harp or Lyre. An instr. inv. by Kircher in the 17th century. It is usually a box set in a window and fitted with 6 or more strings of silk or gut, tuned in unison, passing over bridges about ¾-inch high. The strings are so arranged that the air causes vibration among them. The varying humours of the wind produce a strangely sweet and various harmony, the different overtones being audible in a shifting concord of eerie beauty.
Æolian mute. A combination of the pitch-pipe and mute.
Æolian pianoforte. A piano inv. by T. Gilbert about 1850, and provided with free reeds and a bellows for giving the piano a sustaining power. æoli′na. 1. A small free-reed mouth instr., inv. by Wheatstone, 1829. 2. An organ-stop.
æolo′dicon or æolo′dion, Gr. A keyed instr. in which the tone is produced by steel springs, put in vibration by bellows. æolomelo′dicon. The same instrument with brass tubes to reinforce the springs. æolopan′talon. An æolodicon combined with a piano.
Æolsharfe (ā′-ôls-här′-fĕ), G. Æolian harp.
Æolsklavier (ā′-ôls-klä-fēr), G. A keyboard wind instr., inv. 1825, by Altered Chords.

By Charles W. Pearce, Mus. Doc.

A CHORD originally formed by a combination of notes belonging to the Diatonic Scale of any key can be chromatically altered by the addition of an accidental ♯, ♭, or ♮, to one or more of its intervals. A chord ceases to be chromatic when it induces modulation: being then a diatonic chord in the new key. In modern harmony, the combinational tendency of the Diatonic Scale is to arrange itself in a perpendicular series of thirds above the 5th degree or dominant of the scale, according to this formula: ¶Reckoned from the lower note (or root) the intervals are: 1. Major 3d; 2. Perfect 5th; 3. Minor 7th; 4. Major (or minor) 9th; 5. Eleventh (compound 4th); 6. Major (or minor) 13th (compound 6th). ¶Thus the first sign of chromatic alteration is the interchangeability of the major and minor 3d and 6th of the scale. The harmonic formula shown in Fig. 1 can be built up on the dominant notes of the two adjacent keys, (viz.: those keys having one sharp or one flat more or less than the signature of the tonic key). And as these additional formulæ can be used in the tonic key without modulation to either of its adjacent keys, their roots are conveniently called supertonic and tonic to show their relationship to the scale of the tonic. ¶The supertonic root is dominant of the next sharp key. ¶The tonic root is dominant of the next flat key.

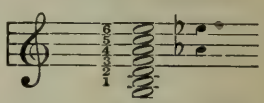

Fig. 1. — The small black notes indicate those intervals above the Dominant which are most susceptible of chromatic alteration.

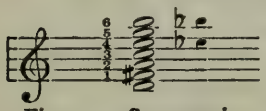

Fig. 2.—Supertonic Formula.

¶In the supertonic formula the necessary major 3d of the root (1 of the series) is an invariable chromatic alteration. The interchangeability of the major and minor 3d of the scale (4 of the series) is a confirmation of No. 6 of the Dominant formula (Fig. 1). The interchangeability of the major and minor 7th of the scale (6 of the series) is the characteristic chromatic alteration of the supertonic formula. ¶In the tonic formula the necessary minor 7th of the root (3 of the series) is an invariable chromatic alteration. The interchangeability of the major and minor 6th of the scale (6 of the series) is a confirmation of No. 4 of the Dominant formula (Fig. 1). The interchangeability of the major and minor 2d of the scale (4 of the series) is the characteristic chromatic alteration of the tonic formula. ¶ From the harmonic formulæ shown in Figs. 1, 2, 3, the chromatic scale is derived. This chromatic scale is the same for both major and minor keys having the same tonic; but the difference of key signature induces changes in the number of accidentals used. Compare Figs. 4 and 5. ¶ With the introduction of the chromatic element into harmony, the absolute distinction of major and minor disappears, and the key tonality becomes one. ¶ To facilitate the notational convenience of the chromatic element in harmony, the enharmonic equivalents of several degrees of the chromatic scale are freely admitted. ¶ Chromatic alteration is chiefly observable in triads and in chords of the seventh with their inversions. ¶ Fig. 6 shows the triads on the seven degrees of the diatonic scale. Fig. 7 shows how these triads may be chromatically altered in the same key without necessitating modulation to any other key.

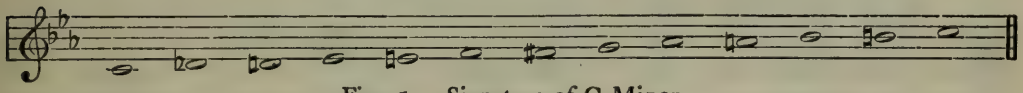

Fig. 5.—Signature of C Minor.

¶ Of these Nos. 1, 4, 18, 19, and 28, show an enharmonic substitution of C sharp for D flat; Nos. 4, 5, 11, 22, and 25 have G sharp instead of A flat; Nos. 10, 21, 25, and 34 have D sharp for E flat; Nos. 3 and 15, have G flat for F sharp; and No. 30 has C flat for B. It may also be remarked that Nos. 30 and 15 are the only triads of the series which have all three of their notes altered from the notation of the diatonic scale of C ; but it will be observed that in No. 30 two of these altered notes (A flat and E flat) are the notes shown in Fig. 1 to be those first susceptible of chromatic alteration in the key of E ; and in No. 15 two of the altered notes belong to the supertonic formula shown in Fig. 2. A glance at Fig. 7 is sufficient to show that "enharmonic substitution" is only made use of in modern music in order to throw the altered chords into an easily recognizable harmonic shape such as triads or sevenths (or their inversions). ¶ Distinguishing names of a purely fanciful character have been given to the first inversions of several of the chords in Fig. 7 (see Fig. 8). ¶ One other triad containing three altered notes remains to be shown—this can be written either as the major triad of the flattened dominant or its enharmonic equivalent, the sharpened subdominant of the key, as in Fig. 9. ¶ Figure 9 exemplifies also the ordinary treatment of chromatically altered triads, viz. : they are usually followed by some form of dominant harmony. ¶ The chords of the seventh built on the seven degrees of the diatonic scale (see Fig. 10) may (like the triads in Fig. 6) undergo chromatic alteration. ¶ A chromatic alteration of Fig. 10, I,

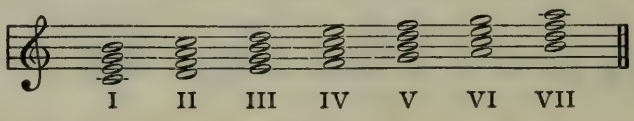

Fig. 10.

III, V, VII, has already been shown in Fig. 3 by the flattening of the leading note of the scale ; and similar alterations of Fig. 10, II, and IV, have been observed in Fig. 2 by the sharpening of the subdominant of the scale (see Fig. 11). ¶ Fig. 11 shows that a chord of the seventh may consist of the following different series of intervals from the bass : ¶I, and II, Major 3d : Perfect 5th : Minor 7th ; III, and IV, Minor 3d : Dim. 5th : Minor 7th ; V, Minor 3d : Perfect 5th : Minor 7th ; VII, Major 3d : Perfect 5th : Major 7th. ¶A further reference to Figs. 1, 2, and 3, shows that the harmonic superposition of three minor 3ds one above the other—that familiar combination of notes known as the chord of the Diminished 7th—is possible over every note of the unaltered Diatonic Scale by chromatic or enharmonic alteration without necessitating modulation. ¶Accordingly each

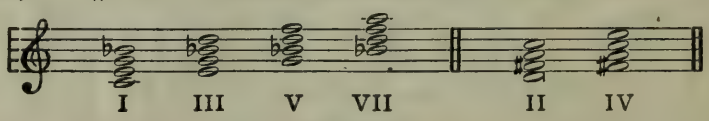

Fig. 11.

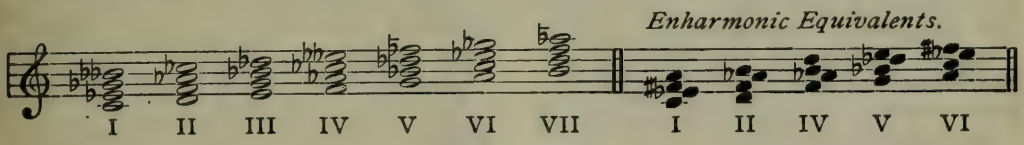

Fig. 12.

note of the Diatonic Scale may bear the chromatic alteration of its own chord of the 7th as shown in Fig. 13. ¶And with the chromatic alteration (Fig. 14) of the root itself the permutations are almost endless. ¶It only remains to give the distinguishing names which have been fancifully applied to one or two of the chromatically altered chords of the 7th in an inverted shape.

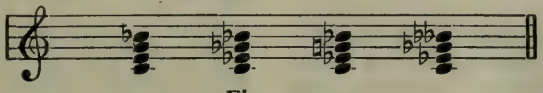

Fig. 13.

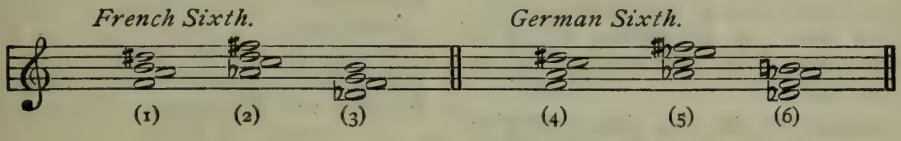

Fig. 14.

¶Of these (1) is the second inversion of VII in Fig. 10, with the sixth of its bass chromatically raised. (2) is the second inversion of II in Fig. 11 with its bass chromatically lowered. (3) is the second inversion of V in Fig. 10, with its bass chromatically lowered. (4) is the first inversion of II in Fig. 10 with its root chromatically raised. (5) and (6) are respectively chromatic alterations of the first inversions of IV in Fig. 11, and VII in Fig. 12. ¶It will be observed that the distinguishing feature of the chords in Fig. 14 is the interval of the Augmented 6th. In the usual resolution of such chords, care should be taken to let the two notes forming the Augmented 6th proceed outwardly, each by step of a semitone.

ca'dence, E. (in F. kă-dăńs), ca'dens, L., cadenza (kä-dĕn-tsä), I., Kadenz (kä-dĕnts'), G. 1. Literally "a fall," hence, the subsidence of a melody or harmony to a point of rest; thence any concluding strain, rising or falling. Harmonic cadences are of the following sorts: (a) When the chord of the dominant is followed by the chord of the tonic, with the roots of both chords in the bass and the root of the second chord doubled in the highest voice, it is called a perfect authentic cadence; when the first chord has other than the root in the bass, or when the highest voice does not take the tonic in the last chord (takes the third for instance), this cadence is called an imperfect authentic cadence. Other names for the authentic cadence are, whole, perfect, full or complete cadence; cadence parfaite (păr-fĕt), F. voll'kommene, or eigentliche (ī-'khĕńt-lĭkh-ĕ)Kadenz, G. (b) When the cadence is formed by a subdominant chord followed with a tonic, the cadence is called plagal (popularly church or amen cadence); cadence plagale (plă-găl), F.; Plagal'kadenz, G. (c) When a subdominant chord is followed by a dominant and a tonic, it is called a mixed cadence. (d) When the mediant is prominent the c. is called a medial cadence. (e) When the tonic or some other chord is followed by the dominant the cadence is called a half-cadence, semi-cadence, imperfect cadence, half-close; c. imparfaite (ăń-păr-fĕt) or c. sur la dominante or c. irrégulière (ēr-rāg-ül-yăr), F.; unvollkommene or Mittel Kadenz, G. (f) When the chord of the dominant apparently preparing a close, is followed by other than the tonic harmony the progression is called a deceptive, avoided, broken, interrupted, irregular or surprise cadence; cadence évitée (ā-vĭ-tā) or interrompue (ăń-tĕr-rôń-pü), or rompue, F.; cadenza d'ingann'o, c. sfuggita (sfood-jē'-tä) or fin'ta, I.; Trug'kadenz or -schluss, or ab'gebrochene K., G. (g) When various modulations are introduced between the dominant and its tonic, the cadence is said to be suspended; or sospesa (sôs-pā'-zä), I. (h) When any dissonant harmony is followed by a consonance the French call this a cadence pleine (plĕn),

(i) A cadence of any kind in which the chords have their roots in the bass is called a radical cadence.

2. When the cadence is highly ornate it is called fioritu'ra or fiorita (fē-ō-rē'-tä). So the word cadenza has in English and Italian, and the word Kadenz in German, a wide use for designating the florid passage preceding the actual cadence. This may be vocal or instrumental, may go up as well as down, and may be written out by the composer or some other musician or left to the skill of the performer. This cadenza usually follows a sustained chord in the second inversion (a 6-4 chord) with a fermate or hold-mark over it (in F. pointe d'orgue). The Germans accordingly call this an auf'gehaltene Kadenz, the F. call it a pointe d'orgue.

3. The French use cadence of a brief trilling ornament as c. brillante, or c. perlée; c. pleine is a trill.

4. Cadence is used of rhythm and velocity also as the "cadence" of double-time in a military sense, is 180 steps to the minute.

castagnetta (käs-tän-yĕt′tä), I., castagnettes (kăs-tīn-yĕt), F., castagnole (käs-tän-yō′-lĕ), castañetas (kăs-tän-yā′tăs), castanuelas (kăs-tăn-yoo-ā′-lăs), Sp., castanheta (käs-tänyā′-tä), Port., castanets, E. Small, concave shells of ivory or hard wood, carried in the hand and rhythmically snapped by dancers in Spain and other countries.

castrato (käs-trä′-tŏ), I. An artificial male soprano or alto ; a eunuch.

catch. A round in which the singers catch up their lines at the cue ; usually with humourous and ambiguous effect.

catena di trilli (kä-tā′-nä), I. A chain of trills.

catgut. A small string for violins, made of the intestines of sheep and lambs, rarely of cats.

catling. A lute-string of smallest size.

cattivo (kät-te′-vō), I. "Bad." c. tempo. The weak beat.

catzoze′rath. Hebrew trumpet.

cauda, L. The tail of a note.

cavallet′to, I. 1. A cabaletta. 2. A small bridge. 3. The break in the registers.

cavata (kä-vä′-tä), I. 1. Tone-production. 2. A recitative ; a cavatina.

cavatina (kä-vä-tē′nä), I., cavatine (kăv-ă-tēn), F. A melody of one strain only.

c-barré (üt-băr-rā), F. Vide BARRED C.

c-clef. The tenor clef ; wherever it stands it indicates middle C.

C-dur (tsā-door), G. The key of C major.

cebell′. A theme in common time with variations and alternation of high and low notes. A sort of English gavotte.

cecilium (sŭ-sē′-lĭ-ŭn̈), F. A key-board reed instr. the size and shape of a cedez (sā-dā), F. Decrease!

celamustel (sā-lā-mü-stĕl), F. A harmonium with unusual imitative stops.

celere (chā'-lā-rĕ), I. Rapid. celerità (rĭ-tä'). Rapidity.

céleste (sā-lĕst), F. Celestial, applied to stops of soft, sweet tone, and to a piano pedal of the same effect.

celestina (chā-lĕs-tē'nä), I. 1. A 4-ft. stop. 2. A tremolo stop in reed organs.

cell. Vide ELLIS (B. D.).

'cello (chĕl'lō). Abbr. and common name of violoncello. cello'ne. A 'cello inv. by Stelzner gaining increased sonority by its method of stringing.

cembalo (chām'bä-lō), cembolo (chām'-bō-lō), I., cembal (säṅ-băl), F. 1. A harpsichord. 2. A cymbal. cembalista, I. A player on either. cembal d'-amour, F. A very large harpsichord. tutto il c., I. Loud pedal. c. onnicordo, I. Proteus. cembalist, E. A player on the harpsichord.

cembanel'la, cennamel'la, I. A flute.

cent, E. The hundredth part of an equal semitone. Vide ELLIS (B. D.).

cento (chān'-tō), cento'ne, I., centon (säṅ-tôn), F. 1. The Gregorian antiphonary. 2. A patchwork or medley.

cercare (chār-kä'-rĕ), I. To search. c. la nota. A common effect in singing where a note taken by skip is lightly anticipated with a short grace.

cer'valet, cervelat. An obsolete clarinet.

Ces (tsĕs), G. The note C flat. Ceses. C double flat.

cesura, cesure. Vide CÆSURA.

cetera (chā'-tĕ-rä), I. A cittern.

c. f. Abbr. of Cantus firmus.

cha chi (chä-chē), Chinese. A chromatic kin.

chacona (chä-kō'-nä), Sp., chaconne (shă-kŭn), F., ciaccona (chäk-kō'-nä), I. A slow dance probably Spanish in origin; in 3-4 time with a groundbass; almost always in major, in contrast with the passacaglia; and generally in form of variations.

chair organ. Vide CHOIR ORGAN.

chalameau, E., chalumeau (shăl-ŭ-mō), F., Chalämau, Chalämaus (shäl'-ä-mows), G. 1. An ancient pipe blown through a calamus, or reed. 2. The low register of the clarinet; as a direction it means "an octave lower," being cancelled by clar. or clarinet. 3. The chanter of a bag-pipe.

chalil (kā-lel), Heb. Hebrew pipe or flute.

chalotte (shă-lôt'). A tube to receive a reed.

chamber music. Music composed for a small auditorium, as a string quartet or a pianoforte trio.

chamber-organ. A cabinet organ.

chang. A Persian harp.

change. 1. A tune rung on a chime. 2. Vide MODULATION. 3. Mutation. 4. (a) changing-note. A note foreign to the immediate harmony and entering (unlike the passing-note) on a strong beat; when two or more appear simultaneously they make a changing-chord. (b) In old counterpoint, a passing discord entering unaccented and then skipping.

changeable. Used of chants that may be sung either in the major or minor mode.

changer de jeu (shäṅ-zhā dŭ zhŭ), F. To change the stops.

chanson (shäṅ-sôṅ), F. A song; a ballad. c. bachique (bă-shēk). A drinking-song. c. des rues (dā-rü). A street-song; a vaudeville. chansonnette (nĕt). A little or short song. chansonnier (sŭn-yā). A song-writer; a book of songs.

chant. 1. Originally a song, and still so meant in the French word (vide below), since the Gregorian time used of vocal music marked by the recitation of many syllables on one tone, and employed for prose texts such as the Canticles and Psalms. There are two sorts of chant, the Gregorian and the Anglican. (a) The Gregorian is a short tune to be repeated in successive sections of prose; it has 8 tones and is in four parts; the intonation (or inchoatio) or opening notes; the first reciting note (or dominant); the mediation; the second reciting note (or dominant); the termination (ending or cadence). (b) The Anglican omits the intonation and differs in the rhythm and mode but has the same monotone recitation with modulations in the middle (mediation) and end (termination). The Anglican has two parts of 3 and 4 measures, 7 in all; this is the single chant, there are also double, triple, and quadruple forms of proportionate length. In chanting, the fitting of the unequal phrases to the music is called pointing, and consists of reciting them strictly within the duration of the notes except those of the 1st and 4th measures which are enlarged to fit the words. Words to be sung to the cadence are cut off from those to be sung to the reciting-note, by a vertical line called the cadence-mark. 2. Any recitation of chant-like character. 3. A tone. 4. A cantus firmus. 5. Vide PLAIN-CHANT. 6. Vide CHANGEABLE. 7. Free-chant. A form in which the hemistichs consist of only 2 measures. 8. Roman Chant-Gregorian. 9. Phrygian chant. One intended to provoke wrath.

chant (shäṅ), F. Song; tune; vocal part. c. amoureux. Love song. c. d'église, or grégorien. Gregorian chant. c. égal, c. en ison. Chant on one tone, or with one interval of two tones. c. figuré. Figured counterpoint. c. funèbre. Funeral song. c. royal. A sacred song; or a prayer for the monarch; the mode in which such prayer was sung. c. sur le livre, i. e., "on the book," vocal counterpoint extemporized on a printed cantus firmus.

chanter, E. 1. One who chants. arch-c. The leader of the chants. 2. The tenor, or melodic pipe of a bag-pipe.

chanter (shäṅ-tā), F. To sing. c. à livre ouvert (ä lēv-roovĕr). To sing at sight. chantant(e). Lyric. basse c. Vide BASS. café c. (kă-fā-chäṅ-täṅ). A music hall. chanté(e) (shäṅ-tā). Sung. chanteur (euse). A male (female) singer. chantonner. Canterellare.

chanterelle (shänt-ŭ-rĕl), F. The highest and smallest string of an instrument.

chanterie (shäṅ-trē), F. chantry, E. A chapel endowed for daily mass.

chanterres (shäṅ-tĕr), F. 10th century ballad-singers.

chan'tor, E. A singer in a cathedral choir.

chantre (shäṅtr), F. Choir-leader. grand c. Precentor. second c. A chorister.

chapeau (shă-pō), F. A "hat;" a tie. c. chinois (shēn-wä). A set of small bells arranged on a frame like a Chinese hat. Cf. CRESCENT.

chapel. Musicians in the retinue of a great personage.

chapelle (shă-pĕl), F. Cappella.

characteristic. Strongly individual in character, or mood, used of a composition (as Charakterstück, G.). c. note or tone. The leading-tone or any tone peculiar to a key. c. chord. The principal chord. Charakterstimme, G. A solo-stop.

charivari (shă-rĭ-vä'-rĭ), F. Vide SHIVAREE.

chasse (shăs), F. The hunt. à la c. In hunting style.

chatsoteroth. A Hebrew trumpet.

che (kā), I. Than, that, which.

che chi (kā-kē). One of the eight species of Chinese music.

chef (shĕf), F. Leader, chief. chef-d'attaque (dăt-tăk). 1. The leader, or first violin. 2. Leader of a chorus. chef-d'œuvre (shā-dŭvr). Masterpiece. chef-d'orchestre (shĕf-dôr-kĕstr). The leader. ch. du chant. Leader of an opera chorus.

cheipour. A Persian trumpet.

chel'idonizing. Singing a spring or "swallow song."

chel'ys. 1. Vide LYRE. 2. Old name for viol.

cheng (chĕng). A Chinese mouth-organ, a gourd with many free reeds; it suggested the invention of the harmonium.

cheng chi (chĕng-chē). One of the eight species of Chinese music.

cherub'ical hymn. The Prisagion.

chest of viols. A group or set of viols, two basses, two tenors, and two trebles.

chest tone, chest voice. The lowest register of the voice.

chevalet (shĕv-ä-lā), F. Bridge.

cheville (shĕ-vē'-yĕ), F. Peg.

chevroter (shĕv-rô-tā), F. To bleat like a goat, hence, chevrotement (shĕ-vrôt-môn̈). A tremor or shake in singing.

chiarenta'na, I. An Italian country dance.

chiarina (kē-ä-rē'nä), I. A clarion.

chiaro (kē-ä'-rō), I. Clear, pure. chiaramen'te. Brightly, purely. chiarezza (rĕd'-zä). Clearness. di c. Clearly.

chiave (kē-ä'-vĕ), I. 1. A clef. 2. Key. 3. Tuning-key. 4. A failure. 5. c. maestro. The fundamental key or note.

chiavette (vĕt'-tĕ), I. pl. Transposing clefs of the 16th century; of which the high c. indicated that its line was to be read a third higher, the low c., a third lower. Thus the C clef might indicate e or e♭; or a, or a♭.

chickera (kē'-kĕ-rä) or chikarah. A Hindu bow instrument.

chiesa (kē-ä'-zä), I. A church. da c. For the church, or in sacred style, as sonata or concerto da chiesa.

chiffre (shĭfr), F. A figure in thorough bass. basse chiffrée (shĭf-frā). Figured bass.

chifonie (shē-fō-nē'), F. Old name for hurdy-gurdy.

chime. A set of bells tuned to a scale. chime-barrel. Portion of the mechanism for ringing a chime.

chimney. A tube in the cap of a stopped pipe.

Chinese flute. Bamboo flute.

Chinese hat. Vide CHAPEAU.

Chinese scale. Five notes without semitones; the music is written on five perpendicular lines, the pitches indicated by distinctive names.

chinnor, chinor. Vide KINNOR.

chirimia (chē-rē-mē'-ä), Sp. The oboe; clarion.

chirogym'nast. A mechanical contrivance for exercising the fingers.

chi'roplast (kī'rō). A device of gloves and bars, inv. 1814 by Logier, to keep the hands and fingers of piano-players in the right position.

chitarra (kē-tär'-rä), I. 1. A guitar, a cithara. c. coll' arco. A violin with guitar-shaped body. chitarris'ta. One who plays on the guitar. chittarrina (rē'-nä). Small Neapolitan guitar. chitarro'ne. A double guitar.

chiterna (kē-tĕr'-nä), I. Quinterna.

chiuso (kē-oo'-zō), I. Closed. Vide CANON and BOCCA. chiuden'do. Closing.

Chladni's figures. Vide NODAL FIGURES.

choeur (kŭr), F. Choir, chorus. à grand c. For full chorus.

choice note. An alternative note.

choir. 1. A body of singers usually in a church. 2. Their place in the church. 3. A subdivision of a chorus or orchestra. c. organ. Vide ORGAN. grand c. The combination of all the reed-stops.

Chor (kôr), G. Same as Choir 1, 2, 3; also on the piano, or organ, a unison, i. e., all the strings or pipes belonging to one digital or pipe; hence a piano with 3 strings to each tone is dreichörig.

chora'gus, chore'gus (kō). The donor of a choral or dramatic work. At Oxford the director of Church music.

cho'ral. Pertaining to a choir or chorus. choral service. A service in which the entire liturgy is intoned or chanted.

cho'rale, Choral (kō-räl'), G. 1. Choral psalm or hymn. 2. Early German-Protestant hymn.

chora'leon. Vide ÆOLOMELODICON.

choraliter (kō-räl'-ĭ-tĕr), choralmässig (mĕs-sikh), G. In choral style.

Choramt (kôr'-ämt), G. Choral service.

choraul'es. A Greek flutist.

chord. 1. A string. 2. Vide VOCAL C. 3. A combination of three or more tones, whether pleasant or discordant.

The chords which are the building-material of all our music are made up of thirds laid brick-wise one upon another. A single third is not counted a chord, two thirds (for instance the two intervals, g-b-d) make up a triad; another third (d to f) makes a chord, called a seventh (g-b-d-f) because the interval (q. v.) from g to f is a seventh; adding another third gives a chord of the ninth or a ninth chord (g-b-d-f-a), two other additions give the chords of the eleventh and thirteenth (g-b-d-f-a-c-e) (these last are usually cacophonous, and their existence as special chords is denied by some theorists). To add another third brings us back, on the tempered scale, to g, from which the chord grew and which is known as the fundamental or root of the chord.

Chords are distinguished in mode, as major or minor, from the majority or minority of their intervals, a minor triad differing from a major in having a minor third, the fifth being perfect in both cases. When the chord has been constructed as above (g-b-d-f) it is said to be in the first or root or fundamental or perfect position; it may re-appear with any of its notes as the lowest (though g always remains the root). When the 3d (b) is in the bass, it is said to be in the 2d position; when the fifth (d), it is in its 3d position. With any of its notes other than the root in the bass the chord is said to be inverted. The names of these inversions have been cumbrously taken from the intervals between the lowest note and the others, no interval being stated in terms of over an octave, the greatest interval being named first, and some of the intervals being unmentioned, especially those of doubled notes: thus the intervals in that inversion of a seventh chord in which the seventh is in the bass might be, counting upward, 11 (-4), 16 (-2), 20 (-6), but it would be called, for short, a 4-2 chord, or chord of the second and fourth.

In the following table the names of all the inversions are given. In thorough-bass these inversions are indicated by Arabic numerals above the bass notes.

A triad in the root or fundamental position is marked —$\frac{5}{3}$ or $\frac{8}{3}$ or 5.

A triad in the 1st inversion is called a chord of the 6th and marked 6.

A triad in the 2d inversion is called a chord of the 4th and 6th or a six-four chord and marked $\frac{6}{4}$.

A 7th chord in the root or fundamental position is marked 7 or $\frac{7}{5}$.

A 7th chord in the 1st inversion is called a chord of the 5th and 6th or a six-five chord, and marked $\frac{6}{5}$ or $\frac{6}{5}$.

A 7th chord in the 2d inversion is called a chord of the 3d, 4th and 6th, or a four-three chord and marked $\frac{6}{4}$ or $\frac{4}{3}$.

A 7th chord in the 3d inversion is called a chord of the 2d and 4th or a four-two chord and marked $\frac{4}{2}$ or $\frac{6}{4}$.

A 9th chord in the root or fundamental position is marked 9 or $\frac{9}{7}$ $\frac{9}{5}$ according as the $\frac{}{3}$ $\frac{}{3}$ 5th or 7th is omitted.

A line or dash through any Arabic numeral as 2 means that the note it represents is sharpened; it may be also preceded by a natural or flat. A sharp or flat standing over a bass note means that the third of the chord is to be sharpened or flattened; a dash or horizontal line following a numeral continues its tone in the next chord.

The character (but not the inversion) of chords may be indicated by Roman numerals indicating the degree of the scale on which they are founded, the scale being noted by a large letter for major (as C), and a small for minor (as c). Thus IV means a triad on the fourth degree with a major third and perfect fifth; iv. a triad on the fourth degree with minor 3d and perfect fifth. An accent after the numeral indicates an augmented fifth, as IV′; a small cipher indicates a diminished fifth, as VII°; a small 7 indicates a chord of the seventh. These devices are an heirloom from an age of little modulation and formal counterpoint; they were shorthand then, but to our music they are handcuffs. They have only a dry text-book career, and alert theorists are rapidly denying them the right even to this existence.

Other kinds of chords are characteristic, the leading chord; chromatic, containing a chromatic tone; common, a triad; accidental, produced by anticipation or suspension; altered, having some tone chromatically changed with modulatory effect (one of the bugaboos of the theorists), vide ALTERED; anomalous, vide ANOMALY; augmented, having an augmented fifth; broken, vide BROKEN; derivative, formed by inversion; diatonic, a triad; diminished, having an imperfect 5th and diminished 7th; dominant, the triad or 7th chord on the dominant; doubtful, equivocal, resolvable in many ways, as the diminished 7th; imperfect, having an imperfect fifth, or having some tone omitted; leading, the dominant chord; related or relative, containing a tone in common; solid, opposed to broken; threefold, a triad; transient, modulatory.

chord′a, L. A string; a note. c. characteristica. The leading note. c. dominant septima. The dominant chord of the seventh; no′na, the ninth. chordæ essentia′les. The tonic, third and fifth. chordæ voca′les. Vocal chords.

chordaulo′dian, chordomelo′dion. A large automatic barrel organ, inv. by Kaufmann, 1812.

Chordienst (kôr′-dēnst), G. Choral service. Chordirektor. A director who trains a chorus at the opera house.

chordom′eter. A gauge for measuring strings.

Chöre (kār′ĕ), G. plural. Choirs, choruses.

Chorist′, G., choriste (kô-rēst), F., chorister, E. 1. A leader of a choir. 2. A choral singer. Chorsänger, C.-schüler, C.-knabe (kôr′-knä-bĕ), G. Choir-boy.

Chorstimme (kôr-shtĭm-mĕ), G. Chorus part.

Chorton (kôr-tōn), G. "Choir-pitch." 1. The pitch at which choruses formerly sang in Germany. 2. Choral tune.

chorus. 1. A company of singers; especially in opera, etc., the supporting body of vocalists who do not sing solos. 2. A composition for a chorus, usually in 4 parts—a "double chorus" requires 8 parts. 3. A refrain. 4. The compound stops. 5. The bagpipe, or drone-pipe. 7. Marine trumpet. 8. The free-staves of the crwth. chorusmaster. The chief singer in a chorus.

choutarah. Vide TAMBOURA.

Chris'te eleison (ā-lā'-ē-sōn), Gr. "Christ have mercy;" part of the Kyrie.

Christmesse, Christmette (krēst'-mĕt-tĕ), G. Christmas matins.

chro'ma, Gr. 1. A chromatic modification of the Greek tetrachord. 2. A sharp or a flat. c. duplex. A double sharp. 3. c. diesis. A semitone. 4. (Or c. simplex.) An eighth note. c. duplex. A 16th note.

chromam'eter. A tuning-fork.

chromat'ic, chromatique (tēk), F., chromatisch (mä'-tĭsh), G., cromat'ico, I. 1. Literally, "coloured" and implying a foreign or added tinge, specifically that given to the sober diatonic notes natural to a key, by an unrelated sharp, flat or natural that is not of modulatory effect. A whole scale may be chromatic (i. e., progress by semitones); a chord, an interval or a progression altered by a flat or sharp is called chromatic, and the process of so modifying it is called c. alteration; an instr. playing semitones is called c., and the signs themselves that sharpen or flatten a tone are called c. signs, or chromatics. 2. Vide MODES.

chronom'eter. Metronome, particularly Godfrey Weber's.

chronomètre (krôn-ô-mĕtr), F. A form of monochord inv. 1827, by Raller, to teach piano-tuning.

chrotta (krot'ta). Vide CROWD.

church cadence. The plagal cadence.

church modes. Vide MODES.

chute (shüt), F. An obsolete sliding embellishment.

ciaconne. Vide CHACONNE.

ciaramella (chä-rä-mĕl'-lä), I. A bagpipe.

cicogna (chē-cōn-yä), I. Mouthpiece. cicu'ta, L. A Pan's pipe.

cicutrenna (chē-koo-trĕn'-na), I. A pipe.

cifrato (chē-frä'-to), I. Figured.

cimbalo (chēm'-bä-lō), I. 1. Cymbal. 2. Tambourine. 3. Harpsichord or dulcimer.

cimbalon. Vide CZIMBALON.

Cimbel (tsĭm'-bĕl), G. A high mixture stop. Cimbelstern. A group of star-shaped cymbals attached to old organs.

cinelli (chē-nĕl'-lē), I., Cinellen (tsē-nĕl'-lĕn), G. Cymbals.

Cink (tsĭnk), G. 1. A small reed-stop. 2. Vide ZINK.

cinq (săṅk), F., cinque (chēn'kwĕ), I. Five; the fifth voice or part in a quintet. a c.—in 5 parts. cinquepace (săṅk-păs). Old French dance in quintuple time.

cin'yra. Old name for harp.

ciphering. The sounding of organ pipes, when the keys are not touched, due to leakage. cipher system. An old notation using numerals instead of letters.

circle of fifths. A method of modulation by dominants. Vide TEMPERAMENT and preliminary essay, INTRODUCTION TO MUSIC.

circular canon. A canon going through the major keys.

circular scale. The curved row of tuning-pins.

Cis (tsēs), G. The note C sharp. Cis-is. C double sharp. Cis-dur. C ♯ major. Cis-moll. C ♯ minor.

cistel'la, L. A dulcimer.

cistre (sēstr), F. Cither.

cistrum, L. Vide SISTRUM.

citara (chē-tä'-rä), I. Cither.

citaredo (thē-tä-rā'-dhō), Sp., citarista (chē-tä-rēs'-tä), I. A minstrel, a player upon the harp or cittern.

citerna (chē-tĕr'-nä), I. Quinterna.

cith'ara, L. The large lyre from which the guitar and zither are derived. c. biju'ga. A 2-necked c. c. hispanica. The Spanish guitar. keyed c. The clavicitherium. cith'aris. The theorbo. citharoe'dus. A singing lutenist.

cith'er, cithera, cithern, cittern, cythorn. An old guitar-like instr., strung with wire and played with a plectrum; sometimes with a bow, or by means of keys.

cito'le. A dulcimer.

cit'tam. Ancient English guitar.

civetteria (chē-vĕt-tĕ-rē'-ä), I. Coquetry.

clair (klăr), F. Clear, shrill, loud.

claircylindre (klăr-si-lăn̆dr), F. Vide CLAVICYLINDER.

clairon (klăr-ôn̆), F. 1. Trumpet. 2. Reed-stop. 3. Vide CLARINET. 4. A bugler.

clang. 1. A bell-tone. 2. In acoustics a fundamental tone with its group of over and under-tones, their completeness giving the clang-colour or clang-tint, Tyndall's word.

clang-key, E., Klangschlüssel, G. Riemann's word for his system of chord designation intended to supplant thorough-bass as a better method of describing a combination by its qualities. Intervals are reckoned, not from the bass, but from the principal tone of each chord. He uses Arabian figures for major, Roman for minor chords, the former indicating an interval upwards from a tone, the latter an interval below, as follows: 1 (I). Principal tone. 2 (II). Major 2d. 3 (III). Major 3d. 4 (IV). Perfect 4th. 5 (V). Perfect 5th. 6 (VI). Major 6th. 7 (VII). Minor 7th. 8 (VIII). Octave. 9 (IX). Major 9th. 10 (X). Major 10th. < indicates raising a tone by a semitone. > Lowering it a semitone; "tones doubly raised or lowered being inconceivable musically." The major chord (or upper-clang) is abbreviated + (for 5-3-1), the minor chord (or under-clang) is abbr. o (for I-III-V)—thus a+ or ao. Feeling that, for instance, the tone C in the major triad a♭-c-e♭ has a different meaning from the tone c in the minor triad a-c-e, he has coined for this "substitution of clangs" the word Klangvertretung (kläng'-fĕr-trā'-toongk). clang-succession is a chord-progression with regard to its clang-meaning, that is, a tonality which does not consider every chord in its proper absolute key but in its relation to some other chord to which it plays the part of principal or related clang. Fuller particulars of this interesting philosophy must be sought in Riemann's Dictionary of Music, and other of his writings.

claquebois (klăk-bwä), F. A xylophone.

clar. Abbr. of Clarinet.

clarabel'la, L. A soft-voiced wood organ-stop.

claribel flute. 1. A flute. 2. A 4-ft. clarabella.

clar'ichord, clarico'lo, clar'igold. An old harp, or a clavichord.

Clarin (klä-rēn', G. In F. klăr-ăn̆). 1. A clarion. 2. A 4-ft reed-stop. Clarinblasen. Soft notes of the trumpet.

clar'inet, clarinette (nĕt), F., clarinetto, I. An important wood-wind instr. with a single beating reed, cylindrical tube and bell. It is in effect a stopped pipe (q. v.) and sounds an octave lower than other wood-wind of its length; it has only the odd-numbered partials in the overtone-scale, and requires a different fingering from the oboe, etc. It has 18 holes, including 13 with keys, by means of which it has a range of 3 octaves and a sixth, which range is sharply divided into four distinct qualities of tone: 1. The highest, or superacute, being (in the normal soprano clarinet in C) d''' -c''''. 2. The high or clarinetto or clarion register (whence the instr. took its name) b'-c'''. 3. The medium, f' -b'♭. 4. The chalumeau (shăl'-ü-mō) or Schalmei (shäl-mī) g-e'; the qualities being respectively. 1. Shrill. 2. Liquid and clear. 3. Veiled and feeble. 4. Rich and sonorous like a contralto voice. The clarinet is a transposing instr.

written in the C clef; it is made in many sizes to adapt it to different keys; the large soprano in C, B♭ (often called simply "clarinet in B") and A; the small soprano in D, E, F, A♭; the alto or barytone in F and E♭, the bass (an octave lower than the sopranos) in C, B♭ and A. The soprano in B♭ is the most brilliant; the soprano in A is very tender in tone. The small sopranos are too shrill for use except in military bands in which the clarinet group serves the substantial purpose served by the strings in the orchestra.

The clarinet is an improvement (made by Denner of Nürnberg, 1700) upon the old chalumeau or Schalmei, whose name still persists in the low register of the clarinet. The ch. had a single, beating reed, a cylindrical tube and nine holes, each of which produced a tone giving a compass of these natural tones, f -a′. By placing a hole and a key at a nodal point dividing the tube into 3 equal parts, overblowing became possible in the twelfth, i. e., the 3d partials (vide ACOUSTICS). This new register was called clarinetto or clarion for its clarity of tone, and from this word came the present name of the instr., all of whose gaps have been filled by means of the Böhm key-mechanism, etc., though the fingering is still difficult and a slip gives a squawk called the "goose" or couac.

2. A soft 8-ft. reed-stop. clarinet flute. A flue-stop with holes in the cover.

clarino (klä-rē′-nō), I., clarion, E. (in F. klăr-yôṅ). 1. A small trumpet. 2. A 4-foot organ reed-stop, an octave above the trumpet. 3. The trumpet parts in score. c. harmonique. A reed-stop.

clarionet. Obsolescent spelling of clarinet.

clarionet-flute. A stop.

clarone (klā-rō′-nĕ), I. A clarinet.

clàrseach (klär′-säkh), clarseth (klär′-sĕ). The old Irish harp.

claus′ula, L. A dance.

clavecin (klăv-săṅ), F. 1. The harpsichord. 2. The keys a bell-ringer plays on. c. acoustique. An instr. of the 18th cent. imitating various instruments.

Claviatur (klä-fĭ-ä-toor′), G. The key-board.

clav′ichord. Prototype of the piano, the strings being set in vibration not by hammers, but by small brass wedges (called tangents) on the ends of the keys; these set only one section of the string in vibration.

clavicyl′inder. An instr. inv. by Chladni, about 1800, consisting of cylinders of glass attuned.

clavicymbalum, L., clavicem′balo, I. The harpsichord.

clavicythe′rium, L. An upright harpsichord of the 13th Century.

Clavier (klăv-yā, F., in G. klä-fēr′). 1. The key-board. 2. An old name for the clavichord. 3. c. de récit. The swell manual. 4. In French use, the gamut included in the stave. 5. Vide KLAVIER.

clav′is, L. and G. 1. A key. 2. A clef. 3. A note. 4. Handle of a bellows.

clé (klā), clef (klā), F. (In English pron. "klĕf.") A florid form of a letter, used as a symbol with a fixed note-meaning, from which it takes its name, as the so-called "c" clef denoting that whichever line it grips is middle C (c′). The most common clefs are the "G" (or treble c. or clef sol, or clef descant, or violin c.) which is always seen now on the 2d line; the F. (or bass or c. de fay). (These two are those used in piano music.) The C (or clef d'ut) is used movably and is called the soprano (or German soprano) or discant c.; or the alto; or the tenor (or mean or counter-tenor) clef, according as it is placed on the first, the 3d or the 4th line, in each of which cases it marks middle C. The C clef is found in various forms and is still used in music for the 'cello and other instruments and in contrapuntal writing.

The obsolete clefs are the F on the 3d line (the barytone clef), the C on the 2d line (the mezzo soprano), the G on the 1st line (the French violin, or French treble clef).

clear flute. Organ-stop.

clef d'accordeur (dăk-kôr-dŭr), F. Tuning-hammer.

cloc'ca, L., cloche (klôsh), F. A bell. clochette. A hand-bell.

clock. To swing the clapper of a stationary bell.

clog, Irish. A shuffling dance.

cloro'ne, I. Alto clarinet.

close (klōz). A cadence.

close harmony or position. That in which the chords spread over little space; when a chord extends beyond an octave it is said to be in open position.

close play. Lute-playing in which the fingers remain on the strings.

close score. That with more than one voice on a stave.

C-moll (tsā-môl), G. The key of C minor.

c. o. Abbr. of choir-organ.

coalotino (kō-ä-lôt-tē'nō), I. Concertino.

cocchina (kôk-kē'-na), I. An Italian country-dance.

co'da, I. "Tail." 1. An additional termination to the body of a composition, ranging from a few chords to a long passage. 2. The stem of a note.

codet'ta. 1. A short coda. 2. A short passage in fugue, between the end of the subject and the entry of the answer.

co'don, Gr. 1. A little bell. 2. The bell of a trumpet.

coelesti'no (or-a). A name formerly applied to various keyed instruments.

coffre (kôfr), F. The frame of an instrument.

cogli (kōl'-yē), coi (kō'-e), col, coll', colla, collo, I. Forms of the preposition "con," and the definite article meaning "with the."

colachon (kō-lă-shôṅ), F. An instr. like a lute with longer neck.

colascione. Vide CALASCIONE.

collet (kôl-lā), F. The neck, as of a violin.

collinet (kôl-lĭ-nā). A flageolet, named from a famous virtuoso on it.

colofo'nia, I., colophane (kôl-ō-făn), F., Colophonium (kô-lô-fō'-nĭ-oom), G., col'ophony, E. Resin.

colorato (kō-lō-rä'-to), I. Florid.

coloratura (kō-lō-rä-too'rà) (pl e), I., Coloraturen (kô-lô-rä-too'-rĕn), G. Ornaments and ornamental passages, in vocal or instrumental music; brilliant vocalization.

coloris (kô-lō-rē'), F., Colorit (rēt'), G. The "colour"-scheme of a work.

colour. 1. Vide NOTATION. 2. Timbre. 3. Literally colour; to some minds each tone, or each key, has a distinctive actual colour, as C is red to some, C ♯ scarlet, C ♮ blood red, C ♭ darker, etc. The Editor has even met a painter who claimed the ability to play any picture or paint any composition.

colpo, di, I. "At a blow," abruptly.

combinational tones. Vide RESULTANT TONES.

combination mode. The ambiguous mode resulting from resolving a dominant chord in a minor key to the tonic major.

combination pedals. Vide COMPOSITION PEDALS.

come (kō'mĕ), I. As, like, the same as. c. prima. As before, as at first. c. sopra. As above. c. sta. Exactly as it stands.

co'mes, L. 1. In fugue, the companion or answer, to the dux (leader), or subject. 2. In canon, the consequent.

comiquement (kō-mēk-mäṅ), F. Comically.

com'ma. 1. A breathing-mark. 2. A theoretical term indicating the minute difference between two tones nearly identical. (a) The comma syntonum, or c. of Didymus, is that between a major and a minor tone 80 : 81. (b) The comma ditonicum, or c. of Pythagoras, is that by which six whole notes with the ratio 9 : 8 exceed the octave, or 531 + : 524 +.

com(m)odamen'te, com'(m)odo, I. With ease.

common. Vide CHORD and TURN. c. measure or time. 4-4 time.

compass. Range of a voice or instr.

compiacevole (kôm-pĭä-chā'-vō-lĕ), compiacevolmen'te, I. Pleasant-(ly).

complainte (kôn-plănt), F. A religious ballad.

com'plement. That quantity or interval which fills up an octave, as a fourth is c. to a fifth.

complementary part. In fugue, the part added to the subject and counter-subject.

complete. Vide CADENCE.

completo'rium, L., com'pletory, E. 1. An Ambrosian anthem supplementary to the antiphon. 2. A compline.

complin(e), L. Vide HORAE CANONICAE.

componis'ta, I. A composer.

compo'num. A machine inv. by Winkel to present a given theme in endless variety of forms.

composition, I. The act, art or science of writing original music.

composition pedals. Pedals inv. by J. C. Bishop, connected with a mechanism for bringing into use several stops simultaneously.

composizione di tavolino (kôm-pō-zē-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ dē tä-vō-lē'-nō), I. Table-music.

compos'to, I. Composed, quiet.

compound. Of intervals, those exceeding the octave. c. stop. One having more than one rank of pipes. c. measures or times. Those which contain more than one principal accent, as 6-4, 9-8, etc.

compressed score. Close score.

comprimaria (kôm-prē-mä'-rĭ-ä), I. The next in rank to a prima donna.

con (kōn), I. "With;" it is often combined with the article "the," vide COGLI, etc. con. 8va, vide OTTAVA.

concave pedals. Radiating pedals.

concealed. Vide HIDDEN.

concento (kôn-chĕn'-to), I. 1. Concord. 2. Non-arpeggiation.

concen'tus, L. 1. Concord, vide ACCENTUS.

concert (in F. kôn-săr'). 1. A public performance. 2. c. spirituel. Sacred concert. Dutch c. An improvised chorus of little regularity and much hilarity. 3. A concerto. 4. A set of instrs. of different size, vide CHEST OF VIOLS.

concertante (kôn-chĕr-tän'-tĕ), I. 1. A piece in which each part is alternately principal, as a duo concertante. 2. A concerto for two or more instrs., with orchestral accomp. c. style. In brilliant concert style. c. parts. Parts for solo instrs. in an orchestral work.

concertato (tä'-tō), I., concerted, E. Used of music for several voices or instruments.

concert-grand. The largest size of the piano.

concertina (kŏn-sĕr-tē'nä). Chas. Wheatstone's improved accordeon (q. v.) inv. 1829. It is double-action, producing tone on being drawn out or compressed. Its 2 key-boards are hexagonal, and the English treble c. (much superior to the German) has a range of four octaves from g below middle C with all the chromatic tones. The c is to be had also in alto, tenor, bass and double-bass ranges.

concertino (kôn-chĕr-tē'-nō), I. 1. A small concerto. 2. Principal as opposed to ripieno, e. g., violino c., principal violin. 3. The first-violin part.

concertis'ta, I. Virtuoso.

Concertmeister (kôn-tsĕrt-mīshtĕr), G. 1. The leader. 2. The first of the first-violins.

concerto (kôn-chĕr'-tō), I. 1. A concert. 2. A composition for one—two (double) three (triple)—or more solo instruments with orchestral accompaniment. It is usually in sonata form with modifications to allow of virtuosity, notably the cadenzas played by the performer of the solo part just before the concluding tutti of the first and last movement. Formerly the word was applied to concertante. Torelli is credited with the modern form. The c. without orchestral accompaniment (c. a. solo) is very rare. c. da camera. Chamber concerto, opposed to grosso. c. da chiesa (kĭ-ā′-zä) or c. ecclesiastico. (a) In Viadana's work, merely motets with accomp. for organ. (b) A concerto for church use. c. doppio. a c. for two or more instruments. c. gros′so. A composition for full orchestra. c. spirituale. Sacred concert.

concert pitch. Vide A, of which the French standard is now generally adopted. By this all the tones are regulated. In England c. p. refers to a pitch almost half a tone higher than the international pitch.

Concertspieler (kôn-tsĕrt′-shpē-lĕr), G. A solo or concerto player. Concert′stück (shtük). 1. A concert-piece. 2. A concerto.

concitato (kôn-chĭ-tä′-tō), I. Agitated.

conclusione (kloo-zĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. Conclusion.

concord. An harmonious combination. concordant. 1. Harmonious. 2. In French use (pron. kôn-kôr-dän̆), a barytone.

con-dissonant. Used of a triad which is consonant with each of two mutually dissonant triads.

Conducten (dook′-tĕn), G. Wind-tubes.

conductor. The time-beater and director of a chorus or orchestra.

conduct′us, L. That form of discant in the 12th century in which not only the improvised counterpoint of the singers was original, but the central melody (or cantus firmus) also.

conduit (kôn̆-dwē), F. 1. A wind-trunk. 2. Conductus.

cone-gamba. The bell-gamba.

confinal. Vide FINAL.

conjoint, or conjunct, E., congiunto (joon′-to), I. 1. Used of notes lying immediately next to each other; of motion or succession proceeding regularly by single degrees. 2. Applied by the Greeks to tetrachords, in which the highest note of the lower, was also the lowest note of the upper, tetrachord.

connecting note. One common to successive chords.

consecutive. Following in immediate succession. Chiefly applied to progressions of intervals such as perfect fifths and octaves, strictly forbidden in most cases.

conseguente (gwĕn′-tĕ), I., con′sequent, E. In fugue or canon, the imitation or answer of the subject.

conservatoire (kôn̆-sĕr-vä-twär), F., conservato′rio, I., Conservatorium (oom), G., conservatory, E. A school of music.

consolan′te, I. Consoling. consolatamen′te. Cheeringly.

con′sonance, E., consonanza (nän′-tsä), I. An accord of sounds, not only agreeable but restful, cf. DISSONANCE. imperfect c. A major or minor third or sixth. perfect c. An octave, fifth or fourth. consonant. Harmonious. c. chord. One without a dissonant interval.

consort. 1. To be in accord. 2. A set, as of viols, cf. CHEST.

constit′uents. Partial tones.

contadines′co, I. Rustic.

contano, I. "They count," of instrs. which "rest."

continua′to (tĭn-oo-ä′-tō), I. Sustained.

continuo, I. Vide BASS (6).

con′tra. Against or under. As a prefix to names of instruments, or of organ-stops, it indicates a pitch an octave lower than the standard, as Contraposaune, contra-octave. (Vide PITCH). contra-arco. Bowing against the rule. contra-tempo. Syncopation. contrabass (kôn-träbäs). The double-bass. contrabombarde. A 32-ft. stop in the pedal.

contraddanza (kôn-träd-dän′tsä), I. A country-dance.

contralto (kôn-träl′-tô), I. The deepest female voice. The term means lower than the alto (high), the former name of male soprano.

contrappunto (poon′-tō), I. Counterpoint. contrappuntista. One skilled in cpt. c. alla decima. Double counterpoint in the tenth. c. alla mente. Improvised cpt. alla zoppa, or syncopata. Syncopated cpt. c. doppio. Double cpt. c. doppio alla duo decima. Double cpt. in the twelfth. c. sciolto (shôl′-tō). Free cpt. c. sopra (sotto) il soggetto (sôd-jĕt′-to). Cpt. above (below) the subject.

contrapunct′us, L. Counterpoint. c. flo′ridum, L. Florid cpt. c. in decima gradi. Double cpt. in which the parts move in tenths or thirds below the subject. c. simplex. Simple cpt.

con′trapuntal. Relating to counterpoint. contrapunt′ist. One skilled in counterpoint.

contrario (trä′-rĭ-ō), I. Contrary. Vide MOTION. contrary bow. A reversed stroke.

contrasogetto (sôd-jĕt′-to), I. Counter-subject.

contratenor. Vide COUNTER-TENOR.

Contratöne (kôn′trä-tā-nĕ), G. The deeper bass tones.

contraviolo′ne, I. Double-bass.

contre (kôṅtr), F. Contra, or counter, as contrebasse. Double-bass. c. éclisse. Lining. c. partie. A part contrasted with another, as bass and soprano. contrepoint (kôntr-pwăṅ). Counterpoint. contresujet. Counter-subject. contre-temps. Syncopation.

contredanse (kôṅ-trŭ-dăṅs), F. A country-dance, in which the dancers stand in opposite ranks.

conver′sio, L. Inversion.

coper′to, I. 1. Covered (as fifths). 2. Muffled (as drums).

cop′ula, I. 1. A coupler. 2. A stop requiring a coupler.

cor. Abbr. of cornet.

cor (kôr), F. Horn. cor-alt. Alto horn. cor-basse. Bass-horn. c-anglais. "English horn," in reality an alto oboe (q. v.). c. de basset. Basset-horn. c. de chasse (shăs). Hunting-horn; the French horn. c. de postillon. Postilion's horn. c. de signal. A bugle. c. de nuit. The Cremona stop. c. de vaches. Cow-horn. c. omnitonique. A Sax-horn.

corale (kō-rä′lĕ), I. Chora.

coranto (kō-rän′-tō), I. Vide COURANTE.

corda (kôr′-dä), I. A string; una corda, one string, i. e., the soft pedal; due (two) or tre (three) or tutte (all) le corde (the strings), "release the soft pedal!" In violin-playing, due-corde, means "play the same note on 2 strings simultaneously;" 1ma. 2da, 3za, or 4ta corda, means that the passage is all to be played on the string indicated.

cordatura (too′-ra), I. Vide ACCORD (3).

corde (kôrd), F. A. A string. c. à boyau. Catgut. c. à jour (zhoor). c. à vide (vēd). Open string. c. de luth. A lute-string. c. fausse (fōs). A false string. c. sourde. (soord). A mute-string.

cordier (kôrd-yā), F. cordiera (kôr-dĭ-ā-rä′), I. Tail-piece.

cordomètre (kôr-dō-mĕtr), F. String-gauge.

corifeo (kō-rĭ-fā′-ō), I. Leader of a ballet. corimagistro (mä-jēs′-trō). Leader of a chorus.

corista (kō-rēs′-tä), I. 1. Chorister. 2. Tuning-fork or pitch-pipe.

cormorne. 1. A soft-toned horn. 2. A reed-stop.

corn (kôrn). Welsh. Horn.

cornamusa (kôr-nä-moo′-zä), I., cornemuse (kôrn-müz), F. Bagpipe.

cor′net (not cornet′), E. (in F. kôr-nā), Cornett′, G. 1. Loosely used of the cornet à pistons (q. v.) 2. An obsolete wind instr. of the 15th cent. made straight (diritto or muto) and bent (curvo or torto); the latter was also called cornon or cornetto basso and was the original of the serpent. 3. Various reed-stops as echo c., mounted c., grand c., c. de récit, C. dreifach (or 3-ranked).

corneta (kôr-nā′-tä), cornet′to, I. A 16-ft. reed-stop.

cornet à bouquin (boo-kăń), F. Bugle-horn.

cornet à pistons (kôr-nā tä pēs-tôń), F. A 3-valved chromatic brass instrument of the trumpet family. It has a plebeian voice of great agility. It is a transposing instr. written in the G clef. It is usually in B♭, and has crooks (A, A♭, G). It has a chromatic compass, f♯ -c‴ cor′no, I. Horn. c. alto. A horn of high pitch. c. basso. A bass-horn. c. di basset′to. 1. The basset-horn. 2. A soft-reed stop. c. di caccia (kät′-chä). The hunting or French horn. c. dolce (dōl′chĕ). An organ-stop. c. in B basso. A low B horn. c. inglese (ēn-glā′zĕ). The English horn (vide OBOE). c. ventile (vĕn-tē′-lĕ). Chromatic horn. c. sor′do. A horn with dampers.

cornope′an. 1. Cornet à pistons. 2. An 8-ft. reed-stop.

co′ro, I. and Sp. Chorus. c. della chiesa, I. Church-choir. c. primo. The first chorus.

coro′na, I. A pause or fermate (𝄐).

coronach (kôr′-ō-näkh). A Gaelic dirge.

corps (kôr), F. Body (as of an instrument). c. de ballet (băl-lā). All the dancers in a ballet. c. d'harmonie (dăr-mō-nē). A fundamental chord. c. de musique. A band. c. de réchange. The crook of a horn. c. de voix. Body or range of a voice.

corren′te, I. Vide COURANTE.

Coryphæus, G. 1. The conductor of the chorus. 2. At Oxford, a special instructor in music.

coryphée (kō-rĭ-fā), F. 1. The leader of dancers. 2. A ballet-dancer.

cosaque (kō-săk), F. The Cossack dance.

cotillon (kō-tē-yôń), F. "Petticoat." An elaborate ceremonial dance of many couples, not unlike the German.

couac (kwăk), F. Vide GOOSE.

couched harp. Spinet.

coulé (koo-lā), F. 1. Slurred. 2. A grace note consisting of two or three sliding notes, indicated by a dash between the notes.

coulisse (koo-lēs), F. 1. Slide (vide TROMBONE). 2. Side-scene, wing (of a theatre).

count. A beat. To count time, to measure the beats audibly or mentally.

counter-. A prefix indicating contrast, as counter-tenor (once a name for the alto voice), is higher than the usual tenor; often falsetto or artificial tenor; counter-bass is lower than the usual bass; counter-tenor clef, vide CLEF; counter-subject, vide FUGUE.

counterpoint. Originally notes were called "points;" the literal meaning of counterpoint is therefore "note against (or in accompaniment with) note;" it is loosely used of the combination of independent voices as in a quartet. It is more strictly used (a) of the art of writing simultaneous melodies or (b) of the melodic part added to a given part called the cantus firmus (q. v.). The contrapuntal style differs from the harmonic in that while the latter consists of melody accompanied by chords, the former is a combination of melodic parts. The supreme contrapuntal forms are Canon and Fugue. Of counterpoint there are five species: 1. Note against note —a semibreve against a semibreve. 2. Two notes against one; 3. Four notes against one. 4. Syncopation. 5. Florid counterpoint—a mixture of the preceding species. Counterpoint is also Simple and Double. In the latter, the parts are invertible, i. e., may be transposed an octave, or ninth, tenth, twelfth, etc., above or below one another. Counterpoint is triple (or quadruple) when 3 or 4 parts are mutually invertible.

Counterpoint.

By Homer A. Norris.

THE art of combining melodies is called counterpoint. When a pianist "plays 'Old Hundred' in one hand, and 'Yankee Doodle' in the other" he illustrates the contrapuntal idea. Weingartner's arrangement of Weber's "Invitation to the Dance" represents most ingenious counterpoint. In strict (plain, simple) counterpoint, no combination of notes representing more than three sounds is allowed; no dissonances except passing notes; no chromatics. ¶ Counterpoint is double when it may be correctly used either as an upper, or a lower part; i. e., when it admits of double employment. Double counterpoint may be so written as to invert in the 8th, 9th, 12th, or any other interval. The following is an example of double counterpoint. ¶ Within the confines of strict counterpoint ecclesiastical music reached its loftiest expression through Palestrina, in about 1600. ¶ In modern harmony chords may be built up of three, four, five, and even more different sounds. When the contrapuntal idea is applied to modern harmony, the result is called free counterpoint. Free counterpoint is simply a contrapuntal manipulation of modern harmony, as opposed to strict counterpoint which is limited to chords of three sounds. Bach re-established the counterpoint of Palestrina on the modern harmonic bass. In his fugues the contrapuntal, or polyphonic, idea is found in its most perfect form. ¶ The very essence of Wagner's music is counterpoint. When the melodies of "Die Meistersinger" are brought together in the overture it is modern counterpoint; not an end in itself, but as a means to direct, emotional expression. ¶ So from out this old counterpoint has come a new, which to-day permeates all music. Neither Brahms nor Richard Strauss could exist but for the industry of those early savants, who, piling notes upon notes, laid a foundation for the cathedral of music which has risen majestically under Bach, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Brahms, and Wagner. It is modern counterpoint, counterpoint with a soul in it, which distinguishes all great work to-day and stamps it for posterity.

counterynge ye songe (kown′-tĕring the sŏng) (old E.). Descant.

country-dance. Whatever the etymology, a country-dance is a contradance (in duple or triple time) in which partners are ranged opposite each other.

coup (koo), F. Blow. c. d'archet (dăr-shā). A stroke of the bow. c. de glotte (glôt). A snappy vocal attack. double c. de langue. Double-tonguing. c. de baguette (bă-gĕt). Beat of the drum. c. de cloche (klôsh). Stroke of a bell.

couper le sujet (koo-pā lŭ soo-zhā), F. To cut or contract the subject.

coup′ler. An organ mechanism connecting 2 manuals, or manuals with pedals.

couplet. Two notes occupying the time of a triplet.

courante (koo-rănt), F. "Running," an old dance in 3-2 and 6-4 time. Hence an instrumental piece in the same style. Vide SUITE. The second part of the suite, usually in passage work.

couronne (koo-rŭn), F. A hold.

A reed-stop (also Fagottzug). fagottino (tē'no), I. A small bassoon. Fagottist (fä-gôt-test'), G. fagottista (tēs'-tä), I. A performer on the bassoon. fagotto contro, I. A bassoon, an octave, a fifth, or a fourth lower. fagotto'ne. A large obs. bassoon, an octave lower.

fah. Fa in Tonic sol-fa.

Fähnenmarsch (fā'-nĕn-märsh), G. The march played when the colours are lodged.

faible (fĕb'l) F. Weak. temps f. Weak-beat.

faire (fâr), F. To do, make. f. des fredons. A trill. faites bien sentir la mélodie (fĕt-bĭ-ăn-săn-tēr lä mā-lō-dē), F. Keep the melody very distinct.

fa-la. 1. An old refrain. 2. A song with such refrain, or a dance. falal-el'la, I. A nonsense song.

fall. 1. A cadence. 2. Vide FLY.

falo'tico, I. Fantastic.

falsa (fäl'-sä) (or o), I., false, E., falsch (fälsh), G. False, wrong, out of tune. false accent. Accent removed from the first to the second or fourth beat. f. bordone. (a) Faburden. (b) The reciting-notes. f. cadence. An imperfect or interrupted cadence. f. fifth. An imperfect fifth. f. relation. (a) The appearance simultaneously or consecutively in different voices of the same notes chromatically altered, as C sharp and C flat, implying a disagreement or incompatibility. (b) The appearance of the tritone (q. v.) in different voices. Though strictly forbidden in the text-books, late composers ignore the rule altogether. f. string. An ill-made string giving a bad tone. f. triad. The diminished triad having a false fifth.

Falsett (fäl-zĕt'), G., falset'to, I. 1. The top or artificial register of the voice, having an unnatural or effeminate sound. 2. One who uses this register.

fan'cy. 1. A slight tune. 2. A fantasy.

fandan'go, Sp. A popular Spanish dance in triple time, accompanied with castanets (or tambourine) and guitar, the dance being interpolated between vocal couplets.

fanfare, E. (pron. in F. făn-fâr), fanfara (fän-fä'-rä), I. 1. A trumpet-flourish. 2. A brass-band.

fantaisie (făn-tĕ-zē), F., fantasia (fän-tä-zē'ä), I., Fantasie (fän-tä-zē'), G. 1. Fantasy, caprice, a composition free in spirit and form. 2. An arpeggiated prelude. 3. A potpourri. 4. An improvisation. 5. Formerly a work, vocal or instrumental, full of free imitation free fantasia or fantasy, same as Development. Vide FORM. fantasio'so, I. Fantastic. fantasiren (zē'rĕn), G. To improvise.

fantas'tico, fantasticamen'te, I., fantastique (fän-tăs-tēk), F., fantastisch (fän-täs'-tĭsh), G. Capricious.

faran'dola, I., farandole (făr-ăn-dôl), farandoule (făr-ăn-dool), F. A circle dance in 6-8 time.

farneticamen'te, I. Deliriously.

farsa in musica (moo'zi-ka), I. A burletta.

farsia (fär'sĭ-ä), I. A canticle in Italian and Latin sung at Catholic festivals.

fascia (fä'-shä), I. 1. A tie. 2. A rib.

fasto'so, fastosamen'te, I. Pompous(ly).

fattura (fät-too'-rä), I. Vide FACTURE.

faucette (fō-sĕt), fausset (fō-sā), F., Falsetto.

faux (fō) or fausse (fōs), F. False, out of tune. f. accord (fō zăk-kôr). A dissonance. f. bourdon (fō-boor-dôn). Vide FABURDEN. f. quinte. Imperfect fifth.

F clef. The bass-clef. Vide CLEF.

F-dur (ĕf-door), G. F major.

feathering. The bowing of swift staccato.

Federklavier (fā-dĕr-klä-fēr'), G. Spinet.

feeders. Small bellows to supply large.

Feier (fī'ĕr), G. Festival, celebration. F.-gesang. Anthem. feierlich. Festive, solemn. F.-keit. Solemnity.

feigned voice. Falsetto voice.

feilen (fī-lĕn), G. To polish.

fein (fīn), G. Fine, refined.

feint. In drum music, a figure.

feinte (fĕnt), F. Old name for semitone; accidental.

Feld (fĕlt), G. Field. F. flöte. A peasant flute. F. Kunstpfeifer (koonst'pfī-fĕr). A military musician. Feldmusik (fĕlt-moo-zēk'). Military music. Feldrohr (rōr), G. A rural pipe. F.-stück. A cavalry call. F. -ton. The key-note of a military wind instr. F. -trompete. Military trumpet.

fe'rial. Non-festal, secular.

fer'ma, I. Firm. fermamen'te, I. Firmly.

fermare il tuono. Vide MESSA DI VOCE.

fer'mate, E. (in G. fĕr-mä'-tĕ), fermata (fĕr-mä'-tä), I. 1. A symbol 𝄐 or 𝄒 above or below a note, rest or bar indicating a long pause upon it; f. ad libitum, often occurring before a cadenza. 2. A stop, on the violin.

fermato (mä'-tō), I. Firmly, fermezza (fĕr-mĕd'-zä). Firmness. fermo (fĕr'mo). Firm. Vide CANTUS FIRMUS.

fermement (fĕrm-mäṅ), F. Firmly.

Ferne (fĕr'nĕ), G. Distance. wie aus der F. (vē-ows-dĕr). As if from the distance. Fern-flöte. A covered 8-ft. stop. Fern-werk. Echo-organ.

feroce (fā-rō'-chĕ), ferocemen'te, I. Fierce(ly). ferocità (fā-rō-chĭ-tä'). Fierceness.

fertig (fĕr-tĭkh), G. Ready, nimble. F.-keit (kīt). Dexterity.

fervemment (făr-vĕ-mäṅ), F. Fervently.

ferven'te, fer'vido, I. Fervent. ferventemen'te, fervidamen'te. Vehemently.

Fes (fĕs), G. The note F♭. Feses (fĕs'ĕs). F double flat.

Fest (fĕsht), G. 1. Feast, festival. 2. Firm, steady. Festigkeit (fĕs-tĭkh-kīt). Firmness, steadiness. festlich (fĕst-lĭkh). Festive, solemn. Festlichkeit. Solemnity. Festlied. A festive-song. Festouvertüre. A brilliant overture. Festzeit (tsīt). Festival-time.

festivo (fĕs-tē'vō), festivamen'te, I. Gay(ly). festività (fĕs-tē-vĭ-tä'). Festivity, gayety.

festo'so, I. Merry, cheerful, gay.

Feuer (foi'ĕr), G. Fire, ardour, passion. feurig (rĭkh). Ardent, passionate.

fff. Abb. of Fortissimo.

F holes. Vide F.

fiacco (fĭ-äk'kō), I. Feeble, languishing.

fiasco (fĭ-äs'-kō), I. A failure; not so used in Italy.

fiato (fĭ-ä'-tō), I. Breath; voice.

fictus(a)-(um), L. "Feigned." 1. Vide FA. 2. musica ficta. Former name for music transposed.

fiddle. Violin. iron f. An arrangement of nails or rods played with a bow, inv. by Jn. Wilde, 18th cent. fiddler. Violinist, commonly a poor player. fiddlestick. Violin-bow.

Fidel (fē'-dĕl), G. Violin.

fi'des, L. 1. A string. 2. A stringed instr. fid'icen. One who plays a stringed instr. fidicina. A woman-player.

fidic'ula, L. A small lute.

fiducia (fi-doo'-chä), I. Confidence.

Fiedel (fē'dl), G. A violin. Strohfiedel. Xylophone. F.-bogen (bōkh'-ĕn). A violin-bow. F.-brett (brĕt). A squeaky violin. Fiedler (fēt'-lĕr). A fiddler.

fiel. An old name for violin.

field-music. Martial music.

fier (fē-ăr), fière (fĭ-ăr), F. Proud, lofty, fierce. fièrement (fĭ-ăr-mäṅ). Fiercely. fièrté (f'yăr-tā'). Fierceness.

fiero (fe-ā'-rō), fieramen'te, I. Fierce(ly). fierezza (rĕd'-zä). Fierceness.

fife. 1. A 6-holed octave cross-flute, usually in the key of F or B♭, chiefly used in military music, differing from the piccolo in lacking keys; compass d'-d'''. 2. A 2-foot stop.

fif'faro, I. Fife.

fifre (fēfr), F. 1. A fife. 2. A fifer. 3. An harmonium-stop.

fifteenth. 1. An interval of two octaves. 2. A 2-ft. stop, two octaves above the diapasons.

fifth. 1. The fifth tone of a scale, the dominant. 2. An interval containing five tones, the extremes included.

as C-G (the ratio being 2 : 3). The tonic and the dominant of a key constitute a perfect (or less strictly, major) fifth. To widen the interval by lowering the lower (or raising the upper) tone a half-step results in an augmented (or superfluous, extreme, sharp or pluperfect) fifth, as c-g♯, or c♭-g ; to narrow the interval a semitone by raising the lower or lowering the upper tone a half-step results in a diminished (or imperfect, false, flat, minor or defective) fifth. Two parts or voices according to the rules may not progress by perfect fifths either in consecutive or parallel manner, whether the fifths are open or (covered, concealed), hidden, (q. v.). Though this rule is the very ABC of harmonic law, it is not justified by science, by history, or by latest practice. Circle of fifths. Vide TEMPERAMENT. fifthy. With the second partial (a fifth) noticeably marked.

Figur (fē-goor′), G. A figure, or numeral.

figura (fē-goo′-rä), L. and I. Vide FIGURE. f. liga′ta. A ligature. f. muta (moo-ta). A rest. f. obli′qua. In old music, an oblique symbol indicating that two superimposed notes (as g-b) were to be sung obliquely (thus g-b-b-g).

figural, E. (in G. fē-goo-räl′). Figurate. F.-gesang. Cantus figuratus, counterpoint.

figuration. 1. The use of figures or ornamented passages in the variation of a theme. 2. The writing or the filling out of figured bass. 3. In cpt. the interpolation of figures, changing notes, etc.

figurato (fē-goo-rä′-tō), I., figuré (fē-gü-rā), F. figurate, or figured. 1. Ornamented with figures, hence florid, free. 2. Provided with numerals, as figured bass. Vide BASS 6, and CHORD.

figure, E. (in F. pron. fĭ-gür). 1. A pattern or design in grouped notes which may be repeated variously. 2. A numeral. f. of diminution. A number diminishing the duration of a note.

fil (fēl), F. Thread (of a string).

filar il tuono or la voce (fē-lär ēl too-ō′-nō or lä vō′ chĕ), I., filer un son or la voix (fē-lā ŭn sôn or lä vwä), F. To draw the tone out to a thread of sound.

filarmo′nico, I. Music-loving.

filet de voix (fē-lā dŭ vwä), F. A mere thread of tone.

filling-up. 1. Of parts, those of harmonic but not melodic use. 2. Of stops, mutation.

filo (fē′-lō), I. Thread. f. di voce. Softest possible tone.

filpen (fēl′-pĕn), G. Vide FISTULIREN.

fi′lum, L. Stem, of a note.

fin (făn), F. The end ; fine. f. à qui. (fă nä kē). End here.

fi′nal. The note of rest in church-modes corresponding to our Tonic ; in authentic modes the F. is on the first degree ; in plagal, on the 4th. These are called regular finals. Others occur frequently and are irregular or confinals. Vide MODES. f. close. A finishing cadence.

finale (fē-nä′-lĕ, I. ; in F. fĭ-năl). 1. The conclusion, usually elaborate, as the closing chorus of an act in opera ; in sonatas, symphonies, an independent movement. 2. A final.

final′is, L. Vide ACCENTUS ECCLESIASTICI.

fine (fē′-nĕ), I. The end ; it may appear sometimes before a da capo sign, in which case the movement is to be played to the repeat-bar and then repeated to the Fine, where it ends.

Finger (In E. fĭng′-gĕr ; in G. fĭng′-ĕr). Finger. F.-bildner, finger-developer. A device for keeping the last joint of the fingers up ; inv. by Seeber. F.-brett. Finger-board. F.-fertigkeit. Agility. F.-leiter (līt′-ĕr). The chiroplast. F.-satz, F.-setzung. Fingering. Enger or gedehnter, Fingersatz. Close (or stretched) fingering. F.-wechsel (vĕkhs′l). Change of fingers. finger- board. In a stringed instr. the neck on which the strings are stopped. finger-cymbals. Tiny cymbals fixed on the fingers. finger-holes. The holes on wind-instrs. by which the pitch is regulated.

fingering. 1. The manner of using the fingers on instrs. 2. The symbols indicating a fingering. In the German F. the thumb is marked 1, the fingers 2, 3, 4, 5; in an older German method the thumb was marked by a circle O; in the English, or American F. the thumb is marked with a cross, the fingers, 1, 2, 3, 4.

finire il tuono, I. Vide MESSA DI VOCE.

fi'nite. Of a canon, not repeated, ending with the finish of the theme; not "infinite."

finito(a) (fĭ-nē'-tō), I. Finished.

fino (fē'-nō), I. To, as far as, till.

finto(a) (fēn'-tō), I. Feigned. cadenza f. Vide CADENCE (f). fa finto. Vide FA.

fioco(a) (fĭ-ô'-kō), I. Hoarse, faint. fiochetto. Rather hoarse. fiochezza (fē-ō-kĕd'-zä). Hoarseness.

fiore (fĭ-ō'-rĕ), I. Flower. a f. di labbre. Lightly on the lip.

fioreggiare (fē-ō-rĕd-jä'-rē), I. To add figures to.

fioret'to, I. A little ornament.

fioriscente (fē-ō-rĭ-shĕn'-tĕ), I., fiorito (fē-ō-rē'-tō). Florid. fioritezza (fē-ō-rĭ-tĕd'-zä). Embellishment.

fioritura (fē-ō-rĭ-too'rä) (pl. e), I. Florid ornament.

first. 1. The highest voice-part or string; the lowest line or space. 2. A unison or prime.

Fis (fēs), G. The note F♯. Fis-dur (fēs-door). F♯ major. Fis-fis. The note F double sharp. Fis-moll. F♯ minor.

Fistel (fĭsh-tel), G. Falsetto (also F.-stimme).

Fistola (fēs'-tō-lä), I., fis'tula, L. A reed, a pipe. f. dulcis. The flûte à bec. f. germanica. German flute. f. panis or f. pastoralis. The Pandean pipes. f. pastorica. An oaten pipe used in Roman theatres to express disapprobation. fistulator, L., fistulato're, I. A piper. fistuliren (fĭs-too-lē'rĕn), G. 1. To sing falsetto. 2. Of organ-pipes, to over-blow.

fith'ele. Old English name for fiddle.

fixed-Do. That system of solmisation in which the syllables are fixed, i. e., do is given always to C (sharp, flat, or natural), re to D, etc.

fixed tone or intonation. Used of the piano and instrs. in which the player cannot change the pitch of a tone, as on the violin, etc.

Flachflöte (fläkh'flā-tĕ), G. 1. Flageolet. 2. An organ-stop.

flag. 1. Abbr. for flageolet, or flageolet tones. 2. A hook.

flageolet', E. (F. flăzh-ō-lā), Flageolett (flä-jĕ-ō-lĕt'), G., flagioletta (flä-jō-lĕt'ta), I. 1. A small flute played at the end, compass g'-b''' flat. double f. An instr. with 2 different-sized flageolets meeting in one mouthpiece, inv. by Bainbridge, 1800. 2. flageolet or flageolet-tones or Töne. Vide HARMONICS. 3. A 1- or 2-ft. stop.

flam. In drum music a grace note, close f., as short as possible; open f., with a brief interval.

Fla'minenorgel, G. Pyrophone.

Flaschinett (fläsh'ĭ-nĕt'), G. The flageolet.

flat. 1. A symbol (♭) lowering the note before which it is placed one semitone; placed in the signature it affects every note occurring on its line or space. The double flat (♭♭), formerly a great flat, lowers the note two semitones. flat fifth. Vide FIFTH. flat tuning. Of a lute tuned to the former lower French pitch. 2. As a verb, to lower a note a semitone; preferably to flatten.

flatter la corde (flăt-tā lá' kôrd), F. To flatter or caress the string.

flautando (flä-oo-tän'dō), flautato (tä'to), I. 1. Drawing the bow gently across the strings near the bridge, producing a "fluty" tone. 2. Producing harmonics.

flauto (fla'oo-tō), I. Flute. flautis'ta. Performer on the flute. flautino (tē'-no). 1. A small octave-flute. 2. A piccolo. 3. Same as flautando. f. piccolo. The shrill octave-flute. f. a bec'co. Beak-flute. f. alto. A tenor-flute used in bands. f. amabile. An organ-stop. f. amoroso. A 4-foot organ-stop. f. dolce. 1. A beak-flute. 2. An organ-stop. flauto'ne. A large bass-flute. f. tedesco, transverso, traverso. 1. The German or transverse flute. 2. An organ-stop.

flebile (flā'-bĭ-lĕ), flebilmen'te, I. Sad(ly), doleful(ly).

flessibile (flĕs-sē'-bĭ-lā), I. Flexible. flessibilità (lĭ-tä'), I. Flexibility.

Flick'opera, G. An opera with new words to old tunes.

fling. A Scotch Highland dance in 4-4 time.

F-Löcher, G. F holes. Vide F.

flon-flon (flôn-flôn), F. A refrain to old vaudevilles ; hence, trash.

flor'id. Ornamental, embellished.

Flöte (flā'tĕ), G. Flute. flötchen (flĕt'-khĕn). A little flute. F.-bass. A bass-flute. flöten. To play the flute. F.-spieler. A flute-player. F.-stimme, F.-zug. A flute-stop. Flötenwerk. A small organ with only flue-pipes. F. traverso. 1. The transverse flute. 2. An organ-stop. Flötist (flā'-tēst). A flute-player.

flour'ish. 1. A trumpet-fanfare. 2. An embellishment.

flüchtig (flükh'tĭkh), G. Light(ly). Flüchtigkeit (kīt). Fleetness.

flue-pipe-stop-work. Vide PIPE.

Flügel (flü'-gĕl), G. "Wing," hence, 1. A wing-shaped instr. ; or the modern grand piano. 2. The ear of a pipe. F.-harfe. A small table-harp with upright sound-board. F.-horn. 1. A bugle. 2. A keyed bugle or other keyed brass instrument.

flute, E., flu'ta, L., flûte (flüt), F. 1. Now generally used of the transverse (or cross, or German) flute. The beak- (or direct) flute (in various sizes) is obsolete. This latter was blown at one end. The cross-flute is blown through a hole in the side near the larger end. It is a long tube (formerly slightly conical) with the larger end closed. Usually made of wood, it is sometimes of silver or other metals. The principle is that of the flue-pipe (vide PIPE), and the tone is clear, pure, and especially rich in the lower range, which is too little used. A very ancient instrument (appearing often with two tubes and one mouthpiece as the double-flute, one tube furnishing probably a mere drone-bass); its modern form owes much to the improvements of Boehm, and controls with its keys fourteen orifices, with an extreme range of b-c''''♯. It is made in six sizes (including the piccolo, or octave-flute) and sounds as written, is non-transposing. The normal flute is the C ; there are two others in D flat and E flat. The piccolo is in the same keys, but the lower octave is not used ; it is written an octave lower than it sounds. A fourth (or quart) flute sounds a fourth higher than the normal flute. 2. An organ-stop. flute-work. Vide STOP. harmonic f. or f. armonique. An organ-stop. octave-f. The piccolo. pastoral or shepherd's f. A short beak-flute. f. à bec (ä bĕk), F., Schnabelflöte (shnä-bĕl), G. Beak-flute. f. allemande (ăl-mänd), F. The cross-flute. f. conique (kôn-ēk), F. 1. Conical flute. 2. An organ-stop. f. d'amour (dä-moor). 1. An obsolete flute in A or in B flat. 2. A 4- or 8-ft. stop. f. d'Angleterre (däṅ-glŭ-tăr). The flageolet. f. du Poitou(dŭ pwä-too). The bagpipe. f. douce (doos). The beak-flute. f. minor (mē-nôr). A 2- or 4-foot stop. f. octaviante (ôk-tă-vĭ-änt). Octave-flute ; an organ-stop. f. ouverte (oo-vărt). An open stop. f. traversière (trä-vĕr-sĭ-ăr). The cross-flute.

flûte, F. As a direction—"use harmonics." flûtée (tā). Fluty.
fly. The lid covering a key-board.
F-moll (ĕf-môl), G. F minor. fo'co, I. Fire, passion. focosamen'te. Ardently. focosis'simo. Very ardent. focoso. Passionate. foglietto (fōl-yĕt'-to), I. A part which contains all the obbligato passages, used often by conductors instead of a score.
foire des enfants (fwär-dā-zäṅ-fäṅ), F. "Children's fair." Toy symphony. fois (fwä), F. Time. première f. (prŭm-yăr). The first time. deuxième f. (dŭz-yĕm). The second time. deux f. (dŭ-fwä). Twice. dernière f. The last time. folia (fō-lē'-ä), Sp., follia(e) di spagna (spän-yä), I., folies d'espagne (fô-lē-dĕs-spīn), F. 1. A slow Spanish solo-dance in 3-4 time. 2. A species of air with variations. folia'ted. Ornamented.
folk-music. The body of folk-songs, dances, etc. folk-song. A strongly racial popular song that has become a tradition.

Folk-Song.

By H. E. Krehbiel.

THE bearing which Folk-music (i.e., Folk-song and Folk-dance) has on national schools of composition gives propriety to an attempt at accurate definition of the subject to which this article is devoted. Folk-song is not popular song in the sense in which the word is most frequently used, but the song of the folk; not only the song admired of the people but, in a strict sense, the song created by the people. It is a body of poetry and music which has come into existence without the influence of conscious art, as a spontaneous utterance, filled with characteristic expression of the feelings of a people. Such songs are marked by certain peculiarities of rhythm, form, and melody which are traceable, more or less clearly, to racial (or national) temperament, modes of life, climatic and political conditions, geographical environment and language. Some of these elements, the spiritual, are elusive, but others can be determined and classified. Peoples living in northern climates, for instance, are predisposed to the minor mode, which has melancholy for its most marked characteristic. Here the influence is generally climatic and geographical. But peoples living in cheerful and salubrious climes may also be dominated by gloom if they have long suffered under oppressive political and social conditions. ¶Both propositions are illustrated in the case of Russian Folk-song, which is overwhelmingly minor in spite of the fact that the Czar's empire extends over nearly thirty degrees of latitude and has a mean temperature varying from thirty-two degrees Fahrenheit at Archangel, to fifty-eight degrees in the Caucasus. It would seem to be a paradox, moreover, that heavy-hearted song should be paired almost universally with singularly boisterous and energetic dances; but the reason of this becomes plain when it is remembered that a measured and decorous mode of popular amusement is the general expression of equable popular life, while wild and desperate gayety is frequently the sign of reaction from suffering. There is a gayety of despair as well as of contentment and happiness. ¶ Intervallic peculiarities are more difficult to explain than rhythmic, and may be said to be survivals of primitive artistic conditions. The modern scale was an evolution, not an inspiration, and the study of savage music discloses many rudimentary forms of it. The most idiomatic music of the Finns is confined to the first five tones of the minor scale, which was the compass of the ancient Finnish harp—the kantele. Old Irish and Scotch songs share the pentatonic scale (i.e., the modern diatonic scale omitting the fourth and seventh steps) with the popular music of China, Japan, and Siam. In the songs of the negro slaves of America, I have found the same scale, a major scale with a flat seventh and a minor scale with a raised sixth, to be predominant. César Cui mentions the prevalence in Russia of two major scales, one without the fourth, the other without the third and seventh. Hungarian melodies make frequent use of the interval called the augmented second, which compasses three semitones and is common to Oriental music. There is a hint in this of the origin of the Magyars, who are not Slavs, as is so commonly supposed, but Scythians; they belong to the Finno-Ungrian stock, and are more nearly related to the Turks than to their neighbours, the Poles and Russians. The profusion of ornament which characterises Hungarian music is an importation from the Orient by the Gypsies who, while the national musicians of Hungary, are nevertheless a Hindu people. ¶ These facts, gathered at random from the vast but as yet unexplored storehouse of Folk-music indicate the possibility of using the study as an aid in the determination of many things in ethnology and ethnography; for Folk-song elements have a marvellous tenacity of life. In the study of Folk-music, however, the purpose of the student should be primarily to discover and, if possible, account for the elements which differentiate the creations of one race, people, or tribe from those of another. This done it will be possible to explain and describe the distinguishing characteristics of the national schools of composition based upon Folk-song idioms, such as the Scandinavian, Russian, Polish, Bohemian, and Hungarian.

folk-tone. The folk-song manner or spirit (cf. Volkston).

fondamental(e), (fôṅ-dă-măṅ-tăl) F., fondamentale (tä'lĕ), I. Fundamental. son f. Root. basse, or basso, f. Vide BASS 6.

fondamen'to, I. Fundamental bass.

fonds d'orgue (fôṅ dôrg), F. The foundation-stops.

foot. 1. The unit of metre, a distinct rhythmic unit of two or more syllables. 2. Of a pipe, the part below the mouth. 3. Old term for a refrain, or a drone-bass. 4. A unit for the designation of the pitch of pipes and instrs. arrived at as follows. Sound travels 1056 feet per second, the tone $C_{,,}$ has 33 vibrations a second; $1056 \div 33 =$

32 feet, the length of one sound-wave; a 32-foot pipe will therefore sound $C_{,,}$. The pipe giving C (two octaves below middle C) is about 8 feet long. This is taken as the normal length, and while the pipes that make up a so-called 8-foot stop (q. v.) decrease in length as they ascend the scale, they are considered as belonging to the 8-foot tone and they sound as written or played, i. e., when an 8-foot stop is on and the key of mid. C is depressed, mid. C sounds, etc. If this key is depressed when a 4-foot stop is on, the tone an octave higher sounds; when a 32-foot is on, a tone two octaves lower sounds; the 2-foot and 1-foot stops produce tones respectively two and three octaves higher than the key depressed. A stop then is named from the length of its longest pipe and lowest tone. From this use arises the designation of instruments by foot-measure, or foot-tone; an instr. sounding as written (e. g., the flute) is called an 8-foot instr., one sounding an octave higher (e. g., the piccolo-flute) is called a 4-foot instr. Furthermore, this designation is used of octaves; the letters in the great octave (vide PITCH) are known as 8-foot (as 8-ft. C, D, etc.), those in the small octave, as 4-ft. c, d, etc.; those in the once-accented as 2-foot, and those in the twice-accented as 1-foot. The word foot is sometimes abbreviated by an (′) as 8′, 16′.

The metrical system has been applied with much inaccuracy; 8-feet $= \frac{5}{2}$ metre; 4-feet $= \frac{5}{4}$ m.; 2-feet $= \frac{5}{8}$ m.; 16-ft. = 5 m.; 32-ft. = 10 m.;

Quinte (10 $\frac{2}{3}$, 5 $\frac{1}{3}$, 2 $\frac{2}{3}$, 1 $\frac{1}{3}$, and $\frac{2}{3}$ feet) $= \frac{10}{3}, \frac{5}{3}, \frac{5}{6}, \frac{5}{12}$ and $\frac{5}{24}$ metres respectively.

Tierce (6 $\frac{2}{5}$, 3 $\frac{1}{5}$, 1 $\frac{3}{5}$, and $\frac{4}{5}$ feet) $= \frac{10}{5}$ (or 2), $\frac{5}{5}$ (or 1), $\frac{5}{10}$ ($\frac{1}{2}$), and $\frac{5}{20}$ ($\frac{1}{4}$) metres respectively.

Form.

By John F. Runciman.

A DEFINITION of Form would have this disadvantage: that it would convey absolutely nothing save to those who understood perfectly what the meaning is; and, further, it would occupy much more space than is here available. So instead of trying to reach a perfect definition, let us try what is a much better plan from the lay point of view—let us trace the growth of the mass of principles and their methods of application which are included in this one comprehensive term Form. ¶In the beginning, we may assume, music was without Form, though not always quite void. The savage tootled his melody, caring nothing about repeating phrases, nothing about middle sections, nothing about development. But in the earliest traditional melodies that come down to us we find the germ of all that is now known as Form. ¶In any collection of popular songs the reader will find examples built on the following plan :—first a strain is delivered ; then another strain, in another key, is delivered ; and finally the first strain is repeated, bringing the whole thing to a satisfactory close. Let us consider for a moment the inwardness of this arrangement. No one wants to sing only one strain and be done with it. To sing a second strain in the same key would prove tiresome, so a feeling of relief, of variety is produced when the thing is lengthened by the addition of a second strain in a new key. But to end in the new key would be quite unsatisfactory : it would be like breaking off in the middle of a sentence. So the first key is re-introduced and the whole song rounded off and made to end with a sense of perfect completeness by a repetition of the first strain in the first key. ¶From this simple example, then, we may infer the whole object of Form : it is to secure, whether in songs or in instrumental movements or in choruses, a piece of music sufficiently long and combining variety with unity. ¶Length, variety, and unity—to attain these is, so far as instrumental music, music without words, is concerned, the whole aim and object of Form. When once music is used in association with words, other than the simplest lyrics, other considerations enter. These we will touch upon later ; let us for the present try to get as far as the first instrumental music written in anything approaching regular Form. Naturally this grew out of the polyphonic vocal music, which came before it. If we examine the old music, in a great deal of it we find nothing corresponding to Form as we understand the word to-day. A phrase is delivered by one voice. Let us call that phrase A ; it may be two, four, or six bars, or indeed any length. After the first voice has sung it a second voice takes it up, while the first voice proceeds to a second theme or strain which we will call B—a third voice enters with A, the second takes up B, while the first proceeds to yet another new strain, C. Roughly, this is the way in which whole movements are spun out. The modulations are more or less haphazard and dictated entirely by the composer's desire to achieve expression : there is nothing done in obedience to any rule. The first instrumental pieces are built after this plan. ¶These pieces may be compared to the harmless amœba, the tiny speck of protoplasm which swims about, sans eyes, ears, mouth or limbs : simply a shapeless bit of life capable of existing, so long as it remains small. But even the older composers were not content to let their musical creations remain small. They wanted to display their skill in weaving a longer web of music ; some of them had something to say, something which demanded length ; most of them had the architectonical instinct which forces man to build out of any material he can lay his hands on. Now a long movement, a too long movement, spun on the old plan necessarily becomes tedious, monotonous and difficult to follow—it is at best like a very long sentence or paragraph with never a comma or a period. Moreover, if the music is all the same, if it is homogeneous, it is obvious that one of the principal methods of getting expression, contrast, is ruled out. Last, no musical architecture is possible with a mere series of musical phrases that can only be compared with a lot of strips of wood more or less carelessly nailed together. So gradually the principle of the popular song already referred to was adopted, probably, nay, certainly, quite unconsciously, and there was evolved a very simple and useful Form, one which has been vastly used by all composers and will doubtless be used constantly in the future, however music may develop. ¶In place of the one strain of the simple song one section consisting of many strains was introduced. Following that, in a new key, for the sake of variety, came a second section, also consisting of many strains. Finally the first section was repeated in the original key, bringing the whole movement to a satisfying conclusion. Of this form there are hundreds of examples in the shorter movements of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. When a more modern composer uses it, however, he by no means sticks to a couple of keys. Our sense of tonality has grown, we perceive relations between keys, which our forefathers were totally unable to perceive ; and the first and second sections may both pass through many keys. But the general principle remains the same. Now this very excellent Form is also very primitive. In Haydn's time, and before it, the instinct to build, to crystallise, music was still at work ; more than ever composers wanted to express something ; and more than ever it was necessary to secure contrast. ¶So what is commonly called sonata form came to be invented. In the simplest examples of this a first theme—corresponding to the first strain of a popular song, as aforesaid—is announced. Then comes the second theme in a fresh key. But after that, instead of a repetition of the first section, there is what is called a development or working-out section, in which both first and second themes are treated with all the skill and fancy the composer possesses and shown in a dozen or more unsuspected lights. Only after that does the first theme return, and then the second theme. This is called the Reprise. But the second theme, if repeated in the key in which it first appeared, would of course end the work inconclusively: wherefore it is placed, on its last appearance, in the key of the first theme. ¶The ingenious reader will observe that if variety is obtained only by change of key then there would be no more variety from the beginning of what is called the reprise. Nor, for that matter, is the mere change from the original key to that of the dominant enough to produce any great variety. The second theme therefore is made as unlike the first in every respect as possible : if the first is bold and rugged, the second may be gentle and soothing ; if the first moves rapidly, the second may be long drawn out ; if rhythm is strongly marked in the first, the second is in a more subtle and elusive rhythm—in fact contrast is secured by any of the thousand ways open to the composer, and quite easily understood when heard, though anything but easy to describe. ¶Now if we take a symphonic movement of Mozart we find a first theme of marked character; after its delivery (and perhaps brief expansion) all the orchestra goes to work at a cadence in a hammer-and-tongs fashion and lets you know unmistakably that you have reached the end of a section. Then the second theme is announced, clearly. Then we have "development" in which the old tunes are turned into new ones as unlike the old as possible, yet obviously growing out of them. Finally we have the reprise, and then the coda, a few bars in the case of Haydn and Mozart stuck on to make an effective conclusion. ¶This is simple sonata form. There was an enormous lot of waste in it: those thumping conventional series of chords at the end of each section, for example, never mean and never did mean anything. At the time they were written the tendency to formulate music, to get conscious control of the material of music, was at its strongest; one of the most powerful desires of Mozart and Haydn was to make their form as clear and distinct as possible; and to that everything else was, in an emergency, sacrificed. In fact, composers of that time seem to have felt as keen a pleasure in the mere regularity and balance of the various parts of movements as in the poetic and sheer musical quality of the parts, even when the balance was secured by the introduction of conventional padding altogether at war with beauty and expression, quite destructive of both. ¶With Beethoven came a change. His music must at first have been very difficult to understand, for instead of the trumpet and drum passages marking the close of the different sections, one section leads straight into another by means of passages of as high musical and poetic quality as any other portions of his movements. Further, he went in for third themes following the second (the second and third being so proportioned as to balance the first), and he mightily extended the coda. Instead of a few noisy bars to end up each movement he started out and developed his theme in new ways, thus adding a fourth main section to the three existing before his time—the first, in which the themes are announced; the second, in which they are developed; the third, in which they are repeated. This was an inevitable corollary of the enormous increase he made in the size of the forms he used. After such huge themes, such lengthy developments, a few chords were not sufficient to wind up; a tail was needed by the symphonic movement before it could be felt to be satisfactory, just as much as a tail is needed by a kite before it will ascend. ¶Let us pause for a moment to sum up. In the early days music had form as a flower or a blade of grass has form; each piece grew more or less by haphazard into some shape, starting from its one theme. The utmost that could be done in that way was done by Bach in his fugues. But the fugue itself was the result of the tendency to formulate music, to press it into the bonds of strict rule, to get a conscious mastery of the material. That tendency, together with the desire to express more complex emotions and the natural instinct of man to build, resulted in certain clearly defined forms, with hard outlines, so to speak. Beethoven came and softened the outlines, hiding the bones of music, as it were, under a beautiful expressive veil of tone. The form is there just the same, and can easily be grasped by anyone who takes the trouble to listen carefully. The fact that for the sake of expression, he prodigiously varied his themes on their repetition, does not alter the fact that they are repeated in a satisfying way. The reader who can follow the form of say the first movement of the Eroica symphony (a symphony being only an orchestral sonata) understands not only the abstract principles of form but the manner of applying those principles to the concrete. ¶The results of these applications are various forms—the Rondo, the Minuet and so on: all are based on one of the two plans; in short pièces one theme is used, set forth and finished with; in longer pieces variety and unity are secured by two or three (or even more) themes of different character placed in different keys. The mere setting of themes one after another can always secure variety of a kind; but whether there is at the same time unity depends entirely upon whether the composer is or is not an artist. There is no rule for that: only genius can solve the problem. So much then for pure music. ¶The application of the principles may be widened in a thousand ways; ten themes may be used instead of two or three or four, the order and relation of the keys used may be altered and added to; but the principles remain the same. ¶But when music ceases to be pure music, when words are added to it, or it is intended to tell a story, then these principles can no longer be applied—or rather, there is no longer any need to apply them. Instead of following the architectonical faculty, the composer must follow the dictates of the dramatic or lyrical faculty. The number, character, mode of development, etc., of the themes is derived from the thing to be conveyed to the listener; and then we get what is called Programme music. But just as in a fine novel the writer reveals architectonical sense, so in a really fine piece of Programme it is revealed. There is very little difference in form, for example—at any rate no essential difference—between a Bach fugue and the Valkyries' Ride of Wagner; the themes are stated and developed in a certain order, and all one's faculties are satisfied—the emotions, the sense of pure beauty in melody and harmony, the architectonical sense, the intellectual appreciation of right handling of the material. ¶Whether music is pure music or Programme music, it must satisfy all these. And though, in the future, we may use quarters and eighths of tones, and though we may arrive at complexities unknown to-day and be able to express subtleties of feelings as yet never felt, the principles by which our feelings are expressed in noble and beautiful Form cannot but remain the same.

Fugue.

By Homer A. Norris.

A FUGUE is a composition in which a theme, called the subject, is announced by one voice and imitated by other voices. The word comes from the Latin fuga (a flight), suggesting the thought of one part starting alone after which the others enter in pursuit. A fugue may be written for any number of voices, but we shall here discuss a four-voiced fugue. ¶ The subject is usually short and of such marked character as to fix itself readily on the mind, and is usually so constructed as to admit of overlapping; i.e., so that a second voice may enter without musical friction before the first voice has completed the phrase. This overlapping process is called stretto. ¶ The subject may be announced by any voice. At its completion there comes a very short passage called codetta, after which a second voice sings the subject-matter in another key. This is called the answer. ¶ In the majority of fugues the answer is a transposition of the subject into the key a perfect fifth above the subject, so that subject and answer correspond to the keys of tonic and dominant. Certain subjects instead of being reproduced literally are changed. Subjects which are changed are known as tonal subjects; subjects which remain unchanged are known as real subjects. ¶While the second voice is singing the answer, the first voice accompanies it, and usually in one of the forms of double counterpoint. It is then intended for subsequent use. Such an accompanying part is called counter-subject. ¶The answer is followed by another codetta, leading back to the original key, where a third voice sings the subject, but in a different octave than that in which the first voice announced it. The other voices continue with contrapuntal accompaniment. Another codetta follows, leading to a fourth voice which sings the answer in the dominant. The part of the fugue that we have discussed is called the exposition. The exposition closes the first of the three big divisions of the fugue. ¶The exposition is followed by the first episode. In the episode the composer has more freedom than in any other portion of the fugue. New material may be presented; brief modulations to related keys introduced, together with free imitation. ¶After the first episode comes the middle section. ¶Here the four voices again present the subject-matter in somewhat the same order as in the first section but in other keys. The principal keys are altogether avoided or only incidentally touched. In this group often occur variations of the subject; it may be shortened or lengthened; the answer may be presented in contrary motion, etc. ¶In the third, and (usually) final section a return is made to the original keys. Here the subject and answer are generally combined in stretto. ¶A strict fugue is one in which there are either no episodes, or in which the episodic material is drawn entirely from the subject or counter-subject. Nearly all the fugues in Bach's "Das Wohltemperirte Clavier" are strict fugues. ¶In a free fugue the episodes are constructed of new material. ¶In a fugato passage one voice announces a theme, after which other voices enter in free imitation. ¶A fughetta is to a fugue what a sonatina is to a sonata: i.e., it is a little fugue. ¶An academic fugue is the most elaborate, artificial, and purely intellectual expression of musical art.

Grace.

By the Editor.

ONE of the innumerable decorative details of melodic progression. Grace notes are musical parasites borrowing their entire sustenance and duration from the note to which they are tied by a slur. They are consequently vitally affected by the rapidity of the tempo. They are almost invariably written small, and are frequently abbreviated, or indicated by some form of musical shorthand. It is to be noted in playing old music that the appoggiatura was written small merely as a bit of academic hypocrisy Modern Graces.

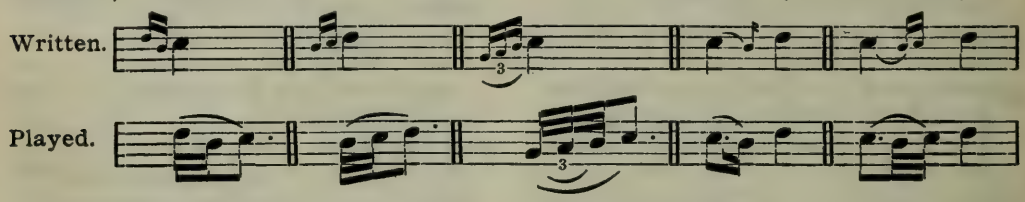
Acciacatura, or Short Appoggiatura, I. and E. Kurzer Vorschlag or Zusammenschlag G. Pincé étouffé, F. (Sometimes struck simultaneously and instantly released.)

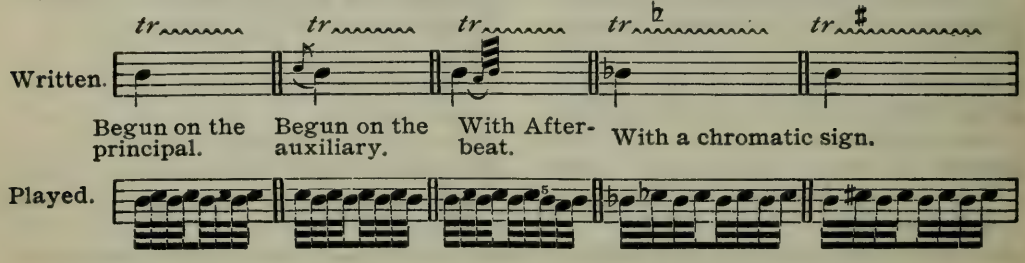
Long Appoggiatura. Langer Vorschlag or Vorhalt. (Written small but taking its full value.)

Double Appoggiatnra, or Slide, E. Anschlag, or Schleifer, or Schneller. G.

Unaccented Appoggiatura, or After-beat. Nachschlag or Nachschleifer. (Also double N.)



Shake, or Trill, E. Trillo, I. Trille, F. Triller, G. [Old abbreviations, t, +, (, (, etc.] (The length of the trill varies with the length of the note and the tempo.)



Chain of Trills, E. Catena di trilli, I. Trillerkette, G.. (May be with or without the afterbeat, at discretion.)

The Passing Shake, or Inverted Mordent. Praller, Pralltriller, or Schneller, G. Pincé renversé, or mordant, F.

The Mordent, E. Mordent or Beisser, G. Pincé, F. [Old signs, ◆|◆, or '.]

The Double Mordent (doppelte M; pincé doublé). Given here with a chromatic.

to smuggle in thus an unprepared suspension. Though written small it was given one-half (sometimes only a third) the value of the note it was bound to, and two-thirds of the value if the note were dotted. ¶The Chart gives first the modern graces, as written and executed, then a series of old graces made up from Bach's own list, and from those of Couperin and Rameau. ¶Composers who desire to escape the wide diversity of interpretation put on all grace-abbreviations are coming, more and more, to write their ornaments out in full, a procedure for which there is every reason but the one of laziness.

Grad (grät), G. Step, degree.

gradare (dä're), I. To descend by degrees.

grada'tion. A series of diatonic chords ascending or descending.

gradation (grä-dăs-yôn), F., gradazione (grä-dä-tsĭ-ō'nĕ), I. A gradual increase or diminution of speed or volume.

gradevole (grä-dā'-vō-lĕ), gradevolemen'te, I. Graceful(ly). graditamen'te, graditis'simo. Very sweetly.

gradire (grä-dē'-rĕ), I. To ascend by degrees.

Gradleiter (grät'-lī-tĕr), G. A scale.

grado (grä'-do), I. A degree; single step. g. ascendente (or descendente). Ascending (or descending) degree. di grado. Moving by step, opposed to di salto, moving by skip.

grad'ual, E., gradua'le, L. 1. Part of the R. C. service sung between the Epistle and Gospel, anciently sung on the altar-steps. 2. A book containing the gradual and other antiphons. The Roman G or Graduale Romanum. A celebrated ancient volume of ritual music of the 16th century. 3. gradual modulation. That in which the principal modulating chord is reached by others.

gradualmen'te, graduatamen'te, I., graduellement (grad-ü-ĕl-mäṅ), F. By degrees.

graduare (grä-doo-ä'rĕ), I. To divide into degrees. graduazione, I. Vide GRADAZIONE. gradweise (grät-vī-ze), G. Gradually, by degrees.

gra'dus ad Parnas'sum, L. "The road to Parnassus." Name applied by Fux to his text-book in counterpoint; by Clementi to his book of études; hence, any text-book.

graha (grä'-hä), Hindu. The opening tone of a song.

grail (grāl). Early E. The Roman gradual.

graillement (grĕ-yŭ-mäṅ), F. A hoarse sound.

grammar. Rules of composition.

grammatical accent. Vide ACCENT.

gran (grän), I. Great, grand. g. cassa or tamburo. The great, or bass-drum. g. prova. Final rehearsal.

grand. Abbr. of Grand piano. Vide PIANO. g. action. The action of a grand piano. grand opera. Serious opera in which there is no spoken dialogue. g. stave. Vide STAFF. g. choir. Union of all the reed-stops. g. cornet. 16-ft. reed-stop. g. sonata. An extended sonata.

grand(e) (gräṅ(d)), F., grande (grän'-dĕ), I. Grand, great. g. barré, F. Vide BARRÉ. g. bourdon. A 32-ft. stop on the pedal. g. chantre (shäṅtr). Precentor. g. chœur (kŭr). Full organ, all the stops. g. orgue (gräṅ-dorg). 1. Great organ. 2. Full organ. g. jeu. 1. Full organ. 2. A stop bringing all the stops of an harmonium into play. g. messe. High Mass. g. mesure à deux temps. Duple time. g. orchestre (graṅ-dôr-kĕstr). Full orchestra.

grandeur (gräṅ-dŭr), F. 1. Grandeur. 2. Width (of intervals).

grandezza (grän-dĕd′-zä), I. Grandeur. grandio′so, I. Noble. grandisonan′te. Sonorous. grandsire. Changes on 5 bells. Vide DOUBLE (4). granulato (grä-noo-lä′-tō), I. Slightly staccato. grappa (gräp′pa), I. Brace. grasseyer (grăs-sŭ-yā), F. To pronounce the r or l thickly; hence, grasseyement (grăs-yŭ-măn̆), such pronunciation.
Gra′tias ag′imus, L. "We give thanks to Thee." Vide MASS. gratioso (grä′-tsi-ō′so), I. Gracious. grave (grä′vĕ in I.; in F. grăv). 1. Grave, deep, slow. 2. A slow movement. grave harmonics. Combinational tones. gravement (grăv-măn̆), F. gravemente (grä-vĕ-mĕn′tĕ), I. Gravely. gravezza (gra-vĕd′-zä), I. Gravity. gravicembalo (grä-vē-chām′-bä-lō), I., gravicem′bolo, I., gravecem′balum, L. Harpsichord. gra′vis, L. Heavy. Vide ACCENTUS ECCLESIASTICI. gravisonan′te, I. Loud-sounding. gravità (grä-vĭ-tä′), I., Gravität (grä-fē-tät′), G., gravité (grä-vĭ-tā), F. 1. Solemnity. 2. Relative depth of a tone. grayle (grāl). Early E. The "Roman gradual."
grazia (gräts′-yä), I., grazie (gräts-yā), G. Grace, elegance. graziös (grä-tsĭ-ās), G., grazio′so, I. Graceful. graziosamen′te. Gracefully. greater. Major (of a scale, sixth, or third). great octave. Vide PITCH. great organ. Vide ORGAN. great sixth. A 6-5 chord with perfect 5th and major 6th. grec (grĕk), F. Greek. Chorus à la G. A chorus at the end of an act, as in Greek tragedy.
Greek Modes and Music. Vide MODES.
Grego′rian, gregorianisch (grĕ-gō-rĭ-än′-ĭsh), G., grégori′ano (grā-gō-rĭ-ä′no), I., grégorien (grā-gō-rĭ-äṅ), F. Introduced or regulated by Pope Gregory I. in the sixth century (vide his name in the B. D.). Chiefly used as a synonym for plain-chant. Gevaert in his "Les origines du chant lyrique," 1890, has shown how little reason there is for continuing the traditional view of St. Gregory as a great innovator; he may have been a codifier of music. Much credit belonging to St. Ambrose has been given to him; he did not originate the notation by letters (a-g), sometimes called the Gregorian letters. The so-called Gregorian chant or song is diatonic, without definite rhythm (the words dictating the metre) and keeping to the Church modes. Of Gregorian chant, modes, tones, etc. Vide PLAIN-CHANT, and MODES.
greifen (grī′-fĕn), G. To take, to finger, to play; to stop (of violin-playing); to stretch.
grel (grĕl), G. Shrill. G.-heit (hīt). Sharpness. grelot (grŭ-lō), F. A small bell.
Griff (grĭf), G. Touch, manipulation, fingering, stretch. G.-brett. Finger-board. G.-loch (lôkh). Hole (as of a flute). G.-saite (zī-te). A stopped, or melody, string as opposed to a sympathetic string. grillig (grĭl′-lĭkh), G. Capricious. gringotter (grăṅ-gô-tā), F. To hum. grisoller (grē-sô-lā), F. To warble. grob (grôp), G. Coarse, deep, broad. As a prefix (of organ-pipes); "of broad scale." G.-gedackt. A stopped diapason of full, rough tone.
grop′po, groppet′to. Vide GRUPPO, GRUPPETTO. gros (grō), F. Great. g. tambour. Great drum. gros-fa (grō-fä). The old square notation. gross (grôs), G., grosse (grôs), F. Great, major. grosse caisse (grôs kĕs), F. The great drum. Grossenazard, G. A stop a fifth above the diapasons. grosse Oktave. The great octave. Vide PITCH. grosse Quinte, grosses Quintenbass. A stop in the pedals, a fifth or twelfth to the great bass. grosse Sonate. Grand sonata. grosses Principal. A 32-ft. stop. grosses Terz. Major third. grosse Tierce. Stop producing the third or tenth above the foundation-stops. grosse Trommel. The great drum. grossgedackt (gĕ-däkt). Double-stopped 16-ft. diapason.

grosso (grôs'-sō), I. Full, great, grand.

Grossvatertanz (grôs'fä-tĕr-tänts), G. "Grandfather's dance"; an old-fashioned dance.

grottes'co, I. Grotesque.

ground bass. Vide BASE (8).

group. 1. A series of short notes tied, or sung to one syllable. 2. A division or run. 3. A set of instruments, as the brass. 4. The arrangement of parts in score.

Grund (groont), G. Ground, foundation. G.-akkord. An uninverted chord. G.-bass. Fundamental bass. G.-lage. Fundamental position. G.-ton. Root; tonic. Fundamental of a compound tone. G.-tonart. The prevailing key. G.-stimme. The bass part.

gruppo (groop'pō), I. A group, formerly a trill, shake, or turn. gruppet'to. 1. A small group. 2. A turn.

G-Schlüssel (gā'-shlüs-sĕl), G. The G clef. Vide CLEF.

guaracha (gwa-rä'chä), Sp. A Spanish dance, with one part in triple and one in 2-4 time, the dancer often accompanying himself on the guitar.

guaranita (gwä-rä-nē'-tä), Sp. A small guitar.

Guarnerius. Vide the B. D.

guddok (goo-dôk), Rus. A 3-stringed violin.

gue. An obsolete Shetland violin with 2 horsehair strings played 'cello-fashion.

guerriero (goo-ĕr-rĭ-ā'-rō), I. Martial.

guet (gĕ), F. A trumpet flourish.

guia (gē'-ä), Sp. Fugue; conductor; leader.

guida (goo-ē'-dä), I. (a) Guide 1, 2, 3. (b) Vide PRESA. (c) Also, a tone through which the voice glides in singing an interval legato.

guide. 1. Subject, of fugue. 2. Antecedent of imitation. 3. A direct.

guide (gēd), F. Guide 1, 2. guide-main (măn). A chiroplast, inv. by Kalkbrenner.

guidon (gē-dôn), F. A direct.

Guido'nian. Relating to Guido d'Arezzo. (Vide B. D.) G. hand. A diagram on an outstretched left hand of the Aretenian syllables. Vide SOLMISATION.

guil'tern (gĭl'-tern). Cither.

guimbard, guimbarde (găn-bär(d)), F. A jew's harp.

guion (gē'-ōn), Sp. A repeat sign.

guitar, E., guitare (gĭ-tär), F., guitarra (gē-tär'rä), Sp., Guitarre (gĭ-tär'-rĕ), G. A modern form of the lute, long-necked with frets; six-stringed; compass E-a'' (plus an octave of harmonics). The accordature is E-A-d-g-b-e' (or E-B-e-g-b-e'). Its music is written an octave higher than it sounds. g. d'amour. Vide ARPEGGIONE. g. lyre. A French six-stringed instr. of lyre-shape.

guiterne (gē-tĕrn), F. Ancient guitar.

gu'nibry. A 2-stringed guitar.

Gunst (goonst), G. Grace, tenderness.

guracho (goo-rā'-chō), Sp. Vide GUARACHA.

gusla (goosh'-la). Servian 1-stringed instr. with skin sound-board.

gusli, gussel. A Russian zither.

gusto (goos-to), I. Taste, expression. gran g. The grand manner. gustoso (goos-to'so), gustosamente. Tasteful(ly).

G-ut. Vide GAMMA UT.

gut. Strings made of entrails of sheep.

gut (goot), G. Good. gutdünken (dünk'ĕn). At pleasure. guter Takteil. Strong beat.

gutturale (goot-too-rä'lĕ), gutturalmen'te, I. Gutteral(ly).

gyta'rah. Nubian guitar. g. barbarych. The Berber guitar.

H

H (In G. pron. hä). German name for B-natural; B being reserved for B flat.

h. Abbr. for horn, heel, hand.

Habanera (ä-bä-nä'-rä), Sp. A dance popular in Havana; it is in 2-4 time with the first eighth note dotted; syncopation and caprice play a large part. Vide DANCE-RHYTHMS.

Haberrohr (hä'-bĕr-rōr), G. Shepherd's flute.

Hackbrett (häk'-brĕt), G. Dulcimer. halb (hälp), G. Half, lesser. halbe Applikatur. Half-shift. Halb-bass, -cello, or violine. A small double-bass, 'cello or violin. H.-violon. A small double-bass. halbgedackt (gĕ-däkt). Half covered (of stops). H.-instrumente. Vide GANZINSTRUMENTE. H.-kadenz or -schluss. Half-cadence. H.-mond. Crescent. H.-note. Half-note, or H.-taktnote. Hand-note; in horn-playing, a stopped note. H.-orgel, or -werk. An organ with no stops lower than 8-ft. pitch. H.-prinzipal. An obsolete 4-ft. stop. H.-rüdenhorn. Vide HIEFHORN. h.-stark. Mezzoforte. H.-stimme. A half or partial stop. H.-ton, or halber Ton. Semitone. half-cadence or half-close. Vide CADENCE. half-note. A minim. half-note rest. A pause equal to a half-note. half-shift. Vide SHIFT. half-step. The smallest interval used. half-stop. Vide STOP.

hal'il. Vide KHALIL.

Hall (häl), G. Sound, clang. hallen (häl'lĕn). To sound, to clang. Halldrommete (drôm-mā-te) or -trompete. A powerful trumpet.

hallelujah (häl-lĕ-loo'yä), Heb. Alleluia.

hal'ling. Norwegian country-dance.

Halmpfeife (pfī'fĕ), G. Shepherd's pipe.

Hals (häls), G. 1. Neck (of a violin, etc.). 2. Throat. 3. Stem.

Halt (hält), G. A pause, a hold.

Hammer (pron. in G. häm'mĕr). 1. That part of the mechanism of a piano which strikes the strings and produces the tone. 2. Mallet for playing the dulcimer. 3. The striker of a bell. tuning h. An instr. for tightening the pegs of a piano or harp. Hammerklavier (klä-fēr'), G. The modern piano.

hanacca (hä-näk'-kä), I., hanaise (ă-nĕz), F., Hanakisch (hä-nä'-kĭsh), G. A rapid polonaise-like Moravian dance in 3-4 time.

Hand, harmonic. Vide GUIDONIAN. hand-guide. Chiroplast. h.-harmonic. Accordeon. h.-horn. One without valves or pistons. h.-organ. A portable barrel organ (q. v.). h.-note. In horn-playing, a stopped note.

Hand (hänt), pl. Hände (hĕnt'-ĕ), G. Hand. H.-bassl. An obsolete instr. between viola and 'cello. H.-bildner (or -leiter). A chiroplast. H.-lage. Position of the hand. H.-stücke. Finger-exercises. H.-trommel. Tambourine.

handle-piano. Vide BARREL ORGAN 2.

Harfe (här'-fĕ), G. A harp. Harfen bass (här'fĕn-bâss). A bass of broken chords. Harfensaite. Harp-string. Harfenspieler. Harpist. Harfenett. Vide SPITZHARFE. Harfeninstrumente. Instrs. whose strings are plucked. H.-laute. Vide DITAL.

Harke (här'-ke), G. Fork for ruling staves.

Harmo'nia, L. Daughter of Mars and Venus; music in general.

Harmonic. As an adjective. Musical, concordant; relating to harmony (i. e., to chords, etc. as opposed to melody) and to the theory of music. h. chord. A generator and its harmonics. (Vide below.) h. curve. The figure described by a string in vibration. h. figuration. Broken chords, often with passing notes. h. hand. Vide GUIDONIAN. h. mark. A small circle over a note to be played as an harmonic. h. note, tone, vide the noun HARMONIC. h. scale.

The series of partials (vide ACOUSTICS). h. stop. A flute or reed stop having its pipes pierced midway, so that the harmonics predominate over the fundamental tone, hence h. flute and h. reed. h. triad. Major triad. h. trumpet. The sackbut.

As a noun (frequently used in the plural). 1. One of the many partial tones that go to make up the compound vibration we call tone, this compound being called by the name of its generator. (Vide ACOUSTICS.) 2. A vibrating string when lightly touched at a nodal point (as that of a half, 3d, 4th, or 5th, etc., of the string's length) will vibrate in divisions (2, 3, 4, or 5, etc.), each division sounding the same tone respectively an octave, a 12th, 15th or 17th, etc., higher than the string. These produce a choir-like unison of exquisite sweetness whose flutiness has given them the name flageolet-tones. These harmonics if produced from an open string are called natural; from a stopped string, artificial. Harmonics are called for by the word flageolet or its abbr. fl.; or the words flautando, flautato, or flûte, or by a small circle (o) called the harmonic-mark over the note to be touched, or by writing a black note indicating the open string, a diamond-headed note above it showing where the string is to be touched, and a small note above to indicate the actual sound. Grave Harmonics. Combinational tones. "Properly speaking, the harmonics of any compound tone are other compound tones of which the primes are partials of the original compound tone of which they are said to be harmonics."

—A. J. ELLIS.

Harmon'ica. 1. An arrangement by Benj. Franklin of musical glasses in a scale, on a spindle turned by a treadle. The glasses were moistened in a trough, and as they revolved melodies and chords could be played. F. called his device armonica. 2. The mouth-harmonica or harmonicon is a reed mouth-instr. producing different tones when the breath is inhaled and exhaled. 3. A delicate stop. Harmonica-ätherisch (ā'-tĕr-ĭsh), G. A delicate mixture-stop. harmonichord. Vide PIANO-VIOLIN.

harmonicello (chĕl'-lō). A 'cello-like instr. with 15 strings (5 of them wire) inv. by J. K. Bischoff, Nürnberg, 18th century.

harmonici. Vide CANONICI.

harmon'icon. 1. Vide HARMONICA. 2. A keyed harmonica with flue-stop, inv. by W. C. Müller. 3. An orchestrion.

harmoni-cor, F. A wind-instr. with harmonium-like reeds in a clarinet-like tube, inv. by Jaulin, Paris.

harmo'nicum. An improved bandonion; virtually an accordeon worked with treadles, inv. by Brendl and Klosser, Saxony, 1893.

Harmonie (här-mō-nē'), G. 1. Harmony. 2. A chord. 3. (a) The wind-instruments collectively, or (b) music for them. h.-eigen, Chordal; appropriate or native to the harmony; opposed to h.-fremd, foreign. H.-lehre (lā-rĕ). Theory of music. H.-musik. Vide HARMONIE 3. H.-trompete. A trumpet employing stopped tones with success. H.-verständiger (fĕr-shtĕn'-dĭkh'-r). A harmonist. harmoniren (här-mō-nē'-rĕn). To harmonise. harmo'nisch. Harmonious.

harmonist. One versed in the laws of music.

harmonie (ăr-mō-nē), F. 1. Harmony. 2. Harmonics. harmonieux (ăr-mōn-yŭ'). Harmonious. harmonieusement (yŭz-măn). Harmoniously.

Harmo'nika, G. 1. Accordeon. 2. Concertina. H.-töne. Vide HARMONICS.

Harmo'niker, G. Harmonici.

harmon'iphon. An instr. with keyboard, inv. 1837, by Panis, of Paris, to supply the place of oboes in orchestras. The sounds are produced from reeds acted upon by currents of air.

harmonique (ăr-mō-nēk), F. Harmonic, applied to pipes of double length.

harmoniquement (ăr-mō-nēk-măn), F. Harmonically.

harmo'nium. Vide REED-ORGAN.

har'monise. To combine two or more parts in accordance with the laws of music; to add accompanying chords to a melody.

harmonom'eter. A monochord.

harmony, chromatic (or diatonic). That characterised by chromatic (or diatonic) progression. close h. That in which the 3 highest parts do not cover more than an octave; opposed to open, dispersed, or extended h. compound h. That in which some of the tones are doubled; opposed to simple h. essential h. (a) The fundamental chords of a key. (b) The harmonic outline stripped of embellishment. figured h. That in which the chord progressions are embellished variously; opposed to plain or natural h., the common triad. forbidden h. A chord whose construction or approach is contrary to the rules of Harmony. suspended h. That in which one or more notes is suspended. pure h. (as of a string-quintet). Opposed to tempered h., as of a piano. Vide TEMPERAMENT. strict h. That which is rigidly obedient to the rules; opposed to free h. Two-part (etc.) h. That in which two (or more) parts appear.

Modern Harmony in Practice.

By A. J. Goodrich.

[Note.—Many of the terms touched upon here will be found treated in more detail under their names.—Ed.]

IN its broader sense Harmony embraces the origin and classification of chords, their rearrangement, inversion, and progression; modulation, resolution, transition, false relation, sequence, suspension, chromatic harmonisation and other topics too numerous to mention here. Yet the fundamental principles of harmony may be easily explained and readily understood. ¶We begin with concords because they are most euphonious and not subject to the somewhat complex theories of resolution. A concord or consonant triad consists of a normal ("perfect") 5th and a major or minor 3d from the root. When the intervals stand in this order the lowest note is the root, or the name-note of the chord. It would thus appear to the eye all upon lines or all upon spaces: thus G b d form the chord of G major. G, b flat, and d, would form the chord of G minor. ¶Every major key bears six concords, the imperfect triad on the leading note not being a concord. ¶The reader may now sound upon a piano or organ these six concords, each in its first or root position. After sounding the first chord and before proceeding to the next, ascertain the gender,—that is, whether it is masculine (major), or feminine (minor). These distinctions should be determined by the auricular sense, and also by the visual sense. Practice and theory should be thus combined. ¶From the theory of scales and keys and intervals [vide these terms] the reader is supposed to know whether a given chord represents a major or a minor key. The 1st, 3d, and 5th, of every major scale form a major concord : the same numbers in a minor key yield a minor concord. But it is still more important that the ear shall be trained to distinguish between these genders, because music appeals most directly to the auricular faculties.

Concords Classified.

When all the concords have been sounded and their characteristics recognised, they should be classified. How many major? How many minor? Which degrees of the scale bear major and which minor concords? ¶Technical terms may be then applied : chord of the tonic, 1 ; chord of the sub-dominant, 4 ; chord of the dominant, 5 ; chord of the super-dominant (relative minor of the tonic), 6 ; chord of the super-tonic, 2 ; chord of the mediant, 3. In other words we have as elemental material, the chords of the tonic, sub-dominant, and dominant (always major in a major key) and the relative minors [vide RELATIVE] of these. This process should be repeated in all the major keys.

Concords Rearranged.

A chord has as many close positions as it has letters. In the first position the root is lowest. In the second position the root is highest, while the third is below. In the third position the root is in the middle, the 5th being below and the 3d above. ¶At first the different positions are to be effected by rearranging the letters thus : C, e, g, root position of the C chord. Place the C last (an octave higher), and the second position will result e, g, C. Now place the e last (an octave higher), and the third position will appear. —g, C, e. Since no new element has been introduced it is evident that the chord still remains and that C is the root. The capital letter serves to indicate to the eye whether the theoretical root is below, in the middle, or at the top. (A distinction is to be made between these simple rearrangements of concords and the actual inversion of chords. Inversion comes much later.) Every concord in the key is to be rearranged by means of letters, as indicated, and the different positions are to be numbered in regular order 1, 2, 3. ¶The six concords are now to be rearranged on the key-board, using the letter schemes as a preliminary guide. After the six chords have thus been played in their three close positions the process should be continued in other keys without the aid of letters or written notes. ¶Care must be exercised not to add any new element to the tones of a given chord while its rearrangements are being played. For instance, in the second position of the F chord pupils sometimes produce the A minor triad by playing a, C, e, instead of a, c, F. Sound all the concords in their three close positions in every major key. (See Ex. 1.) ¶Also it is desirable to play the rearrangements in this manner descending, as well as ascending. (Interesting examples in this style may be invented.)

EXAMPLE I.

PRELIMINARY HARMONISATION.

The six rearranged chords in any given key are now selected as a guide. These must appear in notation. Every tone in the major scale of C is to be harmonised with as many concords as contain the note to be illustrated. This is to be accomplished at the instrument. 1. Select c'' (an octave above middle c). This is a stationary tone representing, for instance, a soprano part. 2. How many of the six concords in this key contain c? (Examine the chart of rearranged chords in C, always beginning with the first chord, and ascertain how many contain c,—whether above or below is immaterial.) 3. What is the first chord that contains a c? What position has c at the top? 4. Play this. 5. What is the next chord containing c? 6. What position has c uppermost? 7. Play this, keeping the same finger (5) upon 3d space c''. 8. What is the third chord containing c? In what position is c uppermost? 9. Play this, the c being still in the soprano part, highest. If this much has been correctly executed the following results will appear: The C chord will be in its second position, the F chord in its first position, and the A minor chord in its third position, e, A, c. Each chord is to be sounded simultaneously, the letters which represent notes are read from below, upward, therefore e, g, C, indicate that the chord of C is to be struck, C being uppermost. Repeat the process at the piano: C chord, 2. F chord, 1. A minor chord, 3. The fingering should be $\begin{matrix}5&5&5\\2&3&3\\1&1&1\end{matrix}$. (See Ex. 2.) ¶The second chord of the scale is now selected, and this is to be harmonically illustrated in the same manner. 1. How many concords in the key of C contain d? (Do not use the imperfect triad in any of these elementary exercises.) 2. What is the first chord containing d? 3. What position has d at the top? 4. Play this. 5. What is the other chord having a d? (Mention the letter-name of the chord and say whether it be masculine or feminine.) 6. What position of the G chord has d at the top? 7. Play it, then repeat. In this manner every tone in the key of C should be harmonically illustrated. Only the six concords in this key are to be used, though each one may be played in any of its three close positions, according to circumstances. Transpose to other major keys.

EXAMPLE II.

Simple Theory of Strict Chord Progression.

Any tone which occurs in any two different chords is called a connecting tone. Every connecting tone is played by the same finger in both chords or sung by the same voice. When there are two notes in common between two chords in progression, the connecting tones are retained, or remain stationary —tied or played by the same finger. (The previous elementary progressions agree with this theory.) ¶ Now arrange a score of four staves, the bass staff below and three treble staves above. On the first treble staff write the progression C, F, A minor, keeping the connecting notes stationary. On the second treble staff write the C chord in its next position above, g, C, e. Then write the F chord (with c in the middle) and the A minor chord with a and c tied from the preceding. On the third or highest treble staff write the C chord in its first position and proceed to make the same progression, i. e., C to F, and F to A. It is to be understood that the progressions on the two upper staves are similar to those on the lowest treble staff, 2 and 3 being rearrangements of 1. In each instance the same principles are to be applied.

Example III.

* Write an octave lower when the parts run too high.

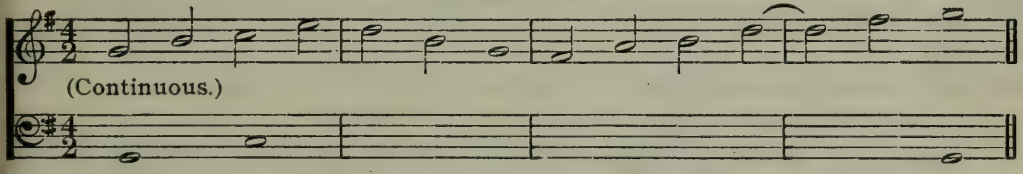
For instance in progressing from the C to the F the connecting note (c) will appear alternately in the soprano, mezzo-soprano, and contralto parts. When the first measure is completed in the three treble parts, vertically, add the roots in the bass staff immediately beneath the treble chords. The bass part moves fundamentally, from root to root, while the treble parts progress melodically, that is without skipping. Do not skip the bass part up or down more than a 5th. ¶Proceed to harmonise d with the two concords which accompany it : then write two rearrangements above. Observe strictly the connecting-note principle. When the second measure is completed in the treble parts add the roots in the bass as before. Every tone in the scale is to be treated similarly—2, 4 and 7 having but two chords each as accompanying harmonies. (See Ex. 3.) ¶After this scheme has been worked out on paper, choose another key and proceed to make a similar example at the key-board, without the aid of notes except perhaps the rearranged chords, which may be used as a chart. Continue this process in several other major keys, until the progressions can be played readily and correctly.

Melodic Skips of a 3d.

When the melody skips up or down a 3d the accompanying harmony remains the same. In other words the melody skip may be accompanied by any chord in the key which contains both notes of the melodic interval. This has been partially illustrated in the rearrangement of concords. Therefore c and e may be accompanied by the C chord or the A minor chord, but not by both chords. When the melody skips, the bass remains stationary as a connecting note. Consequently there is always a connecting note either above or below in the present examples. A skipping theme is given and this should be harmonised at the piano and on paper. (See Ex. 4.)

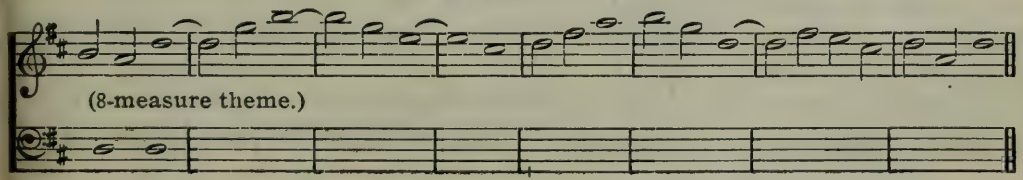
Example IV.



Skips of a 4th.

These are harmonised by the same principle, though a skip of a fourth admits but one chord as accompaniment : that chord which contains both notes of the skip furnishes the solution. During the skip the bass remains, and acts as a connecting note. Example 5 is to be harmonised practically and theoretically, as explained.

Example V.



Harmonic Warnings for Composers.

By A. J. Goodrich.

1. Don't use any intervals in parallel movement except these :

(a) Unisons, and octaves when the latter are above or below, with no harmony between the octaves.

(b) Major or minor thirds, ascending or descending diatonically.

(c) Minor thirds ascending or descending chromatically.

(d) Major thirds ascending or descending chromatically. (These were formerly forbidden, but modern composers use them freely for certain purposes. They are, however, rather harsh and incisive.)

(e) Major or minor sixths ascending or descending diatonically—like the thirds.

(f) Major sixths up or down chromatically.

(g) Minor sixths up or down chromatically. (These are inversions of the major thirds, and therefore the same remarks apply.)

(h) Augmented fourths may ascend or descend chromatically where they form parts of diminished chords in succession. (The exigencies of notation will require that the imperfect fifth—which is an harmonic equivalent of the augmented fourth—shall appear occasionally in place of the latter. Thus, c and f sharp may be followed by b and f natural. Practically the two intervals are identical and interchangeable.)

(i) Descending augmented fourths may occur in a series of dominant seventh chords proceeding according to the dominant relation—up a fourth or down a fifth.

2. Don't use any of these intervals in parallel movement :

(a) Major or minor seconds, ascending or descending.

(b) Normal or "perfect" fifths, especially between bass and soprano, or contralto and soprano. The imperfect may follow the perfect fifth. But the reverse of this is rather rough and generally ineffective.

(c) [Normal fourths, when they are accompanied by diatonic thirds, above or below, have been frequently employed. A succession of triads in their second or third close positions necessarily involves parallel fourths, as in the Finale to Beethoven's op. 2, II.] Parallel fourths ought to be excluded from strict two-part counterpoint, as they are too much inclined to vacuousness.

(d) Major or minor sevenths are not to be used in parallel succession. Diminished sevenths sound like major sixths. Therefore these two intervals may succeed each other alternately.

(e) Parallel octaves have always been forbidden, and usually their effect is awkward or confusing. Yet hundreds of instances might be quoted from the masters. A simple illustration is the little Romance from Schumann usually coupled with his "Träumerei"—the theme above is doubled by a solo bass part below.

(f) Cross relation or false relation is another pitfall into which the young composer is likely to stumble. The effect is sometimes very unpleasant and at other times perfectly satisfactory. ¶The student should avoid at all times all interdicted or suspicious progressions, even though the "evil" be more fancied than real. If he becomes a creative artist he must eventually act on his own responsibility, free and independent of all prescription and formula.

harp, E., harpe (ärp), F. A stringed triangular instr. of great antiquity and variety. The gut-strings which are plucked with both hands are necessarily diatonic. In the old single-action harp (key of E flat, compass F′-d′′′′) the notes could be raised a half-tone by the use of pedals. Thanks to the ingenuity of Sebastian Erard, who in 1820 perfected the "double-action harp," all keys are obtainable on the modern harp in fairly quick succession, by the manipulation of seven pedals each raising a string and all its octaves a half or a whole tone. Thus by sharpening or flattening the proper tones, any key may be obtained. The natural scale is C♭, and the more sharps in the key the less the sonority; double flats and sharps are impossible, and remote modulation difficult. There are 46 (or 47) strings, compass C′ flat–f′′′′ (or g′′′′ flat). double h. One with 2 rows of differently tuned strings. triple h. (such as the Welsh). One with 3 rows. Æolian h., h. éolienne. Vide ÆOLIAN. couched h. The spinet. pointed h. Vide SPITZHARFE. chromatic h. Inv. by Pfranger; it has, however, too many strings. jew's harp. A small instr. with metal tongue, played upon by placing it between the teeth, and striking with the tongue and the finger; the breath determines the tone; known in the trade as "Irish harp." h. instruments. Those whose strings are not bowed.

harpechorde (ärp-kôrd), F., harpicordo (är-pĭ-kôr′-dō), I. The harpsichord.

harpeggiren (här-pĕd-jē′rĕn), G. Vide ARPEGGIATE.

harpe-lute. Vide DITAL. harp-pedal. The soft pedal of a piano.

harpo-lyre. A 3-necked, 21-stringed guitar, inv. by Salomon, 1829.

harp′secol. Vide HARPSICHORD.

harp′sichord. A precursor of the modern piano, whose strings were set in vibration by jacks carrying quills or bits of hard leather (instead of tangents, as in the clavichord). Sometimes it had more than one key-board as in the vis-à-vis (vē-zä-vē), which had a key-board at each end. The double h. had 2 unison strings and an octave for each tone; and stops for varying the use of these. The harmonica h. is an harmonica with key-board.

harp-style. Arpeggio style.

harp-way tuning. Early English accordatures of the viol da gamba facilitating arpeggios.

harsur or hasur (hä′-zoor), Heb. A Hebrew instr. of 10 strings.

hart, G. Major; hard; unprepared. h. verminderter Dreiklang. A triad with major 3d and diminished 5th. hartklingend. Harsh-sounding.

hâte (ät), F. Haste, speed.

haubois (ō-bwä), F. An oboe.

Haupt (howpt), G. Head, principal. H.-accent. Principal accent. H.-akkord. Fundamental triad. H.-gesang, H.-melodie. Principal melody. H.-kadenz. Full cadence. H.-kirche. Cathedral. H.-manual. The great manual; the great organ. H.-note. 1. The principal note in a shake, turn or trill. 2. The chord-note. 3. Accented note. 4. Melody-note. H.-periode. Principal period. H.-probe. The final rehearsal. H.-satz. Principal theme, subject or idea. H.-schluss. Final cadence. H.-septime. Dominant 7th. H.-stimme. Principal part. H.-thema. Principal theme. H.-ton. 1. Fundamental or principal tone. 2. The tonic. 3. The 5th in a minor triad. H.-tonart. The principal key. H.-werk. Great organ.

hausse (ōs), F. Nut of a bow.

hausser (ōs-sā), F. To raise the pitch.

haut (ō), haute (ōte), F. Acute, shrill, high. haute-contre (ōt-kôñtr). High tenor. haute-dessus (ōt-dĕs-sü). High treble, soprano. hautement (ōt-mäñ). Haughtily. haute-taille (ōt-tä-ē). High tenor.

hautb. Abbr. of Hautboy.

hautbois (ō-bwä), F., hautboy (ho'-boy), E. 1. The oboe. 2. An 8-ft. reed-stop. h.-d'amour. An organ-stop. Vide OBOE. hautboy-clarion. Vide OCTAVE HAUTBOY.

H.-bes (hä-bĕs), G. B double flat. H.-dur (hä-door). B major.

head. 1. The part of the note which marks its position on the staff. 2. Point of a bow. 3. Membrane of a drum. 4. The part above the neck of violins, etc., containing the pegs. head voice. The upper or highest register of the voice.

heel. The wooden brace fastening the neck of violins, etc., to the body.

Heerhorn (hār'-hôrn), G. A military trumpet. Heerpauke (hār'pow-ke), G. Old kettle-drum, tymbal. Heerpauker. Kettle-drummer.

heftig (hĕf'-tĭkh), G. Boisterous, passionate. Heftigkeit (kīt). Vehemence.

heimlich (hīm'-lĭkh), G. Secret, stealthy, mysterious.

heiss (hīs), G. Hot, ardent.

heiter (hī'tĕr), G. Serene, glad.

Heldenlied (hĕl'dĕn-lēt), G. Hero-song. heldenmüthig (mü-tĭkh). Heroic. Heldentenor. Dramatic tenor.

hel'icon, E., Hel'ikon, G. 1. A military bass brass wind-instr., carried over the shoulder; scales, F, E flat, C and B flat (the lowest tone of the bass of which is $B_{,,}$). 2. Ancient 9-stringed device showing the theory of intervals.

hell (hĕl), G. Clear, bright.

helper. An octave-pipe set beside one of 8-ft. pitch to add to its brilliance.

hem'i, G. Half. hemidemisemiquaver (-rest). A 64th note (or rest). hemidiapen'te. Diminished fifth. hemidit'onos, Gr. Minor third.

hemio'la, hemio'lia, Gr. 1. The ratio 3 : 2. 2. Quintuple time. 3. Interval of a 5th. 4. A triplet. 5. Vide NOTATION (COLOUR).

hemiope, Gr. An ancient three-holed flute.

hemiphrase. One bar of a phrase.

hemito'nium, Gr. A semitone in Greek music (ratio 256 : 243).

heptachord. 1. Interval of a seventh. 2. A 7-stringed instr. 3. A Greek series of 7 tones with half-tone step between the 3d and 4th.

heptade (hĕp'-tăd), hep'tadechord, E. Vide ELLIS.

heptam'eris, Gr. A seventh part of a meris.

Herabstrich (hār'-äp'strĭkh), G. Down-bow. Heraufstrich (hār'-owf-strĭkh). Up-bow.

heraufgehen (hār-owf'gāĕn), G. To ascend.

hero'ic, E., heroisch (hār'-ō-ĭsh), G., héroïque (ā-rō-ēk), F. Bold, brave. Vide EROICA.

Herstrich (hār-strĭkh), G. Down-bow (on 'cello and double-bass). Herunterstrich, G. Down-bow (on the violin, etc.).

hervorgehoben (hār-fôr'ghĕ-hō'ben), hervorhebend (hā'bĕnt), hervortretend (trā-tĕnt), G. With emphasis.

Herz (hĕrts), G. "Heart." Vide TASSEAU.

herzig (hĕrts-ikh), herzlich (lĭkh), G. Tender.

Hes (hĕs), G. B flat when directly derived from B natural (or H). Heses, B double flat.

heulen (hoi′-lĕn), G. To cipher.

hexachord, Gr., hexachorde (ĕx-ä-kôrd), F. 1. A scale, or system, of six sounds. 2. A sixth. 3. A six-stringed lyre.

hexam′eron, Gr. Group of six pieces.

hex′aphonic. Composed of six voices.

hey de guise (ĕ-dŭ-gēze), F. A country-dance.

hia′tus. A gap.

hidden. 1. Obscured, covered, yet implied; thus in the skip, say, from e to g, the tone f is implied though not struck or dwelt on; it could be called hidden. But the term is used rather of intervals similarly implied, thus in the progression, say from e–c to g–d, the tone f is passed over, and as f makes with c the same interval as g with d, that is, a perfect fifth, the progression becomes a hidden or implied fifth, and is put under the same ban by stricter theorists, though sanctioned by free practice. Similarly a progression, as of g–b′ to c–c′ contains hidden octaves. 2. h. canon. Close canon.

Hief (hēf), Hiefstoss (shtôss), G. Sound of the hunting-horn. Hiefhorn, Hifthorn (hĭft), Hüfthorn (hĭft). A wooden hunt-horn with 2 or 3 notes, and in 3 pitches: H.-zinke (tsĭnk-kĕ). High. Rüdenhorn (rüd′-n). Low. Halb-rüdenhorn. Medium.

hierophon (hēr′-ō-fōn), Gr. Singer of hymns.

higgai′on se′lah, Heb. A term, perhaps calling for stringed instr. and trumpets.

high. 1. Acute in pitch. 2. Upper, or first, as h. soprano. high bass. A baritone. higher rhythm. A rhythm composed of smaller ones. High mass. Vide MASS. h. tenor. Counter-tenor. h. treble clef. The G clef on the first line.

hilfs-. Same as hülfs-.

Hinaufstrich (hĭn-owf′strĭkh), G. Up-bow on the violin, etc. Hinstrich (hĭn′-strĭkh), G. Up-bow on 'cello and double-bass.

Hintersatz, G. An old mixture-stop, re-enforcing the open diapason.

Hirtenflöte (hĭrt′-ĕn-flā′-tĕ), G. Shepherd's flute. Hirtengedicht (gĕ-dĭkht). Pastoral poem. H.-lied (lēt). Pastoral song. H.-pfeife (pfī-fe). Pastoral pipe. hirtlich (hĭrt′-lĭkh). Pastoral, rural.

His (hĭs), G. B♯. hisis (hĭs′ĭs), G. B double sharp.

H.-moll (hä′môl), G. B minor.

Hoboe (hō-bō′-ĕ), Hoboy (hō-bōē), G. Oboe. Hobo′ist, G. Oboist.

hoch (hôkh), G. High, sharp, very. Hochamt (hôkh′ämt). High Mass. h. feierlich (fī′-ĕr-likh). Very solemn. H.-gesang, H.-lied (lēt). Ode, hymn. H.-horn. Oboe. H.-muth (moot). Elevation, pride. Hochzeitsgedicht (tsīts), Hochzeitslied. Wedding-song. Hochzeitsmarsch. Wedding-march. höchsten (hĕkh′-shtĕn), G. Highest.

hock′et, hocqu′etus. 1. An abrupt rest. 2. Old English part-music full of rests and abruptness.

Hof (hôf), G. Court; hence, H.-kapelle (Konzert). Court orchestra (concert). H.-musikant (moo-zi-kant). Court musician. H.-organist. Court organist.

höflich (hĕf′lĭkh), G. Graceful. Höflichkeit (kīt). Grace.

Höhe (hā′ĕ), G. Height, acuteness; upper register of; as Oboen-höhe.

hoheit (hō′hīt), G. Dignity, loftiness.

Hohlflöte (hōl′flā-tĕ), G. "Hollow-toned flute." Open flue-stop of various pitches; in the smaller called Hohlpfeifen. The mutation-stop in the fifth is called Hohlquinte.

hok′et, hock′et. A quint-stop.

hold (hōlt), G. Pleasing, sweet.

hold. The fermate. holding-note.

A note sustained while others are in motion.

hold'ing. Old E. Burden.

Holzbläser (hôlts'blā-zĕr), G. Player(s) on Holz'blasinstrumente, or wood-wind instruments.

hölzernes Gelächter (hĕlts'-ĕr-nĕs gĕ-lĕkh'-tĕr), G. Xylophone.

Holzflöte (hôlts'flā-tĕ), G. "Wood-flute"; a stop.

Holz'harmonika, G. Xylophone.

hom'ophone. A letter or character denoting the same sound as another; thus a♯ and b♭ are homophones. homophon'ic, homoph'onous. 1. Noncontrapuntal, lyric, marked by one melody in predominance. Vide POLYPHONIC. 2. In unison. Vide ANTIPHONIC. homoph'ony, E., homophonie (ôm-ôf-ôn-ē), F. Music that is homophonic 1 or 2.

hook. The stroke added to the stem of notes smaller than ♩ notes.

hop'per. In piano action, the escapement-lever.

Hop'ser, Hops-tanz (tänts), G. Country-dance. Hopswalzer (hôps' vältsĕr), G. Quick waltzes.

hoq'uetus. Hocket.

hora (pl. horae), L. Hour(s). horae canonicae. Canonic hours, those at which services are held: lauds. Sunrise. prime. First hour (6 a.m.). tierce (or terce). 3d (9 a.m.). Sext. 6th (noon). nones. 9th (3 p.m.). vespers. Evening. compline. Final. Services during the night are called nocturns; the word matins includes both nocturns and lauds. horae regulares. Chant sung at regular hours.

horn (G. pl. Hörner) (hĕrn'ĕr), E. & G. General name for all metal wind-instruments. Specifically, the French horn, a brass conical tube variously curved, with a flaring bell at one end, and a cupped mouthpiece at the other; the shape of this mouthpiece, and the ratio of the width to the length of the tube determining the quality of the instr. The old natural horn was diatonic, producing only the tones of its natural scale, some intermediate tones being obtained by putting the hand in the bell, or "stopping" the tone. The key of the horn was changed by taking out one section of its tube (a crook), and inserting a section longer or shorter, thus lowering or raising the key. The tone series was thus incomplete, and the stopped tones were inaccurate. The natural tones depend on the amount of wind-pressure (or in F, embouchure, lipping) which must vary with each note according to the natural scale (see ACOUSTICS).

The horn of this century has gradually displaced the natural horn. It is provided with valves (or auxiliary tubes), which practically lengthen or shorten the tube instantaneously. The tone is produced by embouchure combined with valve-manipulation until a complete chromatic scale is obtainable. Stopped tones are now not necessary, though available for special effects; they are called for by the sign +, by the word "stopped," or by "son bouché" (sôn boo-shā), and are weirdly tragic or romantic.

The range of the horn depends upon its key, the scale of each consisting of a fundamental tone, and the natural series of partials (vide ACOUSTICS), the intermediate tones between the 3d and the 16th partial being obtained by valves or stopping. The horn in C thus sounds C, c, g–c'', from g to c'' being nearly complete chromatically, the upper notes being risky. The other horns are lower by the interval between their key and C; they are B flat, A, A flat, G, F, E, E flat, D, C basso, B flat basso. The keys F♯ (G flat), C♯ (D flat), B and A basso are obtained not by changing crooks, but by drawing out a special slide which lowers the key a semitone. In valve-horns the F horn is by far most common. Music for horns is now always written in the G clef, the F clef being used for the low notes, which are always written an octave lower than they sound. For convenience of embouchure, the notes are written as if the horn were always in C, and the player so plays it; but the crook used governs the tone, and a C on the staff sounds as the F below on an F horn, as A flat on the A flat horn, etc. Alpine h. A wooden horn 8 ft. long. basset h. Vide BASSET. hunting-h. The primitive natural or French horn. horn-band. A band of trumpeters. A Russian H-B. is one in which each hunting-horn plays but one note. horning. Vide SHIVAREE. Hornmusik', G. Music for the brass. Hornquinten, G. The hidden fifths prevalent in music for two horns. Hornsordin', G. A conical or pear-shaped mute inserted in the bell.

hornpipe. A old E. shawm with a bell of horn; hence, an old E. dance of great vivacity, in 3-4 or 4-4 time.

Hosan'na, Hosian'na, Heb. "Save, I pray," an interjection in prayer, hence part of the Sanctus. Vide MASS.

Hose (hō'-zĕ), G. Boot of a pipe.

houl (howl). A Persian military drum.

hours. Vide HORÆ.

hreol (wrā'ôl). A Danish peasant-dance.

H. S. Abbr. for Hauptsatz.

huehuetl, huehuitl (wā-wāt'-'l). An Aztec drum 3 feet high with a membrane that could be tightened at will, changing the pitch and furnishing an harmonic bass.

Hüfthorn (hĭft-hôrn), G. Bugle-horn.

hug'gab, Heb. 1. An organ. 2. Pan's pipes.

huitpied (wēt-pĭ-ā), F. Eight feet (of stops). huitpieds. An organ with no stops larger than 8 ft.

Huldigungsmarsch (hool-dĭ-goongks-märsh), G. A solemn march for reviews.

Hülfs- (hĭlfs), G. Auxiliary. Hülfslinien (lē'-nĭ-ĕn). Ledger-lines. H.-note, H.-ton. Auxiliary, accessory note. H.-stimme (shtĭm'mĕ). A mutation-stop.

Hummel (hoom'mel), Hümmelchen (hĭm'mĕl-khĕn), G. 1. A bagpipe. 2. In organs the thorough-bass drone. 3. The Balalaika, because it had a sympathetic or drone-string. 4. The drones in a hurdy-gurdy.

hummen (hoom'mĕn), G. To hum.

Humor (hoo'-mor), G. Humour, whim. Humoreske (hoo'mo-rĕs'ke), G., humoresque (ü-môr-ĕsk), F. A humorous or whimsical composition.

hunting-horn. A bugle or French horn. hunting-song. Song in praise of the chase. hunt's-up. A boisterous morning-song.

hurdy-gurdy. An old instr. with four strings, acted on by a wheel rubbed in resin. Two of the strings are stopped by certain keys, the others act as a drone-bass; compass g–g''.

hurry. Premonitory roll of drum or tremolo of strings in stage-music.

hurtig (hoor'tĭkh), G. Quick, allegro. H.-keit (kīt). Agility.

hydraul'icon, hydraulic organ. An instr. older than the wind-organ, inv. 180 B.C., by Ktesibios of Alexandria, the wind-pressure being regulated by water.

hymn, F., hymne (ēmn), F., Hymne (hēm'nĕ), G. A sacred or patriotic song. h. vesper. A hymn sung in the R. C. Vesper service. hymnal, hymn-book. A collection of hymns. hymnology, hymnologie (ēm-nŏl-ō-zhē). Vide next page.

hymnus, L. A hymn. h. Ambrosianus. The Ambrosian chant.

Hymnology.

By H. E. Krehbiel.

HYMNS, in the sense in which we apply the term, as an adjunct of Christian worship, appear to have been used from the earliest days of the Church. The early Christians naturally borrowed their music from their forefathers in Judea, Greece, and Rome, and the Church thus was quite lacking in any uniformity in this element of worship. Not till the various branches of the Church in the Roman Empire were united under a Christian Emperor, Constantine, is there evidence of attempts to form a system. The first result of this was the Ambrosian chant, and later, the Gregorian, at first congregational, later confined exclusively to the priest. Famous Latin hymns, like the "Te Deum," "Magnificat," "Benedictus," etc., were in use from very early days of the Church, being sung to plain-chant melodies. In the period of the great Church composers—Josquin des Prés, Palestrina, Orlando di Lasso, and others, these hymn-tunes were often used as canti fermi for masses and motets; and Palestrina also used them as the basis for a set of "Hymns for the Entire Year," one of the most important of his works. ¶In the meantime a more popular development of hymnal music had been going on in the Mysteries and Miracle-plays, outside the immediate supervision of the Church, that were so conspicuous a feature of popular life and worship in the Middle Ages. In the Church itself the music had been entirely in the hands of the priests and the regular choirs. At the time of the Reformation, however, Luther introduced a great change in this respect, for which the ground was already prepared by the popular development of hymn-singing just mentioned. The chief note of the Reformation was individuality in worship, the transfer of its chief features from the priest to the congregation; and in line with this principle Luther laid great stress on the reintroduction of congregational singing, which had been abandoned since the early days of the Church. Luther produced a great number of hymns, the words of which he fitted to popular melodies of the day. The first Lutheran hymn-book was published in 1524; it was in the vernacular and its popularity in Germany soon became enormous, leading to the speedy issue of innumerable other works of the same kind. Luther not only used the melodies of folk-songs for these hymns, but caused new tunes to be written, and some of them—notably the most famous, "Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott,"—he is said to have composed himself. It ought to be said, however, that his authorship of the music of this "Battle Hymn of the Reformation" has been disputed. They were all broad choral tunes simply harmonised, such as remain to-day in constant use in Germany, and formed the model for the hymns of the whole Protestant Church. In France the metrical psalms of Marot and Beza were as enthusiastically received by the Protestants as Luther's hymns in Germany; they were originally sung to popular tunes of the day as contained in a psalter published in 1542, by Calvin, in Geneva. Thereafter numerous other collections were published, notably one by Claude Goudimel, in 1565. ¶In England the general cultivation of part-singing in the madrigals made the acceptance of popular hymnody as a part of the new religious movement facile and speedy. Here, as in France, the first hymns were metrical versions of the Psalms in English, and numerous collections of them were published in the last half of the sixteenth century, at first for one part only. "The Whole Psalmes in foure parts," harmonised in the simplest manner possible, published in 1563, was the first harmonised collection of English hymn-tunes. Numerous collections of such tunes were issued thereafter, the most notable being Ravenscroft's, in 1621, and Playford's, in 1671. ¶With the composition of hymns by Wesley and his followers in the eighteenth century came a new poetic material of which musicians were not slow to avail themselves, and which resulted in new hymn-tunes of greater warmth of feeling, differing entirely from the older school of hymns in both melody and harmony. These have had a great, if not always beneficial, influence on the modern development of hymnal music. ¶Hymnology has held a notable place in the history of American music. The stern piety of the Puritan immigrants in New England developed a great activity in this branch of musical art, after it had been freed from the shackles that at first confined it, and the number of early American hymn-tune composers was large. Among these were William Billings (who in 1770 published "The American Psalm Singer: or American Chorister," containing hymns of his own composition), Samuel Holyoke, Andrew Law, Jacob Kimball, Oliver Holden, and others. In the earlier years of the nineteenth century Thomas Hastings, Lowell Mason—whose influence in a secular way on the development of music and musical taste in America was marked—and Nathaniel Gould were the most prominent.

hy'pate, Gr. The uppermost lyre-string but the lowest in tone. hypaton. Lowest tetrachord. Vide MODES.

hypatho'ides. The lower tones in the Greek scale.

hyper (hī'-per), Gr. Over, above, of intervals, "super," or "upper" (as hyperdiapa'son, the octave above; h.-diapen'te, the 5th above; h.-dito'nos, the 3d above, etc.); of the Greek transposition scales and ecclesiastical octave species, "a fourth higher"; the Greek octave species "a fifth higher," or "a fourth lower." Vide MODES for such words as hyper-æolian, etc.

hypo, Gr. Below, under; of intervals, "sub," or "lower." hypodiapa'son. The lower octave. h-diapen'te. The fifth below. h-dito'nos. The third below. For the names of the Greek transposition scales and ecclesiastical modes, as hypoæo'lian, etc., vide MODES.

Hzbl. Abbr. of Holzbläser (q. v.).

I

I (ē) I., pl. "The." Also the letter is used by Kirnberger, to indicate a major seventh, as b♮ in place of b♭ in the 7th chord on c. Tartini used u.

Ias'tian, Gr. The Ionian mode.

ic'tus, Gr. Stress, accent, emphasis.

idea. A theme, subject, figure, or motive.

idée fixe (ē-dā fēx), F. Berlioz's name for a recurring theme or motive.

idyl, idillio (ē-dēl'lĭ-ō), I., idylle (ē-dē-yŭ in F., in G. ē-dĭl'lĕ). A pastoral.

il (ēl), I. The. il più (ēl pē-oo'). The most, e. g., il più forte possibile. As loud as possible.

ilarità (ē-lä-rĭ-tä'), I. Hilarity.

imboccatura (ĭm-bôk-kä-too'rä), I. 1. Mouthpiece. 2. Embouchure.

imbroglio (ĭm-brōl'yō), I. "Confusion," a passage of complicated rhythms.

imitando (ĭm-ĭ-tän'dō), I. Imitating. i. la voce (vō'-chĕ). Imitating the voice.

imitation (pron. in F. ĭm-ĭ-tăs-yôṅ), imitatio (ēm-ĭ-tä'tsĭ-ō), I. The repetition by a second voice (the consequent or answer) of a figure, subject or theme first announced by another (the antecedent or subject). If this repetition be exact, interval for interval, note-value for note-value, the imitation is strict or canonic, vide CANON; otherwise free. i. at the 5th, octave, etc. That in which the answer follows the subject at the interval of a 5th, octave, etc. i. augmented or i. by augmentation. That in which the answer is in notes of greater value than those of the subject. diminished i. or i. by diminution. A style of imitation in which the answer is given in notes of less value than those of the subject. freely inverted i. That in which the order of successive notes is not strictly retained. i. in contrary motion. That in which the rising intervals of the subject descend in the answer and vice versa. i. in different divisions. That in which the subject is answered in a different division of a measure; for instance, beginning on the accented is answered on the unaccented. i. in similar motion. That in which the answer retains the order of notes of the subject. retrograde i. (or i. per recte e retro), cancrizans, or cancrizante. That in which the subject is taken backwards in the answer. reversed retrograde i. That in which the subject is taken backwards and also in contrary motion in the answer. strictly inverted i. That in which note-values are precisely answered in contrary motion. tonal i. That which does not alter the key.

imitation pipes and draw-knobs are dummies of more beauty than use.

imitative music. That aiming to mimic the operations of nature, as water-falls, thunder, etc.

imitato (ĭm-ĭ-tä'tō), I. Imitated. imitazione (tä-tsĭ-ō'nĕ). Imitation.

immer (ĭm'mĕr), G. Always, ever, constantly.

immutab'ilis, L. Vide ACCENTUS ECCLESIASTICI.

imparfait (ăṅ-păr-fĕ'), F. Imperfect.

impaziente (ĭm-pät-sĭ-ĕn'-tĕ), I. Impatient. impazientemen'te. Hurriedly.

imperfect. Not perfect or complete. Vide CADENCE and INTERVAL. i. concords, consonances. Thirds and sixths, so called because they change from major to minor, still remaining consonant. i. measure. Old term for two-fold measure. i. time. Old term for common time. i. triad. The chord of the third, fifth and eighth, on the seventh degree; it consists of two minor thirds.

imperfection. 1. Vide LIGATURE. 2. Vide NOTATION.

imperfet'to, I. Imperfect.

imperioso (ĭm-pā-rĭ-o'-so), I. Pompous. imperiosamen'te. Imperiously.

imperturbabile (ĭm-pĕr-toor-bä′bĭ-lĕ), I. Quiet.

impeto (im′-pĕ-tō). impetuosità (im-pā-too-ō-zĭ-tä′), I. Impetuosity, vehemence. impetuo′so, impetuosamen′te. Impetuous(ly).

imponente (nĕn′tĕ), I. Imposingly.

implied discord. A concord contained in a dissonant chord as a major third in an augmented 5th (as f-a-c♯).

implied interval. One not specifically indicated by its numeral but implied by another numeral. Vide HIDDEN.

impresario (ĭm-prĕ-sä′-rĭ-ō), I. Manager of opera, concerts, etc.

impromp′tu (in F. ăn-prôn-tü). An extemporaneous comp., or one having a spirit of informality and caprice.

improper′ia, L. "Reproaches." In R. C. ritual, a series of antiphons and responses for Good Friday morning. In Rome sung to old Faux bourdons arranged by Palestrina; elsewhere to plain-song from the Graduale Romanum.

impropri′etas. Vide LIGATURE.

im provise, impro(v)visare (zä′rĕ), I., improviser (ăn-prô-vē-zā), F. To sing or play without premeditation.

improvisateur (ăn-prô-vē-zä-tŭr′), improvisatrice (trēs), F., Improvisator (ĭm-prō-fī-zä′-tôr), G., Improvvisato′re, I. An improviser.

im′provisation. Extemporaneous performance. Improvisier maschine (ĭm-prō-fĭ-zēr′ mä-shē′-nĕ), G. A melograph. improvvisata (zä′tä), I. An extempore composition. improvviso (ĭm-prôv-vē′-zō), improvvisamen′te, I. Extemporaneous(ly).

in (ēn), I., G. and L. In, into, in the.

inacutire (in-ä-koo-tē′-rĕ), I. To sharpen.

in′betont, G. With medial emphasis.

Inbrunst (ĭn′broonst), G. Fervour. inbrünstig (ĭn-brĭn′-shtĭkh). Ardent.

incalzando (ĭn-käl-tsän′dō), I. Hastening.

Incarna′tus, L. "Was born" (of the Virgin Mary). Part of the Credo. Vide MASS.

inch (of wind). In an organ, wind-pressure is gauged by a graduated U tube in which water rises, the mean pressure being 3 inches.

inchoa′tio, L. Vide CHANT.

incisore (ĭn-chĭ-sō′-rĕ), I. Engraver of music.

inconsola′to (lä′-tō), I. Mournful.

incordare (dä′-rĕ), I. To string.

incrociamen′to (krō-chä), I. Crossing.

indeciso (ĭn-dĕ-chē′-zō), I. Undecided (implying slight changes of time, a somewhat capricious tempo).

indegnato (ĭn-dān-yä′-tō), indegnatamen′te, I. Wrathful(ly).

independent. Used of non-dissonant harmony requiring no resolution.

index. 1. A direct. 2. Forefinger.

indifferen′te (rĕn′-tĕ), indifferentemen′te, I. Indifferent(ly). indifferenza (rĕn′-tsä), I. Indifference.

infantile (ĭn-fän-tē′lĕ), I. Child-like (of the quality of upper notes of some voices).

infe′rior, L. Lower.

infernale (ĭn-fĕr-nä′lē), I. Infernal.

infervorato (rä′-tō), I. Fervent.

infiammatamen′te, I. Ardently.

in′finite, E., infinito (ĭn-fĭ-nē′-tō), I. Used of canon which can be continued indefinitely unless given a special cadence.

inflatil′ia, L. Instrs. of inflation; wind-instruments.

inflection. 1. Modification in the pitch of the voice. 2. In chanting a change from the monotone.

in′fra, L. Beneath. Infrabass, G. Sub-bass.

infuriante (ĭn-foo-rĭ-än′tĕ), infuriato (ä′-tō), I. Furious.

inganno (ĭn-gän′-nō), I. "Deception"; applied to a deceptive cadence; also to unexpected resolutions or modulations. d'inganno. Unexpected.

in′gemination. Old term for repetition of words.

ingressa. Vide INTROIT.

Inhalt (ĭn′hält), G. Contents; idea.

inharmonic relation. Vide FALSE RELATION.

inner. 1. Used of the alto or tenor part as distinguished from the bass and soprano. 2. Used of a pedal-point on an inner part.

innig, inniglich (ĭn′-nĭkh-lĭkh), G. Sincere, tender, heartfelt. Innigkeit (kīt). Deep feeling.

inno (ĭn′-nō), I. A hymn, canticle, ode.

innocente (ĭn-no-chĕn′tĕ), innocentemen′te, I. Innocent(ly), artless(ly). innocenza (ĭn-nō-chĕn′-tsä). Innocence.

inquieto (ĭn-kwĭ-ā′-tō), I. Restless.

insensible (ĭn-sĕn-sē′bĭ-lĕ), insensibilmen′te, I. Imperceptibly, by small degrees.

insisten′do, I. Urgent. insistenza (tĕn′-tsä). Insistence.

inständig (ĭn-shtĕn′dĭkh), G. Urgent, pressing.

instante (ĭn-stän′tĕ), instantemen′te, I. Vehement(ly), urgent(ly).

in′strument (in F. ăn-strü-măṅ). A sonorous body constructed for the production of musical sounds. i. à cordes (ä-kôrd). A stringed instr. i. à l'archet (ä-lăr-shā). Instr. played with a bow. i. à percussion (ä părküs-yôṅ). Instr. of percussion. i. à vent (ä văṅ). Wind-instrument.

instrumental, E., instrumentale (ĭn-stroo-mĕn-tä′lĕ), I. Of music for instrs. as opposed to vocal music.

instrumentare (tä′rĕ), I. To compose instrumental music.

in′strumenta′tion (in F. ăṅ-strü-măṅ-tăs′yôṅ), instrumentazione (tä-tsĭ-ō′nĕ), I., Instrumenti(e)rung (ĭn-stroo-mĕn-tē′-roongk), G. The art or act of writing or arranging a composition for instrs., particularly the orchestra (vide article on THE ORCHESTRA AND ORCHESTRATION); sometimes used of piano-playing that produces the effect of other instrs. Instrumentenmacher (mäkh′ĕr), G. An instr.-maker.

instrumen′to, I., An instrument. i. d'arco (or a corda) (där′-kō). A stringed instrument. i. da campanel′la. Glockenspiel. i. da fiato (fĭ-ä′-tō). Wind-instr. i. da quil′la. A spinet.

intavolare (ĭn-tä-vō-lä′-rĕ), I. To write out or copy music. intavolatura (lä-too′-rä). 1. Notation. 2. Figured bass. 3. Tablature.

integer valor (notarum), L. "The integral value" (of notes), i. e., their average duration at a moderate movement. Michael Pretorius set the i. v. of the brevis at about $\frac{1}{10}$ of a minute (i. e., 80 to 7½ minutes).

intendant (ăṅ-täṅ-däṅ), F., intenden′te. I. Director, conductor.

intenzionato (ĭn-tĕn-tsĭ-ō-nä′-tō). Emphatic.

in′terlude. 1. A piece, usually short, played between acts, movements, stanzas, or portions of service. 2. A short operetta.

interlu′dium, L., intermède (ăṅ-tĕr-mĕd), F., intermedio (ĭn-tĕr-mā′dĭ-ō), intermezzo (ĭn-tĕr-mĕd′-zō), I. An interlude.

interme′diate. 1. Accidental. 2. Transitional.

intermedietto (ĭn-tĕr-mā′dĭ-ĕt-tō), I. A short interlude.

interrogati′vus. Vide ACCENTUS ECCL.

interrotto (rôt′-tō), I. Interrupted.

interrupted. Vide CADENCE.

interruzione (root-sĭ-ō′nĕ), I. Interruption.

interval, Intervall (ĭn-tĕr-făl′), G., intervale (ăṅ-tĕr-văl), F., intervallo (väl′lō), I., interval′lum, L. The distance, or difference in pitch, between tones, reckoned upwards (unless specially stated). The intervals are, the first or prime (which is identity, C for instance being its own prime); the second (as c–d); the third or tierce (as c–e); the fourth or quart (as c–f); the fifth or quint (as c–g); the sixth or sext (as c–a); the seventh or sept (as c–b); the eighth or octave (as c–c′); the ninth (as c–d′), etc. Those within the octave are called simple; those over the octave, compound, since a tenth is an octave plus a third, etc. Intervals are qualified also by their mode; those in the major key of their lower tone (as a–c♯) being called major, those a semitone greater than major are augmented or extreme, superfluous, redundant or sharp; those a semitone less than major are minor (as a–c); those a semitone less than minor are diminished or flat (as a–c♭). The first, fourth, fifth and octave are called perfect instead of major, because they do not change their quality as do the others on inversion (q. v.). Other names for intervals are chromatic, containing a note foreign to the key, opposed to diatonic, dissonant, needing resolution; opposed to consonant, enharmonic (q. v.); harmonic when struck simultaneously instead of separately, hence opposed to melodic. Forbidden. Contrary to the rules of Harmony (q. v.). Consecutive (q. v.). A natural interval is that between two tones of a major scale.

The ratios of the vibrations of diatonic intervals are prime, 1 : 1; second, 8 : 9; third, 4 : 5; fourth, 3 : 4; fifth, 2 : 3; sixth, 3 : 5; seventh, 8 : 15; octave, 1 : 2.

intervening. Intermediate (of a fugue subject).

intimo (ĭn′-tĭ-mō), I. Intimate, expressive. intimis′simo. Most expressive.

intonare (ĭn-tō-nä′rĕ), I. To intone.

intona′tion. 1. The production of sound by voice or instr., as regards quality and pitch. false i. That which is untrue to the key or pitch. 2. The initial phrase of the antiphon. 3. Method of singing plain-chant. 4. Vide CHANT. fixed i. Vide FIXED TONE.

intonato (ĭn-tō-nä′-tō), I. Tuned, set to music.

in′tonator. Monochord.

intonatura (ĭn-tō-nä-too′rä), intonazione (ĭn-tō-nä-tsĭ-ō′nĕ), I. Intonation.

intoni(e)ren (ĭn-tō-nē′rĕn), G. 1. To intone. 2. To voice, as pipes. 3. The voicing.

Intonireisen (nēr′-ī-zĕn), G. A knife used in trimming and tuning pipes.

intreccio (ĭn-trĕt′-chō), I. "Intrigue." A short dramatic work.

intrepidezza (ĭn-trā-pĭ-dĕd′-zä), I. Intrepidity. intrepido (ĭn-trā′-pĕ-dō), intrepidamen′te. Bold(ly).

introduc′tion, E., introducimen′to (doo-chĭ), introduzione (doo-tsĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. The preliminary measures, or movement preparatory for the main subject.

intro′it (in F. ăn-trwä), introito (ĭn-trō-ē′-tō), I., intro′itus, L. "Entrance"; a hymn or antiphon sung in R. C. service while the priest goes to the altar; in the Anglican Church Communion, when the minister goes to the table. In the Ambrosian ritual called Ingressa.

intuonare (in-too-ō-nä′-rĕ), I. To intone.

inven′tion (in F. ăn-väńs-yôn), invenzione (ĭn-vĕn-tsĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. A short informal contrapuntal study with one theme.

Inventions (horn) (ĭn-vĕn′tsĭ-ōns), F. A Waldhorn fitted with crooks by Werner, 1760.

inver′sio, L., inver′sion, E. The transposition of the elements of (a), chords, (b) intervals, (c) themes, (d) parts. (a) The triad is "inverted" from its fundamental position with the root in the bass, to the first inversion with the 3d in the bass, and the second i. when the fifth is in the bass (a 6–4 chord), etc., vide CHORD. (b) The inversion of intervals is the lowering of the upper tone an octave, thus bringing the lower note above, and the upper below; for example, to invert a major 6th, e′♭–c′, we lower c′ an octave, securing c–e′♭, a minor 3d. The new product of an inversion is always the difference between the first interval and the number 9, e. g., a 6th inverted becomes a 3d, a 5th inverted becomes a 4th, etc. The result of inversion is to change major intervals to minor, and vice versa; and augmented to diminish, and vice versa; but perfect remain perfect. (c) A theme is inverted by being repeated backwards, hence, retrograde inversion, or inversio cancrizans, "crab-like." (d) Two parts are inverted when the lower is raised by an octave (inversio in octavam acutam), or by a fifth, tenth, twelfth, etc., or when the higher is lowered by an octave (inversio in octavam gravem, or inferiorem), a fifth, tenth, twelfth, etc. (vide COUNTER-POINT).

invert, inverted. Vide INVERSION. A pedal-point in any part other than the lowest is called inverted. A turn commencing with the lowest note is inverted.

invi'tatory, E., invitato'rio, Sp., invitato'rium, L. 1. An antiphon in the R. C. Matins. 2. In the Anglican Church, the versicle "Praise ye the Lord," and the response sung at matins. 3. In the Greek Church the "O come let us worship" sung thrice before the psalms at the canonical hours.

invocazione (kä-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. Invocation.

Io'nian, Ion'ic. Vide MODES.

ira (ē'-rä), I. Anger, wrath. irato (ē-rä'-tō), iratamen'te. Passionate(ly).

Irish harp. 1. An ancient instr. having more strings than the lyre. 2. Trade name for "Jew's harp."

irlandais (ēr-läṅ-dĕ'), F., irländisch (ēr'-lĕnt-ĭsh), G. An air or dance in the Irish style.

iron harp. A semicircular arrangement of tuned iron rods which vibrate sympathetically when a violin is played.

ironico (ē-rō'-nĭ-kō), I., ironicamen'te. Ironical(ly).

irregular, E., irregolare (ēr-rā-gō-lä'rĕ), I. Not according to strict rule or practice. Vide CADENCE.

irresoluto (ēr-rā-zō-loo'-tō), I. Irresolute.

isdegno (ēs-dān'-yō), I. Indignation.

i'sochronal, Gr., isoch'ronous. Uniform in time.

i'son. In Greek Church chant, the movable tonic.

isoton'ic. Used of a system of intervals in which all concords are tempered alike, and contain twelve equal semitones.

istes'so, I. The same. i. tempo. The same time (as before).

istrepito (ēs-trā-pē'-tō), I. Noise, bluster.

istrionica (ēs-trĭ-ō'nĭ-kä), I. Histrionic.

istrumentale (ēs-troo-mĕn-tä'lĕ), I. Instrumental. istrumentazione (tä-tsĭ-ō'nĕ). Instrumentation. istrumen'to. An instrument.

Italian mordent. Shake or trill of a tone with the next above. Italian sixth. Vide ALTERED CHORDS. Italian strings. Catgut strings largely made in Rome.

italiano (ē-tä-lĭ-ä'-nō), I., italienisch (ē-tä-lĭ-ā'-nĭsh), G., italien(ne) (ē-tăl-yän [or-yĕn]), F. Italian.

i'te, mis'sa est (ecclesia), L. "Depart, the congregation is dismissed." Vide MASS; from the word missa the word mass is derived.

J

JACK, I. 1. An upright slip of wood on the back end of a key-lever, carrying a crow-quill or piece of hard leather which projected at right angles (in the harpsichord), or a metal tangent (in the clavichord), and which struck and set in motion a string. The quill or the leather served as a plectrum. 2. The "hopper."

Jagd (yäkht), G. Hunt, hunting. Jagdhorn, Jagdzink (tsĭnk). Hunting-horn, bugle-horn. Jagdruf (roof). Sound of the horn. J-lied (lēt). Hunting-song. J-sinfonie (sĭn-fō-nē'). A symphony of the hunt. J-stück. A hunting-piece.

ketch. Old name for catch.

Ket′tentriller, G. Chain of trills.

ket′tledrum. A brass or copper kettle over the top of which is stretched a head of vellum, tightened by a ring and tuned by screws, or by cords and braces. Kettledrums are usually played in pairs with sticks having flexible handles and soft knobs. Each has a compass of a fifth; the lower may be tuned to any note from F to c, and the higher B flat to f.

key. 1. A family of chords and a chain of tones (i. e., a scale) finding their centre and point of rest in a certain tone (the tonic) from which the key takes its name. All keys conform to the standard for major keys, or to that for minor keys. The signature in which the number of sharps or flats of a major key is written serves as the signature for its related minor key, the tonic of which is a minor third below. The key of C has neither sharps nor flats, the key a fifth above (G) has one sharp, the key a fifth below (F) has one flat, and so the progression continues, forming (in a tempered instrument. Vide TEMPERAMENT) what is called the circle of fifths, as F♯ and G♭ are enharmonic keys traversing the same tones. The following ingenious chart from Riemann's Dictionary tabulates the keys and their signatures concisely, the flats and sharps appearing in the same order on the signatures as here:

Major Keys.

Flats.							Sharps.
7	6	5	4	3	2	1	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
C♭	G♭	D♭	A♭	E♭	B♭	F	C	G	D	A	E	B	F♯	C♯	G♯	D♯	A♯
7	6	5	4	3	2	1	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Flats.							Sharps.

Minor Keys.

attendant, or related k. Vide RELATED. chromatic k. One with sharps or flats, opposed to natural k. extreme k. A remote, unrelated k. parallel k. a. Related. b. Used of a major and a minor key with the same tonic but different signatures. 2. Old name for clef. 3. A mechanical lever for controlling tone, whether digital or foot-key. 4. One of such keys as those on the outside of a flute covering certain holes. 5. A tuning-hammer. 6. A lever controlling organ-pallets.

key-action. The entire mechanism of a keyed instr.

key-board. The series of digitals or pedals of a piano, organ or such instr. The idea of having a key-board so arranged that each digital can be struck in 3 different places seems to have occurred first to Paul von Jankó, who in 1882 inv. the Jankó key-board, which has the look of six contiguous key-boards on a rising plane. The advantages are that all scales are fingered alike and that the reach of the hand is greatly increased, so that a good hand can cover 14 digitals. The consequent simplification and enrichment of piano-resources are inestimably valuable. It may be applied to any key-board and is sometimes called a chromatic key-board.

key-bugle. Vide BUGLE.

key-chord. The triad on the tonic.

keyed. Furnished with keys, as a flute, or piano. keyed violin. Piano-violin.

key-stop violin. One having a finger-board fitted with thirty-three keys acting as stops perpendicularly upon the strings.

key-harp. An adjustment of tuning-forks over cavities of sonorous metal, with piano-key action, inv. by Dietz and Second, 1819.

key-note, key-tone. The tonic. key-ship. Tonality.

key-trumpet. One with keys or valves.

khal'il. Hebrew flute or oboe.

khasan (khä'zän), Heb. Chief singer in a synagogue.

Kicks, G. Vide GOOSE.

Kielflügel (kēl′-flü-khěl), G. Wing-shaped harpsichord.

kin chi (kĭn chē). A Chinese dulcimer with 5 to 25 silk strings.

Kinderscenen (kĭnt′-ĕr-zā-nĕn), G. Childhood scenes. Kinderstück (shtük). An easy piece.

king chi (kĭng chē). A Chinese instr. with sixteen pendent stones graduated and struck with a hammer.

kinnor (kĭn′-nôr), Heb. A small harp, or lyre.

kin′tal. Small Indian cymbals.

Klang (kläng), pl. Klänge (klĕng′-ĕ), G. 1. Sound, ringing. 2. Vide CLANG. K.-boden. Sound-board. K.-far′-be. Sound-color, clang-tint. K.-geschlecht (gĕ-shlĕkht). A genus, or mode. K.-lehre (lā-rĕ). Acoustics. K.-folge (fôl-khĕ). A chord-progression in point of tonality. K.-figuren (fĭ-goo′-rĕn). Nodal figures. K.-leiter (lī-tĕr). A scale. K.-saal (zäl). Concert-room. K.-schlüssel, K.-vertretung. Vide KLANG-KEY. klanglos (kläng′lōs), G. Soundless.

Klappe (kläp′pĕ), G. Valve (of a wind-inst.). Klappenflügelhorn (flü′gĕl), G. Keyed bugle. Klappenhorn. Keyed horn. Klapptrompete. A keyed trumpet.

klar (klär), G. Clear, bright. Klarheit (klär′-hīt). Clearness, plainness. klärlich (klĕr-lĭkh), G. Clearly, distinctly.

Klarinette (klä-rĭ-nĕt′-tĕ), G. Clarinet.

klassisch (kläs′sĭsh), G. Classical.

Klausel (klow′-zĕl), G. A cadence. Bassklausel. The progression of the bass in a final cadence from dominant to tonic.

Klaviatur (klä-fĭ-ä-toor′), G. Key-board. K. harfe (or Klavier-harfe). A harp inv. by Lutz, Vienna, 1893, in which the strings are plucked by plectra manipulated by a key-board. The same man in the same year inv. the K.-zither, a small piano with single strings, plucked by means of a key-board.

Klavier (klä-fēr′). 1. Key-board. 2. Key-board instr., especially the clavichord (formerly the piano). Klavierauszug (ows-tzookh). Arrangement for piano. K.-harfe. Vide KLAVIATUR-HARFE. K.-harmonium. An harmonium shaped like a grand piano, inv. by Woroniecki, 1893. K.-hoboe. The harmoniphon. K.-mässig (mĕs-sĭkh). Suitable for, in the style of the piano. K.-satz. Piano-music, or manner. K.-sonate (klä-fēr′-sō-nä-tĕ). Piano-sonata. K.-spieler (shpē′-lĕr), G. Piano-player. K.-violoncello. A 'cello in a frame with a key-board arrangement for the left hand, of special advantages; inv. by de Vlaminck, Brussels, 1893. K.-viola. A viola with key-board attachment.

klein (klīn), G. Small, minor. K.-bass (klīn-bäs), K.-bassgeige (gī′-khĕ), G. Violoncello. Kleinegedacht. A flute-stop. kleinlaut (lowt), G. Small or low in tone of voice.

klingbar (klĭng'-bär), G. Resonant. Klingel (klĭng'-ēl). A bell. klingeln (klĭng'-ĕln). To jingle. klingend (klĭng-ĕnt). Ringing. klingende Stimme. Speaking (as opposed to dummy) pipes. Klingklang (klĭng-kläng). Tinkling, bad music.

leading-motive. A musical phrase or figure (as those in Wagner's operas), used as a sort of autograph or trade-mark of a certain character, mood or sentiment, and recurring whenever that character or mood is to appear or is remembered.

Leading-Motives.

By Gustave Kobbé.

OTHER composers before Wagner have used typical phrases to express some personal characteristic or idea, and have repeated them in a manner which suggests what is now termed a leading-motive. Such is the "Idée fixe" in Berlioz's "Fantastique" symphony; or the phrase in Weber's "Euryanthe" which occasionally even is spoken of as the "Tomb Motive." I, however, have always considered that Beethoven in the use he made of the opening theme of his Fifth Symphony more nearly approached the leading-motive than any of Wagner's predecessors. The theme recurs with great variety of effect throughout the symphony, the second movement excepted. It is found as a mysterious threatening figure accompanying the second theme of the first movement, while in the Allegro of the scherzo of the symphony, it partakes of a joyous character, to reappear as a disturbing element in the finale. It has the plasticity of a leading motive, but it may be questioned whether Beethoven intended to use it for any other than a purely musical effect. In fact any suggestions Wagner may have received from other composers were so slight that the leading-motive in the modern sense may unhesitatingly be said to be his invention. ¶It s easier to say what a leading-motive is not, than to give it a fixed definition. The first idea to disabuse one's self of is that a leading-motive s anything like a label. The "Walhalla" motive in the "Ring of the Nibelung" is not a guide-post which reads "Walhalla to the right—3 miles"—nor does it even represent Walhalla as a pile of masonry. It expresses, in its simple yet lofty measures, the rulership of Wotan, the hegemonia of the gods. A leading-motive is a musical searchlight or X-ray which illuminates and enables us to look deep into every character, thought, mood, purpose, idea, and impulse in the drama. Even conscience itself does not escape Wagner. Witness how he lays it bare with his scalpel of leading-motives in the first meeting of Siegfried and Hagen in "Goetterdaemmerung" with the Curse Motive, which hints at Hagen's fell purpose, darkening the noble Siegfried Motive. The use of the Curse in this episode clearly foreshadows the death of the Volsung hero at Hagen's hand and lays the gloom of impending tragedy heavily upon the hearer's soul. ¶How plastic a leading-motive may be, how closely welded to the ever-changing phases of the drama and how clearly it expresses them, the wonderful variants of the motive of Siegfried the Fearless—the call Siegfried sounds on his silver horn—will show. Joyous and buoyant in its simplest form, it becomes when he takes leave of Brünhilde to sally forth in quest of adventure, heroically grand, and in the Death Music, that strain of triumphant mourning which thrills every hearer and stamps the episode as the greatest climax ever achieved in a musical work for the stage. Indeed, the whole scene is a triumph for the leading-motive idea, since here, as Siegfried's lifeless body is borne up on the mountain crest, the orchestra gives a musical epitome of his career by voicing successively the motives most intimately relating to him which have been heard in the cycle of music-dramas. ¶ But Wagner's use of leading-motives singly and in complex combinations according to the trend of the drama however interesting analytically would wholly have failed were not the motives themselves musically valuable. They are enunciated chiefly by the orchestra (which thus forms a constant commentary upon the proceedings of the stage) and they are considered by those who are in the van of musical opinion to have resulted in the most eloquent and sublime—if at times the most tedious—scores ever penned. To appreciate what a genius Wagner really was, it is only necessary to listen to the works of some of his imitators.

Liszt in his Symphonic Poems has adapted the leading-motive to instrumental music, in which respect Richard Strauss may be regarded as following him.

mascherata (mä-skĕ-rä′-tä). Masquerade.

maschera (mä′-skā-rä), I. A mask.

Maschinen (mä-shē′-nĕn), G. Pistons. Vide VALVE. M.-pauken. Kettle-drums with a mechanical adjuster of pitch.

mask, E., masque (măsk), F., Maskenspiel (mäs′-kĕn-shpēl), G. A spectacular entertainment usually allegorical and dramatic, with music. Very elaborately done in Elizabethan times.

mass. In the R. C. service, that portion accompanying the consecration of the Host. Before this service, those not permitted to take part are dismissed with the words, "Ite missa est" (vide ITE)—hence, by corruption, the name "mass." The service up to the dismissal was called "Mass of the catechumens," that after it, "Mass of the faithful" (Missa fidelum). A mass without music is low m.; with music high m. The musical service is as follows: 1. The kyrie, (a) Kyrie Eleison, (b) Christe Eleison, (c) Kyrie Eleison. 2. The gloria, or doxology, (a) Gratias agimus, (b) Qui tollis, (c) Quoniam, (d) Cum sancto spiritu. 3. The credo, (a) Et incarnatus, (b) Crucifixus, (c) Et resurrexit. 4. The sanctus. Benedictus and Hosanna. 5. The agnus dei, and Dona Nobis. These divisions are named from the first words of their text (which will be found translated under the separate heads).

The short m. is that of the Protestant Church, which uses only the kyrie or the gloria. Masses have been written in all elaborations from simple unison to fullest counterpoint and to choral works in from 8 to 32 parts with orchestral accompaniment. (Vide PALESTRINA in the B. D.)

Mass (mäs), G. Measure, time.

mässig (mĕs′-sĭkh), G. 1. Moderato, moderate(ly). 2. As a suffix, "appropriate to," as klaviermässig, etc.

meno (mā'-nō), I. Less; not so fast. m. mosso. Less speed.

Mensur (mĕn-zoor'), G. Measure, of time, intervals, scale of pipes, and sizes of instr. strings, etc.

men'sura, L. Measure, time.

men'surable, E., mensural (mĕn-zoo-räl'), G. The original plain-chant was in notes of equal duration; in the 12th cent. the old square notes were modified and given a "measurable" value. The first mensurable notes were the maxima, longa, brevis and semibrevis; in 1300, the minima and semiminima were added. In the 15th cent. white notes displaced the black, which were chiefly used for smaller values. The music so written, or mensurable music, was governed by many complicated laws. Vide NOTATION.

mente (mĕn'-tĕ). Mind. alla m. Improvised.

menuet (mŭ-noo-ā'), F., Menuett (mĕn-oo-ĕt'), G., menuetto (mā-noo-ĕt'-tō), I. Minuet.

metal (mā-tăl'), Sp. Strength, compass of the voice.

metallico (mĕ-täl'-lĭ-kō), I. (Of a voice) "metallic" in a good sense, clear, ringing, hence metal'lo, "metal."

metamor'phoses. Variations.

meter, or metre, E., mètre (mĕtr), F. In music as in verse, the arrangement of rhythmic units, or measures. The m. of hymns is classified by the number of syllables to a line, the metrical foot and the number of lines to a stanza. In Iambic m. are common m. (C. M.), 4 lines alternately 8 and 6 syllables long; common particular, or hallelujah m. (C. P. M.), 886886; long m. (L. M.), 4 lines of 8 syllables; long particular m. (L. P. M.), or long m. six lines, 6 lines of 8; short m. (S. M.), 6686; short particular m. (S. P. M.,), 668668; stanzas of 8 lines are called double (C. M. D.; L. M. D.; S. M. D.). Other line-lengths are sevens and sixes (7676), tens (four 10's), hallelujah (666688, or 66664444). In trochaic m. are sixes (four 6's), sixes and fives (6565), sevens (four 7's), eights and sevens (8787). In Dactylic m. are eights, eights, sevens and fours, etc.; elevens (four 11's), and elevens and tens (11, 10, 11, 10), etc. Classic and French metres depend on quantity or length of syllables, instead of on their stress or accentuation as with us. Vide FOOT.

method, E., méthode (mā-tôd), F., metodo (mā'-tō-dō), I. A course of instruction; classification; system.

Metrik (māt'-rēk), G. Metrical art. metrisch (mĕt'-rĭsh). Metrical.

metro (mā'-tro), I. and Sp. Metre.

Metrometer (mĕ-trō-mā'-tĕr), G., métromètre (mā-trō-mĕtr), F., metrometro (mā-trō-mā'-trō), I. Metronome.

met'ronome, E., Metronom (mā-trō-nôm'), G., métronome (mā-trô-nŭm), F., metronomo (mā-trō-nō'-mō), I. A pendulum worked by clock-work, and weighted below; provided with a movable slide, and so graduated that its rate of vibration per minute can be fixed by the slider; with the slider at 60 it beats 60 times a minute, etc. It moves with an audible click; the bell-metronome has also a bell which rings every third or fourth, etc., beat. Perfected by Winkel it was put on the market by Maelzel (vide B. D.), and is called Maelzel's metronome (abbr. M. M.). It is useful as a composer's indication of the standard time of a composition; hence the metronome-mark, thus M. M. ♩=90, means a rate for quarter notes equal to 90 per minute, as indicated by the slider set at 90. It is used also to beat time for students. It is made also in watch-form as a pocket m.

met'rum, L. Metre.

Mette (mĕt'-tĕ), G. Matins.

metter la voce, I. Same as messa di voce.

mettere in musica (mĕt'-tĕ-rĕ ĭn moo'-zĭ-kä), I. To set to music.

Modes.

By the Editor.

PERHAPS the most graphic definition of modes to the modern mind would be :—overlapping portions of the C major scale : or successive octave-stretches along the white keys of the pianoforte. Ecclesiastical modes were the Middle Age perversion of the Greek Modes. While overthrown by Nineteenth Century scales and tonality, traces of their influence persevere, and many of the old chants still in use in the Roman Catholic and Anglican services are more or less exact specimens of the capabilities of the modes. The Twenty-first Century will probably qualify and develop our own system of keys out of shape and recognition. The complete overthrow of the ideas of tonality and modulation of the earlier part of the Twentieth Century is indeed even now beginning. We are already over the doorsill of the nullitonic or omnitonic harmonies, and the multitude of accidental sharps and flats and naturals required to notate the highly chromatic music of our day renders inevitable some radical change in the system of keys ; meanwhile, the obsolete modal systems have at least a keen historical interest and importance. There is place here for only an allusion to a few of the salient points. Full statement of the details and the controversies on them would fill a large library. ¶Though the Greeks properly gave music a very high place in their educational system, they were too much engrossed in theories, rules, and restrictions to build up large material. Their musical resources were of the slenderest. While their noble tragedies were exactly Wagner's idea of opera, the music to which they were set seems to have been of the most limited range and variety ; and furthermore, absolutely lacking in harmony even in the Middle Age sense. ¶The Greek system differs from ours in being all of a minor tendency, in having the notes named downwards, and in paying attention only to melody and not at all to chords. The white piano keys from e′ (just above middle C) to the E an octave below, represent their oldest and central mode, the Dorian. By remembering that all these steps are whole tones except the two semitones from c′ to b and F to E, and by representing a whole step by a (+) and a half step by a (−), it will be seen that this Dorian mode descends by the following steps, + + − + + −. These make two similar groups of three steps or four notes, which were called tetrachords. The word chord with them meant "string" not "harmony," for their whole music took its rise from their lyre, a stiff and limited, unfretted instrument of many poetical associations but stinted in practical possibilities. The pattern of tetrachord (+ + −) into which this Dorian mode divided was called the Dorian tetrachord. They superimposed on the top note e′ a similar tetrachord of the tones a′, g′, f′, e, and added below another e, d, c, B. To these they added the low A as a supplementary (in Greek proslambanomenos). The outer couples of tetrachords overlap. Between the middle two is an imaginary line of separation (diazeuxis). Each of these was therefore a "disjunct" (diazengmenon) tetrachord. The "complete system" (systema teleion) of two octaves (a′ down to A) was divided thus into four tetrachords, each of them given the name which (with its English translation) is shown in the chart herewith. For purposes of modulation they laid across the middle of this system an overlapping or "conjunct" (synemmenon) tetrachord in which the b was flattened, d′, c′, b♭, a (+ + −). ¶The octave from e′ down to E was, as already stated, called the Dorian mode. Other portions of the systema were given other names, d to D being called the Phrygian, c′ to C the Lydian, and b to B the Mixo-Lydian. ¶They conceived a way of extending these octaves by duplicating one of the tetrachords below (in Greek "hypo"). Thus, if the upper tetrachord (e′ to a) of the Dorian mode be transferred an octave below, and fastened to the lower tetrachord, we shall no longer have e′, d′, c′, b, a, g, f, e, (+ + − + + −) but a, g, f, e, d, c, B, A, which also is + + − + + −, with the added step + (proslambanomenos). This is called the Hypo-Dorian mode. ¶The Phrygian, Lydian, and Mixo-Lydian modes do not descend by the same whole and half steps as the Dorian, but as follows: Phrygian (+ − + + + − +), Lydian (− + + − + + −), Mixo-Lydian (+ + + − + + −). It will be found, however, that these modes are capable of the same hypo-treatment, thus making two more modes, Hypo-Phrygian and Hypo-Lydian,—for the Mixo-Lydian (b to B) being too low to add a tetrachord beneath, it is added above, giving e′ to e, which is identical with the Dorian. The principal note (tonic) of the regular modes was the top note. Each hypomode kept for its chief note the chief note of the original (or its octave). The names and ranges of these seven modes with two others added later are shown in the chart, which shows also the names (and their translations) given each note and each tetrachord. ¶With this system as a foundation and with the use of the conjunct tetrachord and its b flat as an entering wedge, the Greeks gradually added several notes above and below their systema, and inserted half steps between the full steps until they acquired a complete chromatic scale on which they transposed their scales with much melodic freedom. Harmony, of course, they did not have. These transposed scales were not named like the original modes from their chief notes, but were given the name of the scale whose steps they resembled. By making use of the + and − , or other signs for indicating half or whole steps, it is easy to plot out the steps of any scale and find its prototype and its name in the original modes. ¶The Greek notation was by letters and symbols. It is too complicated to explain here. ¶A method of manipulating their scale melodically may be mentioned. The tetrachords as described were called diatonic, but in the Dorian e, d, c, b, if the d were omitted, the tetrachord became e — c, b, and was called the older enharmonic. A later plan was to keep the d, but lower it by half a tone (that is, to tune the d string to c sharp), making the four strings e, c♯, c, b. This was the chromatic genus. A still later plan, called the newer enharmonic, was to tune the d to a pure third with the e, making the tetrachord e, c, c, b; the two c strings differing slightly in tone (see the word COMMA). ¶This group of three tones, c, c, b, or c♯, c, b, was the pyknon (plural pykna). Other variations in the treatment were called chroai (colourings). Definite melodies were given definite names, a melody being a nomos (i. e., arrangement, order, or setting). ¶Upon this false, but elaborate, system, enormous ingenuity was spent, and appalling complexity and scholarship of a kind were made possible, to the delight of the typical theorist. In respect of melody the Greek modes offered far more freedom than the church modes, which, however, possessed the modern invention of harmony.

ECCLESIASTICAL MODES.

Music, along with all the other early Christian arts, borrowed largely from the Greeks, but rejected their warmth and ornate sophistication for a stark rigidity. ¶Early church musicians took the Greek modes as best they could understand them, making as many mistakes as was usual in the degenerate classicism of those times. The Byzantine school perverted Greek music and passed it along, as it had done with painting and architecture. The range and the chromatic graces of later Greek melody were deserted for a heavy march through one octave of one key. Furthermore, the scale was considered now as ascending, instead of descending. ¶St. Ambrose is traditionally credited with establishing four modes for church music. From these St. Gregory was believed to have derived four new modes. The original four are called Authentic, i. e., "governing," or "chief." The latter four are called Plagal, i. e., "oblique" or "inferior." To these were added other modes, some of them being denied a right to exist. As with all the old Greek modes, all the church modes are to be found on the white keys of the piano; no chromatic was allowed except, finally, b flat, which was admitted to avoid the forbidden tritone and the diminished fifth. A melody that did not stray out of its octave mode was called perfect; one that did not use all of its range was imperfect; one that overstepped its octave was superfluous; one that used up both a mode and its plagal was in a mixed mode. ¶Greek names were used for the church modes, but with many differences from the old nomenclature. ¶An authentic mode is based on its Final or lowest note ; the next most important note, usually a fifth or a third above, is its dominant. A plagal mode is found a fourth below its authentic, and the final of the authentic serves also for the plagal. The dominant of a plagal is a third below that of its authentic (save where it falls on b, in which case c is used). ¶Curiously enough, the two modern keys which we think of as white keys, c major and a minor, were not added until the sixteenth century, and then as the Ionian and Æolian modes. ¶Besides many impressive hymns the church modes have been unconsciously allowed to fit many popular modern tunes. It is not hard to test the mode-ship of any air. First, if necessary, bring the melody into a range requiring no key-signature. If it now contains any accidentals save b flat, it is not in any of the modes. Otherwise note the tone on which the air ends. This will be the final of its mode. If this is the lowest, or almost the lowest note used, and if the melody does not soar higher than an octave above it, the air is in an authentic mode. If the final is in approximately the centre of the melodic range, and if the range does not exceed the fifth above, or the fourth below, it is in a plagal mode, or it may be in a mixed mode. The name of the final indicates the mode. The airs "God save the King" (or "America") and the "Blue Bells of Scotland" are authentic melodies. The "Old 100th" and "Eileen Aroon" are plagal. "Jock o' Hazeldean" is in a mixed mode. ¶Much of the music in the old church modes is as shocking to the modern sense of tonality as our modern music would seem anarchistic to an old master. Superb treasures were given to immortality in those stiff and arbitrary forms. Yet, after all, the modes deserve their eternal obsoleteness. They were unsatisfactory and arbitrary in their own day. They are hopelessly inappropriate to the modern musical ideas and ideals. The majestic beauties of some of their results are but as the impressive fossils of earlier evolution. Their fate should warn us against stolid satisfaction with our own musical system.

musicale (mū'-zĭ-käl). An "at home" concert.

music-box. A box containing an automatic musical instr. The Swiss m. b. has a steel comb of graduated teeth set in vibration by small pegs in a revolving cylinder.

music-drama. An opera (particularly of the Wagnerian school) in which the text and the action determine the music, and are not interrupted by set arias, duets, etc.

musicien (mü-zēs'-yäń), F. Musician.

musicista (moo-zĭ-chē'-stä), I. Musician.

musico (moo'-zĭ-kō), I. 1. Musician. 2. A male soprano, particularly a eunuch.

musicone (moo-zĭ-kō'-nĕ), I. A great musician.

music-pen. 1. A 5-pointed pen for ruling the staff. 2. A broad-pointed pen for writing music.

music-recorder. A melograph.

music-timekeeper. An English instr. enabling a performer to keep time.

Musik (moo-zēk'), G. Music. Musiker (moo'-zĭ-kĕr). Musikus (koos'). A musician. Musikalien (käl'-ĭ-ĕn). Trade name for compositions. Musikant (moo-zĭ-känt'). A vagabond musician. M.-fest. A musical festival. Musik'bande, or Musikantenbande (bän-de). A band of strolling musicians. Musik'diktät (dēk-tāt). Vide DICTATION. M.-direktor. Conductor. M.-lehrer (lā'-rĕr). Music-teacher. M.-meister (mī-shtĕr). Bandmaster. M.-probe (prō'-bĕ). Rehearsal. M.-verein (fĕ-rīn). A musical society. M.-zeitung (tsī-toongk). A musical periodical.

musique (mü-zēk'), F., Music. m. d'église (dā-glēz). Church-music.

musiquette (mü-zĭ-kĕt). 1. A short composition. 2. Light music.

muta (moo'-ta). "Change!" A direction in scores to change the crooks or tuning of an instr. in preparation for a change of key.

muta'tion, E. (in F. mü-tăs'-yôń), mutazione (moo-tä-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. 1. The transformation of the male voice at puberty (in F. mue (mü)). 2. Vide SOLMISATION. 3. Shifting. 4. As prefix, used of all tierce, quint, etc., stops not producing the unison or octave of the foundation-stop.

mute. A device for muffling tone; in string-instrs. a clamp of brass, wood or ivory placed on the bridge and deadening the resonance; in wind-instrs. a pear-shaped leather pad, a cylinder of perforated wood or a pasteboard cone introduced into the bell.

mut(h)ig (moo′-tĭkh), G. Courageous, spirited.

muthwillig (moot′-vĭl-likh), G. Mischievous.

Muterung (moo′-tĕ-roongk), G. Mutation, 1.

mystères (mĭs-tăr), F., Mysterien (mē-stā′-rĭ-ĕn), G., mysteries, E. Mediæval sacred dramas dealing with the Last Judgment and other mysteries, as the moralities dealt with allegorical virtues and vices, and miracle-plays with the miracles of Christ. The idea persists in the Passion Play dealing with Christ's sufferings. In these dramas, often accompanied with music, oratorio had its beginning.

Nachtschläger (nakht′-shlākher), Nachtigall (näkht′-ĭ-gäl), G. Nightingale; an imitative instrument.

nae'nia, Gr. A dirge.

nafie (nä′-fē). A Persian trumpet.

nafiri (nä-fē′-rē). An Indian trumpet.

nagâra (nä-gä′-rä), nagaret′, nagareet′. Oriental kettledrums.

nag'uar. An Indian drum.

Nagelgeige (näkh′-ĕl-gī-khĕ), nail-fiddle. Vide FIDDLE (Iron).

naïf (nä-ēf), F., fem. naïve (nä-ēv), F. naïv (nä-ēf′), G. Artless, natural. naïvement (nä-ēv-mäṅ). Naturally. naïveté (nä-ēv-tā). Artlessness, simplicity.

naked. Of intervals, as fourths or fifths lacking the third or other accompaniment.

na'ker, nakeres. Old E. Small metal drum(s).

nakokus (nä-kō′-kŭs), Egypt. Two brass plates suspended and struck.

nan'ga. Negro harp.

Nänien (nā-nĭ-ĕn), G. Dirges.

narrante (när-rän′-tĕ), I. In narrative style.

narra'tor. The chief performer in an oratorio or Passion Play.

Narrentanz (när′-rĕn-täntz), G Fool's dance.

nasard (nă-zăr), F., Nas(s)at′ (näs-zät′), G., nazard′. An old name for a stop tuned a twelfth above the diapasons. nasar'do, I. and Sp., nasarde (näzärd), F., nassart (näs'-särt), na'-sillard. A 2⅔-foot stop. The Grosnasard (grō-nä-zär), F., or Grossnasat (grōs-nä-zät'), G., is a quint-stop on manual or pedal. petit-nasard (p'tē), or larigot, is a 1⅓-ft. stop.

na'son. A 4-ft. flute-stop.

Nationallied (nä-tsĭ-ō-näl'-lēt), G. National song.

Natur (nä-toor'), G. Nature. N. horn. A valveless Waldhorn. N.-scala. Natural scale. N.-töne. Vide NATURAL TONE. N. trompete. Valveless trumpet. natürliche (nä-tür'-lĭkh-ĕ). Natural. Naturalist'. A self-taught singer. naturalistisch (ĭst'-ĭsh). Untrained.

nat'ural. 1. The sign ♮ nullifying a sharp or flat. 2. A white digital. n. harmonics. Those on an open string. n. hexachord. That based on C. n. modes. The authentic church modes. n. modulation. That to a nearly related key. n. key, or scale. That of C major. n. pitch. That of a pipe not overblown. n. tones. Those producible on a wind-instr., as the horn, without altering the length of the tube with valves, keys, etc., hence natural horn, etc., one producing tones without valves or keys.

naturale (nä-too-rä'-lĕ), I. Natural. naturali suoni (soo-ō'-nē). Sounds in the compass of the voice. naturalmen'te. Naturally.

natural'is, L. Natural; Cantus n., music in the hexachordum N. (the hexachord based on C). naturel(le) (nät-ü-rĕl), F. Natural.

naublum (nô'-bloom), Heb. Vide NEBEL.

nay (nā). A Turkish flute.

Neapolitan sixth. Vide ALTERED CHORDS.

nebel (nā-bĕl), nebel nassor (nā-bĕl-näs'-sôr), Heb. Ten-stringed harp.

neben (nā'-bĕn), G. Accessory. N.-dominant. The dominant of the dominant. N.-dreiklang. Secondary triad. N.-gedanke. Subsidiary theme, or idea. N.-klang. Accessory tone. N.-note. Auxiliary note. N.-register, N.-züge (tsü-khĕ). Acessory stops. N.-septimenakkorde. Secondary sevenths. N.-stimme. Subordinate voice or part. N.-werk. Choir-organ.

necessario (nā-chĕs-sä'-rĭ-ō), I. Necessary.

nechiloth (nĕk'-ĭ-lôt), neg(h)inoth (nĕ'-gĭ-nôt), Heb. A wind-instrument.

neck. That part of an instr. which carries the finger-board.

ne'fer. Egyptian guitar.

negligente (nāl-yĕ-jĕn'-tĕ), negligentemen'te, I. Negligent(ly). negligenza (jĕn'-tsä). Carelessness.

negli (nāl'-yē), nei (nā'-ē), I., pl. In the.

nei (nā'-ē), Tur. A flute made of cane.

nekeb (nā'-kĕb), Heb. A wind-instr. formed of a single tube.

nel, nella, nelle, nello, nell', I. In the, at the.

nenia. Vide NAENIA.

neo-German. Used of the programmatic school.

nero (nā'-rō), I. "Black." A quarter note.

nete (nā'-tē), Gr. Vide LYRE and MODE.

net (nĕt), nette (nĕt), F., nett (nĕt), G., net'to, I. Neat, clear. netteté (nĕt-tā), F., Nettheit (nĕt'-tĭkh-kīt), Nettigkeit (nĕt'-tĭkh-kīt), G. Neatness, distinctness. nettamen'te, I. Crisply.

neu (noi), G. New. n.-deutsche Schule (doit-shĕ shool'-ĕ). Vide NEO-GERMAN SCHOOL.

neu'ma, neume (nūm). 1. One of the characters in the early notation by points, commas, hooks, etc. Lines were introduced later, but they were always rather an aid to memory than a notation. 2. Melisma. 3. A slur. The neumes somewhat resembled modern shorthand and served somewhat the same function. The earlier forms before lines are quite indecipherable. A single note was called Virga, virgula, punctus, or punctum; a rising inflection sign, pes, or podatus; a falling inflection, clinis or flexa; various nuances of performance and special note values were the ancus, bivirga, cephalicus, distropha epiphonus, gnomo, oriscus, plica (turn), quilisma (shake), semivocalis, sinuosa, strophicus, tramea, tremula, trivirga, etc.

neun (noin), G. Nine. Neunachtel-takt (äkh'-tel-täkt), G. Nine-eighth time. Neunte (noin'-tĕ). A ninth. Neunzehnte (tsān-tĕ). Nineteenth.

neuvième (nŭv-yĕm'), F. A ninth.

nex'us, L. A binding together.

nicht (nĭkht), G. Not.

nicolo (nē'-kō-lō). A 17th cent. bombardon.

nieder (nē'-dĕr), G. Down. N.-schlag. Down-beat, or accented part. N.-strich. The down bow.

niedrig (nē'-drĭkh), G. Deep, in voice.

nina (nē'-nä), I. Lullaby (or, ninnananna). ninnare (nĭn-nä'-rĕ). To sing a lullaby.

nine-eighth. Vide TIME.

nineteenth. 1. An interval of two octaves and a fifth. 2. A stop tuned a nineteenth above the diapasons. Vide LARIGOT.

ninth. 1. An interval of an octave and a second. 2. Vide CHORD.

nobile (nō'-bĭ-lĕ), nobilmente, I., noble (nôbl), noblement (nô-blŭ-mäṅ), F. Noble (nobly). nobilità (nō-bē-lĭ-tä'), I. Nobility.

noch (nôkh), G. Still, yet; as noch schneller (shnĕl'-ler). Still quicker.

nocturn(e), E., nocturne (nôk-türn) F., notturno (nôt-toor'-nō), I. 1. Term first used by John Field for a composition of dreamy, night-like mood. 2. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ.

node, nodalpoint, no'do, I. One of the axis-like points or lines in a vibrating body, where there is no vibration (cf. LOOP). nodal figures. The chart of vibration produced by sand strewn upon a flat vibrating plate; discovered by Chladni.

no'dus, L. "A knot," an enigmatical canon.

noël (nō-ĕl'), F. A Christmas carol. Vide NOWELL.

noeud (nŭ), F. 1. A turn. 2. A node.

no fer. Vide NEFER.

noire (nwär), F. "Black," a quarter note.

noise. Early E. 1. Music. 2. A band.

no'lae, L. Tintinnabulæ.

nomes (nōmz), Gr. 1. Airs anciently sung to Cybele, Pan, and other divinities. 2. Compositions regulated by inviolable rules, as canon. 3. A canon. Vide NOMOS.

nomine, in (in nō'-mĭ-nā), L. 1. "In the name" (of the Lord). A motet. 2. Vide FUGA.

no'mos, pl. nomoi, Gr. Law(s). Greek songs fulfilling all the rules.

non (nōn), I. Not, no.

nona (nō'-nä), I., None (nō'-nĕ), G. A ninth (interval). Nonachord'-o, I., No'nenakkord, G. A ninth. Vide CHORD.

nones. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ.

nonet(t)', E., Nonett', G., nonet'to, I. Music for 9 parts.

Non'nengeige (gī-khĕ). "Nun's-fiddle." Vide MARINE TRUMPET.

Nonole (nō-nō'-lĕ), G. Nonuplet.

nonny hey nonny. An old E. refrain.

non'uplet. A group of nine equal notes.

nor'mal (in G. nôr-mäl'). Normal, standard. Normalton (tōn), G. The tone A. Normaltonleiter (lī-tĕr), G. The natural scale (of C).

nota (nō'-tä), I. and L. Note. n. bianca. "White" or half-note, etc. n. buona (boo-ō'-nä). Accented note. n. cambiata (käm-bĭ-ä'-tä), or cam'-bita, I. 1. A changing note. 2. Resolution by skip. n. caratteris'-tica. Leading-note. n. cattiva (kät-tē'-vä). Unaccented note. nota contra notam. "Note against note." Vide COUNTERPOINT. n. corona'ta. A note marked with a hold. n. d'abbellimen'to. A note of embellishment. n. di passaggio (dē päs-säd′-jō). A passing note. n. di piacere (dē-pĭ-ä-chā′-rĕ). An optional embellishment. n. falsa. A changing note. n. principale (prēn-chĭ-pä′-lĕ). Principal note. n. quadra′ta. A plain-song note. n. roma′na. A neume. n. scolta (shōl′-ta). Staccato. n. sensible (sĕn-sē′-bĭ-lĕ), I., sensi′bilis, L. The leading-note. n. digna′ta, L. A note marked with a sign. n. sostenuta (sōs-tĕ-noo′-tä). A sustained note. nota′tion (in F. nō-tăs′-yôn), notazione (nō-tä′-tsi-ō′-nĕ), I. Notation.

Notation.

By the Editor.

THE musical parallel of writing and printing as the means of expressing in universal and permanent symbols the ideas, emotions and memories of the mind. ¶The Greeks, having only unharmonised melodies to record, made use of the letters of the alphabet in positions and combinations of a most complex yet definitive variety. These letters had reference to tetrachords and transpositions of the most subtle sort (see MODES). The business-like Romans swept away a mass of detail by giving each letter a definite position on the whole scale without reference to tetrachord relations. These letters were written on a straight line over the text to be sung. In the Eighth Century this alphabetical notation had given way before a system of symbols looking much like the hooks and curves of modern shorthand. These were called neumæ (q. v.) and were of numberless sorts and names. Thus a short single note was a punctum; two or three of these in a group were bipunctum or tripunctum; the standard long note was the virga which could be grouped as bivirga or trivirga. Other terms were podatus (a low note joined to a higher), and its reverse called clivis, clinis, or flexa; the scandicus (three ascending notes) and its reverse, climacus; the quilisma (a repeated note), the gnomo, ancus, distropha and many others. These neumæ were written over the text and were set higher or lower in a rough form of melodic contour. They were only an aid to the memory and frequently defy decipherment. In time, a few letters were added as abbreviations of speed or force. ¶But about the year 900 a genius (who in his way was almost as great as the inventor of the wheel) hit upon the inspiration of ruling above the text a thin red line and calling it "F." Every neuma on this line stood positively for the tone F, and those above or below the lines were of higher or lower pitch. The genius was soon followed by a man of talent who ruled a yellow line a little higher and called it "C." The ornamental letters set at the head of these lines soon took the forms known to-day as the clefs. Not long after, the monk Hucbald erected a series of lines and used the spaces between them to indicate definite pitches, writing at the beginning T for a whole step and S for a semitone. The hymn to be sung was written in these spaces, each syllable being placed on its proper space. (This gave the verse a stepladder effect resembling the refrains of certain modern humorous poems.) Spaces were added above or below as the melody needed them and each voice had its own set of shelves. ¶This awkward plan suggested the use of the lines instead of the spaces, for notes instead of syllables. Each line was given a definite pitch marked by a letter. ¶Recurrence was now made to the two-line system and somebody (Guido of Arezzo was usually credited with the scheme) added two black lines and made a 4-line staff in which both lines and spaces had fixed pitch values. It only needed the later addition of one more line to give the five-lined staff we still use to-day. ¶The neumæ gradually exchanged their scraggly outlines for the square black heads of the choral note (the nota quadrata or quadriquarta). ¶It now being possible to express the relative pitch of notes, an effort was made to express their relative duration, for the old Plain Song with its notes all of the same length could not satisfy many human musical needs. The modern division into measures of equal length by means of bars was a long time coming. There were two centuries of clumsy mensurable (i. e., measurable) music. Notes to be sung to the same syllable were grouped together by ligatures; they were either set so close together as to touch, or were if ascending, placed one above the other like a chord; if descending, they were merged in a thick black slanting line (figura obliqua). When white or open notes came into use the thick line became an open rectangle sloping in the desired direction. When the first note of the ligature was a breve, it was said to be "cum proprietate"; if the first note were a long, it was sine proprietate; if a semibreve, it was cum opposita proprietate; if the last note were a breve it was imperfecta; it was a ligatura perfecta when the last note was a long. ¶The method of expressing rhythm was, as said, very cumbersome. Rhythm was classified under three ratios: mode (modus), time-value (tempus), prolation. ¶The Modus major or "Great Mode" concerned the division of the large into longs, being perfect(us) if there were three longs to a large, and imperfect(us) if there were two. Modus minor or the "Lesser Mode" concerned the division of the long into breves, with the same classes perfect or imperfect. ¶The division of the breves into semibreves was the tempus and was similarly called perfect(um) or imperfect(um), a circle indicating perfect time and a semicircle, imperfect. ¶The relation of semibreve to minims was called prolatio(n), being major or minor (greater or lesser) prolation as the semibreve equalled 3 or 2 minims. The former was indicated by a dot in the time signature. ¶The position of the notes also indicated their proportion; a long or a breve followed by a note of its own value was perfect by position; a note accompanied by another of less value was imperfect. ¶Colour played a part; the red (notula rubra) or white (alba) or black (nigra) nôte among others of a different colour marked a change from perfection to imperfection. There was later the proportio hemiol(i)a, or 2 : 3, indicated by grouped black notes among white. ¶ Speed was open to slackening (augmentatio) or acceleration (diminutio), the latter being marked by a bar through the time-signature, or by the use of numerals or fractions, called signs of proportion, a term referring to the rhythm of simultaneous voices. ¶ The value of a note was open to alteratio(n) by position or by use of the dot (punctum augmentationis, alterationis, (im)perfectionis or divisionis). ¶ Expression marks appeared, along with many other symbols, in the Seventeenth Century; the bar was brought over from lute-tablature, and mensurable music disappeared before the convenient complexities of our own era.

note. A character representing a musical tone; by its shape indicating the duration, by its position on the staff, the pitch, of the tone. connecting note. A note common to two chords.

note (nôt), F. Note. n. d'agrément (d'ă-grā-măn̂). Ornamental note. n. de passage (dŭ păs-säzh). Passing note. n. dièsée (dĭ-ĕ-zā), F. Note marked with a sharp. notes coulées (koo-lā). Slurred notes. n. de goût (dŭ-goo). Note of embellishment. n. sensible (săn̂-sēbl'). Leading note. n. surabondantes (sür-ă-bôn̂-dänt). Such incommensurate groups as triplets, quintoles, etc. n. liée (lē-ā). Tied note. n. syncopées (săn̂-kô-pā). Syncopated notes.

Noten (nō'-tĕn), G., pl. Notes. Notenblatt (blät). A sheet of music. N.-buch (bookh). Music-book. N.-fresser. "Note-gobbler," one who has facility but no taste. N.-schrift (shrĭft). Musical manuscript. N.-system (zēs-tām). The staff.

noter (nō-tā), F. To write out a tune.

no'tograph. Melograph.

notturno (nôt-toor'-nō), I. A nocturne.

no'tula, L. Note used in ligature.

nourrir le son (noor-rēr lŭ sôn̂), F. To attack a note forcibly, and sustain it. un son nourri (noor-rē). A sustained tone.

nourrisson (noor-rēs-sôn̂), F. Bard.

nour'singh. A straight Indian trumpet.

no'va, I. A small flute.

Novelette (nôf-ĕ-lĕt'), G. From F., a short musical romance. Name first given by Schumann to pieces containing considerable freedom of form, treatment, and idea.

novemole (nō-vĕ-mō'-lĕ), I. A group of nine equal notes.

no'well. Old E. "Good news." 1. A refrain of Christmas carols, hence 2. Carol. Cf. NOEL.

nuances (nü-än̂s), F., pl. 1. Lights and shades of expression; variety. 2. A notation.

null. 1. A cipher. Vide 0. 2. Vide TASTO SOLO.

number. 1. An integral portion of an opera, symphony, or programme, etc. 2. A favourite method of designating compositions, as Chopin's "5th" waltz.

numer'ical notation. A scheme introduced by Rousseau, to substitute numerals as names of tones. A similar notation in Massachusetts was called Day's & Beal's "One-line system."

nu'merus, L. 1. Number. 2. Rhythm.

Nunc dimit'tis, L. "Now dismiss (us)." The text, Luke II. 10–12, often used as a final number.

nun's-fiddle. Marine trumpet.

nuovo (noo-ō′-vō), I. New. di nuovo. Again.

nut. 1. The small bridge at the upper end of the finger-board of violins, etc. 2. The movable fastening of the hair of a bow. 3. The "lowest nut," the ridge between tail-piece and tail-pin.

O

O A small circle, or cipher, means: 1. An open string. 2. Harmonic. 3. Diminished fifth (or a chord containing one). 4. Tasto solo. 5. To be played with the thumb. 6. Tempus perfectum. Vide NOTATION. 7. Harmonium-stops are marked with a numeral in a circle. 8. In neume-notation, the fourth church mode.

O (ō), od (ōd), I. Or, as, either.

O (ō), L. Exclamation. les O de Noël (lā-zō dŭ nō-ël), F. The Christmas antiphons to the Magnificat, all beginning with "O!"

oaten-pipe. A simple straw cut to form a reed-pipe.

ob. Abbr. for oboe(s).

obbligato (ôb-blĭ-gä′-tō), I., obligé (ôb-lĭ-zhā), F., Obligat (ôp-lĭ-gät′), G. "Indispensable," of a part which cannot be omitted without injury to completeness; though latterly the term has come almost to mean "optional," as in songs "with violin obb." in which the violin part is frequently omitted.

ob(b)liquo (ôb-blē′-kwō), I. Oblique. Vide MOTION.

ober (ō′-bĕr), G. Upper, higher. O.-dominante. Dominant. O.-labium. Upper lip (of a pipe). O.-manual. The upper manual. O.-stimme. Upper part. O.-taste (täs′-tĕ). Black key. O.-theil (tīl). The upper part. O.-ton. Harmonic. phonischer O.-ton. The 15th partial. O.-werk. In an organ with 2 manuals, the choir-organ; with 3, the swell; with 4, the solo.

oblique, obli′quus, L. Vide MOTION.

oblique pf. An upright pf. with diagonal strings.

oboe (ō′-bō; in G. ō-bō′-ĕ), oboè (ō-bō-ā′), I. Plurals: oboes, E., Oboen, G., oboi (ō-bō′-ē), I. 1. A double-reed instr. with conical wooden tube, and 9 to 14 keys; extreme compass ♭♭–f‴. It is non-transposing (except in the case of the B♭ and E♭ oboes for military bands), and is fingered somewhat like a flute. Its tone is reedy and quaint, almost homely; it gives a pastoral atmosphere, or is capable of great melancholy, but rarely of much floridity. The alto of the oboe is the so-called cor anglais (kôr äṅ-glĕ′), F., corno inglese (kôr-nō-ēn-glā′-zĕ), I., englisches Horn (ĕng′-lĭsh-ĕs not ĕng-glĭsh-ĕs), G., or English horn. An oboe with a double long tube, and a pitch a fifth lower, extreme compass g♭–b.″ This is now written as an instr. transposing a fifth. It is even more sombre than the treble oboe—indeed it is the most mournful and inconsolable of instruments. It is a development from the old oboè da caccia (dä kät′-shä), in F. or E♭ written in the alto clef. The o. d'amore (dä-mō′-rĕ), o. basso, and o. lungo (loon′-gō) were lower by a minor third than the modern treble oboe, which was formerly called o. piccolo. 2. A reed-stop of 4 and 8 ft. pitch, also called orchestral oboe.

obois′ta, I. Oboist.

Obw. Abbr. for Oberwerk.

ocarina (ō-kä-rē′-nä). A terra-cotta bird-shaped instr. of fluty tone.

occhiali (ôk-kĭ-ä′-lē). 1. White notes. 2. Brillenbasse.

occhetto (ök-kĕt′-tō), I., oche′tus, L. Hocket.

oct′achord. 1. An 8-stringed instr. 2. A series of 8 tones.

oct′aphonic. Eight-voiced.

oc′tave (in F. ôk-tăv, in G. ôk-tä′-fĕ). 1. A consecutive series of eight diatonic tones as from c′–c″. 2. The interval of an eighth. 3. A tone an 8th above (or below) another. 4.

large octave, once-marked or lined o., etc. Vide PITCH. 5. The diapason of the Greek system. 6. The eight days following a Church festival. 7. A stop sounding an octave higher than the digital pressed, as octave-flute (also used for the piccolo (q v.). consecutive covered, broken, etc., octaves, vide the adjectives. rule of the o. A 17th century system of harmonising the scale giving a bass scale with the normal chords and inversions to accompany it. short o. The lowest octave in an organ, where the scale is incomplete or compressed, also called mi–re–ut. o.-scale. Vide MODES. o.-coupler. Vide COUPLER. o.-staff. A notation introduced by Adams, of New Jersey, three groups of lines combined in three octaves, dispensing with the flats and sharps, and giving each tone its own place. octave stop. 1. A 4-ft. stop. 2. The position of fingers stopping an octave on the fingerboard. 3. A mechanical stop in reed-organs, coupling the octave above.

octaviana (ôk-tä-vĭ-ä'-nä), octavina (ôk-tä-vē'-nä), I., octavin (ôk-tä-văn̆), F. 1. An octave-spinet. 2. The piccolo. 3. A harpsichord octave-stop. 4. A 2-ft. organ-stop.

Octavin (ôk-tä-fēn'), G. A single reed, conical wood-wind instr. fingered like the oboe ; compass c'-c'''', keys B♭ and C. Inv. by O. Adler.

The Opera.

By Ernest Newman.

COMBINATIONS of poetry and music, in a more or less dramatic form, must have been usual from very ancient times; and, as a matter of fact, we can trace this form of art back to 1350. But the opera proper, in the modern sense of the word, sprang up in Italy about the end of the sixteenth century. It was the invention of certain Florentine amateurs, lovers of the antique, who wished to give to music something of the importance it was thought to have had in the Greek drama; and the Dafne (1594), and Euridice (1600), of Peri and Caccini, mark the beginnings of opera. These works were mostly in a kind of recitative, with slight orchestral accompaniment. The object was to imitate in music the inflections of the speaking voice, the Florentine scholars imagining that the music in the Greek drama had been simply an intensification of the tones of ordinary speech. Musica parlante, "speaking music," was the ideal they aimed at. As the opera progressed, it inevitably became less speaking and more musical. The orchestra became larger and more capable of colour; recitative developed into the aria, the duet, and the concerted piece. As the opera spread over Italy, however, it tended to degenerate. It relied too much on imitation of the antique; it had no healthy poetical drama with which to compare itself, and so became ever more inane in sentiment; it was corrupted first by the fashionable courts and then by the ignorant, pleasure-loving Italian public; undue prominence was given to the mere scenery and spectacle; and the star singers tried to subordinate everything to their own vanity. All this while there existed, among the people, an ancient form of rural comedy—the Commedia dell' Arte—full of healthy life and sincere sentiment, and free from the affectation of the pseudo-antique. From this there grew up, at a later date, the charming and sparkling opera buffa. ¶ France had long had a form of entertainment—the ballet—with many points of similarity with the opera. The first real French opera seems to have been La pastorale, by Perrin and Cambert (1659); but no great progress was made till Lully—an Italian by birth, but French in sympathies—became the head of the opera in Paris (1671). In France, the verbal element always resisted the encroachment of the musical, this being partly due to the highly developed, rather than to that of the flowing, aria. In the course of time, Italian influences tended to cultivate the merely musical element at the expense of the dramatic; but the balance was restored by Rameau, who, with a greater musical gift than Lully's, made the vocal portion of the opera free and interesting in itself, without losing sight of the dramatic expression. When the Italian opera buffa was introduced into Paris (1752), it strengthened the already existent French comic opera, and even taught the serious writers some lessons in naturalness and directness. ¶ In Germany, opera first found favour at the Courts. Singers, composers, librettists, conductors—all were Italian; and, if, in an isolated case, the recitatives were sung in German, the airs, which were held to be the essential parts of the opera, were generally given in Italian. It was at Hamburg that the German element had its stronghold. Keiser (1673–1739) relied on the German Lied rather than the Italian aria, and preferred a German libretto to an Italian one. But on the whole the German passion was for thoroughly Italian opera. ¶ Neither in Italy, Germany, nor France did the opera seem, in the middle of the eighteenth century, to have any real life or any chance of development. From this miserable condition it was delivered by Gluck, who added to a musical gift greater than that of the majority of his predecessors, a strong sense of the value of a dramatic basis for the music. ¶ The history of the opera in England in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries is somewhat curious. Purcell's influences were mainly French, derived through his master, Pelham Humphreys, who had studied under Lully. Purcell's striking individuality, however, transformed this influence into something quite English. Later on, the English stage was ruled almost entirely for a time by Handel, who made no alterations in the general form of the opera, but filled each separate part with a wealth of musical inventiveness previously unknown. ¶In the early work of Mozart, Italian influences struggled with German. His experiences in Paris, where he heard the best operas of all kinds, in 1778, deepened both his technical powers and his dramatic sense. "The Marriage of Figaro," and "Don Giovanni," show the most wonderful art of character-drawing, interpenetrated with a musical spirit of unfailing and surpassing loveliness. They seem to combine Handel's melodic beauty and power with Gluck's intensity of dramatic expression. Gluck and Mozart were the two men whose influence was most felt by later operatic writers. ¶The next great development came with Weber and the German Romantic movement. Between the true classical and Romantic epoch, however, came a body of work, half ancient, half modern, both in France and Germany. It is typified by such men as Hérold, Méhul, Cherubini, Boieldieu, and Spontini, and by Beethoven's solitary opera "Fidelio," and represents the crossing of the old culture with the new, the forms of the eighteenth century with the post-Revolution spirit. Under Weber and the Romantics the German opera entered on a new career. Its essence was a heartfelt sincerity—almost simplicity—of musical feeling, subtilised and enriched by the warm, expansive culture of that day. Most of the sensations of the eighteenth century opera are found in the work of Weber and his fellows, together with some quite novel ones; and in every case a deeper or subtler tinge is given them by the superior orchestral resources. In the painting of scenes of nervous horror, for example, the Romantics added considerably to the palette of their predecessors. ¶While this movement was going on in Germany, Rossini was galvanising the almost extinct art of Italy. His sparkling melody, his verve, his audacity, his superficiality, produced a new type of Italian opera, appealing to fashionable and uncultured audiences, who asked for nothing from the opera but amusement, and that in a form not too subtle for them. The really dramatic passages in his operas, as in those of Donizetti and Bellini, are comparatively few. Their general style of work was carried on by a stronger musician, Meyerbeer, who was weak enough to sacrifice, for the applause of Paris, the genuine musical gifts he had brought with him from Germany. ¶Concurrently with this vogue of Italian opera there ran the career of Wagner, who reflected more upon his art than any opera composer except Gluck. Dissatisfied with both the independent musical and poetical elements out of which previous operas had been built, he modified each to suit the demands of the other. He aimed at a form of expression in which poetry and music should combine in one indissoluble speech. This was to be the "means" of the opera; its "end" was the drama itself. Wagner's reforms were so entirely the outcome of his own peculiar individuality, and depended so much on his own stupendous gifts, that no one has been able to take up his work after him. He has influenced almost all his countrymen; but their work, as a whole, is plainly imitative and reminiscent. ¶Similarly Berlioz, who also worked on his own lines, occasionally casting his eyes back to Gluck and Weber, left no successor. The line on which composers like Halévy and Auber must be strung derives from Meyerbeer and the Italians. But the more modern French opera-writers strike a more original, more national note. Gounod and Bizet, Reyer, Saint-Saëns, and Massenet are really French, each in his own way; while in the very modern work of Bruneau we get the spirit of French realistic fiction, and in that of Vincent d'Indy we have a curious expression of the subtlety and mysticism of the Celtic revival. The rise of serious French opera has been accompanied by a consolidation of the lighter form—the opéra bouffe. ¶In Italy, the most remarkable phenomenon has been the change of Verdi's style. Beginning as a commonplace, though sometimes dramatic, writer of Italian operas, he has developed into a composer who, while never losing his southern grace and litheness, has assimilated some of the best elements of northern art. In the work of the younger men of his school there seems to be, at present, a contest between the old ideals and the new. In many cases, unfortunately, their musical gifts are not on a par with their dramatic intentions. ¶The first great name in Russian music is that of Glinka, who, about the middle of the century, worked out a national form of opera. Though Wagner's influence has necessarily been felt here and there, the Russian opera as a whole has developed freely on its own account; and the two representatives of it best known to the West—Rubinstein and Tschaïkowsky—are in no way Wagnerian.

The Oratorio.

By H. E. Krehbiel.

AN oratorio is a musical composition for chorus and solo voices, with orchestral accompaniment, to a poem on a religious or sacred subject, generally in narrative form, though often with dramatic episodes, but without scenery, action, or costume. The origin of the oratorio is to be found in the so-called mysteries and miracle-plays of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, which enacted an important part in the life of the common people. These were sung and acted, and though, on account of abuses that crept into them they were frowned upon by the Church, their popularity was never destroyed. The oratorio was brought into existence upon the model of these religious plays by St. Philip of Neri (1515–95), who recognised in them a means of opposing the influence of the Reformation upon the common people. In his chapel or oratory (whence the name oratorio) in Rome he had spiritual songs sung after sermons and other devotions, to "allure young people to pious offices." St. Philip induced capable Italian poets to write the words, and the best composers to furnish the music. By degrees the spiritual songs gave place to musical settings of sacred stories sometimes in dialogue form. The invention of dramatic recitative at the end of the sixteenth century had a marked influence on oratorio. The first to use it was Emilio Cavaliere, whose allegory, "The Soul and the Body," performed in a Roman Church, was the first oratorio corresponding to the modern form. It was, however, intended to be acted in costume, and only gradually did this feature fall into disuse. The later Italian composers, Carissimi, Stradella, Cesti and Alessandro Scarlatti, first developed the new form on the lines in which it has come down to us. Carissimi greatly improved the recitative, giving it more character and musical expressiveness than his predecessors had done, and ventured more boldly into the field of broad choral writing. Cesti and Stradella cultivated still further the natural resources of the chorus at a time when the general tendency in Italy was toward the more obvious and pleasing forms of solo song. Alessandro Scarlatti, who was one of the chief forces in this direction, also contributed to the development of the oratorio by the increased stress he put upon the solo arias in it. But on the whole, as Dr. Parry has remarked, the oratorio had to wait for representatives of more strenuous nations for its ultimate development. ¶That development was destined to come in Germany. While oratorio had thus been taking shape in Italy, there was an important movement going on in Germany by which the Passion was brought into existence. This came about, after a long line of tentative and experimental efforts, through the works of Heinrich Schütz, who had received his training in Italy and carried thence to his native land some of the new ideals of music. His first Passion was produced in 1645. The various attempts that followed this culminated in the settings by J. S. Bach. These works were intended for performance in church in Passion Week, as a religious service partly narrative, partly dramatic and partly reflective in character. The narrative was put into the mouth of the Evangelist, usually the principal tenor, who related the Passion of Christ; the personages in the story spoke for themselves. The chorus was often treated dramatically, representing the emotions of the onlookers, while the solo airs were of a piously reflective character. There was a plentiful interspersion of chorales in which the congregation joined. In the middle there was an intermission for the sermon. The Passion music was also an outgrowth of the mediæval miracle-plays, but it soon fell into disuse and displayed no vitality after the great creations of Bach, the "Passions according to St. Matthew" and "St. John," respectively, composed in the first quarter of the eighteenth century. German art was thenceforward turned into the channels of the oratorio as it was developed in Italy; and the form was brought to its highest perfection by George Frederick Handel. As thus perfected it was not, like the Passions, a part of religious exercises, nor a direct expression of devotional feeling, but epic or narrative, with certain quasi-dramatic traits and sometimes with the use of vivid local colour; but always with the most impressive use of the chorus as the most important medium of expression. Handel's first oratorio "Esther" was written in 1720 and performed first in England in 1732, oratorio being then quite unknown in that country. The long line of masterpieces he produced thereafter gave the final and definite character to the oratorio form which has remained to this day. The greatest of them are "The Messiah," "Judas Maccabæus," "Israel in Egypt," and "Samson." Handel's strength lay chiefly in broad choral writing, and it was natural that the oratorio should develop mainly on this line, as affording a vehicle for more descriptive and characteristic music, thus making up for a lack of pantomime, costume, and scenery. ¶For a considerable period after Handel's death, little of importance in the field of oratorio was produced. Haydn's "Creation" and "The Seasons," written in 1795 and 1801 respectively, still retain some of their vitality and freshness. Beethoven's "Mount of Olives" does not. Oratorios by Spohr and Schneider attained a great but transient popularity, but the next really important works in this form were Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," performed first in 1836, and "Elijah," in 1846. In both of these the dramatic element is foremost, and the musical characterisation of the various persons presented is perhaps more vivid than any previous attempts in this line. Works like Liszt's "St. Elizabeth" and Rubinstein's "Moses" are conceived as operas in which descriptive directions take the place of scenery, costume, and incident.

The Orchestra and Orchestration.

By W. J. Henderson.

THE modern orchestra dates from the early part of the seventeenth century. Previous to that no attempts at a systematic combination of instruments can be found. The original use of the orchestra was in the accompaniments of operas, and even here the earliest combinations were fortuitous and without special purpose. The earliest writer who seemed to have distinct ideas as to instrumental effects was Claudio Monteverde (1568–1643). His orchestra was the first in which a considerable body of strings, including two violins, figured. He invented some special instrumental effects, and led the way toward the establishment of the string quartet as the foundation of the orchestra. Alessandro Scarlatti (born 1659) wrote for a string quartet similar to that employed in the present orchestra, and used oboes and flutes as his principal wind-instruments. ¶ Handel (1658–1759) used all the ordinary instruments of the present orchestra except the clarinet, but not in the same combinations as those of to-day. The orchestra of his time contained a much larger number of oboes and bassoons than ours, because these instruments then were much less powerful. In the early part of the eighteenth century, when the seeds of symphonic music were just beginning to sprout, the orchestra consisted of the same body of strings as now used, but the violoncello was not yet appreciated at its true value, trumpets and tympani being added when brilliancy was needed. Clarinets had not entered the orchestra, but flutes were common. The trombone was employed only in the opera, where alone also the harp was heard. ¶ Joseph Haydn (1732–1809) wrote his first symphony in 1759 for first and second violins, violas and basses, two oboes and two horns. Mozart (1756–91) introduced clarinets and Haydn learned their use from him, so that his D major symphony, written in 1795, is scored for 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets,

2 horns, 2 kettle-drums, violins, violas, 'cellos and basses, adding in the first movement 2 bassoons and 2 trumpets. In the "Eroica" he introduced a third horn, and in the fifth symphony a piccolo, a contra-bassoon and three trombones. Four horns were used in the Ninth symphony, and this work contains the entire modern orchestra, except such instruments as have since been introduced for special effects. The operatic writers in their search after dramatic colouring led the way in such introductions, and the romantic composers of symphonic music, building up their great colour schemes, were not slow to accept every suggestion. ¶ Nevertheless the orchestra as now constituted is practically that of Beethoven. As ordinarily distributed it is composed of a piccolo, 2 flutes, 2 oboes, 2 clarinets, 2 bassoons, 4 horns, 2 trumpets, 3 trombones, 2 kettle-drums, first and second violins, violas, 'cellos, and basses. The wood-wind instruments are now frequently used in triplets instead of pairs, and the whole wind choir is extended at will by the use of the English horn, the bass clarinet, the tuba, the saxophone or other less common instruments. The harp is also employed at times. ¶ ORCHESTRATION, the art of writing for orchestra, has developed rapidly in recent years, yet the fundamental principles are those which guided Mozart and Beethoven. The modern efforts have been in the direction of increased sonority and richness of colour. These ends are obtained by writing for a larger number of instruments and by dividing the old ones into a greater number of parts. The orchestra naturally separates itself into three groups of melodic instruments and one of merely rhythmic ones. The first three groups are the wood-wind, the brass, and the strings, and the other is the "battery," as the group of percussive instruments is called. In this last group only the kettle-drums have musical pitch, except when bells are employed. ¶ The wood-wind is divided into flutes, which have no reed mouthpieces; oboes and bassoons, which have mouthpieces with two vibrating reeds; and clarinets, which have mouthpieces with one reed. Flutes used in triplets are capable of independent harmony, but all of a high pitch. Bassoons are the basses of the oboe family, and hence with two oboes and two bassoons, composers can write in full four-part harmony for this class of reed instruments, and let them play by themselves when their peculiar thin, reedy quality is desired. The English horn, the alto of the oboe, can be used as another part. Clarinets have a compass extending through the alto and soprano ranges of the human voice, while the bass clarinet covers the tenor and the bass. Here again the composer can get a full harmony in one family of wood. Thus the wood alone offers three distinct orchestral tints. But the instruments of the different families combine to make new tints. Flutes go well with clarinets or oboes, and clarinets combine admirably with bassoons. Furthermore, the whole wood-band can be used at once with fine effect. The older composers had conventional methods of writing for these instruments, almost always allotting the same parts of the harmony to the same instruments. The moderns have learned to vary this practice with excellent results. All the wood-wind instruments can be used profitably as solo voices. ¶The brass offers three groups, horns, trumpets and trombones, each of which is capable of independent harmony, while each may be combined with the other, or with any part of another to make variety of effects. All are useful for solo effects, the horn being especially good for this purpose. The brass can also be used in many combinations with the wood-wind. Horns, clarinets, and bassoons, for example, are frequently combined. The foundation of the orchestra, however, is the string quartet, as it is called, though it is really a quintet. Violins supply the soprano and alto parts of the harmony, violas part of the alto and all of the tenor ; 'cellos run from bass up to low soprano, and basses give the deepest notes. The older composers made but poor use of the viola and the 'cello, but the moderns take every advantage of their compass and their individuality of timbre. Furthermore, the moderns subdivide the strings very often, writing at times for first and second violins in as many as six parts, for violas in two parts, and 'cellos in the same way. In this way the harmony becomes many-voiced and extremely rich. ¶The essential requirements of good orchestration are solidity, balance of tone, contrast and variety. Solidity is obtained by a proper distribution, among the instruments, of the notes of each chord, so that the proper sounds are made the more prominent. The foundation of solidity is good writing for the strings, the mainstay of the orchestra. Balance of tone also depends on a proper dispersal of the harmony, so that the instruments which are providing the harmonic support will not drown out the voices of those which are singing the melody. A perfect understanding of the relative powers of the various instruments is necessary to success in these two matters. Especially must the middle voices be skilfully treated to obtain solidity. If they are too loud, the effect is "muddy"; if they are too weak, the orchestra is "all top and bottom," as the musicians say. ¶Contrast is obtained by transferring the melodic ideas frequently from one of the three divisions of the orchestra to another, while variety is the result of mixing the tints. A theme is never confined to the strings, but is often handed over to the brass, or the wood-wind. But even this would not be sufficient. Consequently the various effects of mingling the voices of the different instruments, flutes and horns, or clarinets and 'cellos, or oboes and violas, are employed. The composer must, of course, know his orchestral colours thoroughly before endeavouring to mix them. Students of orchestral music will find the simplest and most solid colour schemes in the scores of the classic symphonists, while in the modern operas and symphonic works of the romanticists he will hear all the results of the most complex treatment of orchestral tinting.

Organ.

By the Editor.

THOUGH many instruments are loosely called organs (such as the mouth-organ, hand-organ, etc.), the word is generally given to the pipe-organ, a microcosmic wind-instrument which contains in its forest of resources almost all the powers and qualities of almost all other instruments. In the course of time while its powers have grown ever greater, their control has become always easier and more centralised. ¶The History of the organ is, in any completeness, beyond the space of this work. Its prototypes are the primeval Pan's pipes and the bagpipe. The 2d century B.C. finds it with a key-board, and pipes supplied by bellows with air compressed by water. Ctesibius (170 B.C.) invented this water-organ (Organon hydraulicon) which his pupil Heron described in Greek. There are many accounts and representations of organs from that point on. The mediæval monks used organs abundantly, the pipes being 8 to 15 in number and of no greater than 4-ft. length, the range being usually one octave from middle c′ downward, the key-board consisting of lettered plates to be pressed. In the 10th century there was at Winchester, England, an organ with 2 manuals for 2 performers, 20 digitals each, and 10 pipes to each digital, 400 in all. In the 12th century the pipes began to be divided into registers or stops (q. v.). For two centuries the action became so clumsy that keys were struck with fists or elbows. Pedals were invented about 1325. Till the 15th century, reed pipes were unknown. Since that time the resources have been vastly increased, the variety of tone rendered almost illimitable, and the introduction of water, steam or electric aid to work the bellows has displaced the need of a man to serve as organ-pumper or bellows-treader. Electricity has also been called into play for bringing remote parts of the organ into convenient control, till the performer with his draw-knobs has almost as easy command as the conductor with his bâton. ¶The Construction of the organ is too complicated for detail, but many of the terms following will be found more fully explained under their separate heads. When looking at an organ, in a church for example, the eye is first caught by the great array of pipes. These ornamental or display-pipes (some of which may be only for show, dummy-pipes) conceal many plain pipes of wood or metal, which are of various shapes and sizes, according to the quality and pitch of the tone of the pipe (q. v.). These pipes are grouped together into registers or stops (q. v.), each being of uniform quality of tone and furnishing a complete or partially complete scale (or series of pipes of graduated lengths). Though these pipes are merely colossal flutes, oboes, trumpets, etc. (each pipe, however, sounding only one tone), they are too large to be blown by human lungs, and an elaborate mechanism is used. This is concealed from the eye, which sees only the series of key-boards for the hands and feet, and the multitude of little draw-knobs grouped within easy reach. ¶Of these key-boards the numbers vary, those for the hands, the manuals, being from 1 to 5 in number and appearing in the following order counting from below, and giving both English and foreign names :

ENGLISH.	GERMAN.	FRENCH.	ITALIAN.
Great (Gt.) organ lmanua	Hauptwerk (Manual I.)	Grand-orgue (1er clavier)	Principale.
Choir "	Unterwerk (" II.)	Positierif (2e ")	Organo di coro.
Swell (Sw.) "	Schwellwerk (" III.)	Clav, de récit (3e ")	" d'espressione
Solo "	Soloklavier (" IV.)	" des bombardes (4e ")	" d'assolo.
Echo "	Echoklavier (" V.)	" d'écho (5e ")	" d'eco.

Each of these key-boards may be said to control a separate instrument or partial organ; and one often speaks of the choir-organ, swell organ, etc. ¶The pedal-key-board, Pedalklaviatur (pā-däl'-klä-fi-ä-toor'), G., or clavier des pédales (klāv-yā-dā-pā-dāl') Fr., or pedallera (pā-däl-lā'-rā), I., is worked by the feet and is also a separate instrument with stops of its own (vide PEDAL). ¶By means of couplers, any two of these key-boards (manuals or pedals) may be connected ; or they may all be combined into the full-organ. The coupling-action is worked by draw-knobs. ¶The organ as a whole, then, is divided into three chief parts: (1) The action (key-boards and stops). (2) The pipe-work. (3) The wind-supply. The action we have examined. The pipes (vide PIPE and STOP) are set upright above the wind-chest, the cover of which is called the sound-board; the lower part of the pipe, passing through an upper-board, which grips its nose, sets its foot in the pipe-rack; below this is a slider (worked by a draw-knob), a thin strip of wood with a hole for each pipe of its particular stop. ¶(4) The wind is collected from the outer air by bellows and led by feeders into a storage-bellows, where it is compressed by heavy weights ; it is next led by a wooden channel or wind-trunk into a wooden reservoir, or wind-chest, the top of which (the sound-board) is pierced by grooves closed by valves or pallets, and separated by bars. ¶To play the organ, we first pull out a draw-knob, which drags along a slider until its holes are beneath the feet of the pipes of its stop.

This stop is now said to be on (before being brought into play it was off). Having also pulled out a draw-knob setting the wind-supply to work (or having signalled the person working the bellows), we next press down one of the digitals on the key-board whose stop we have drawn. In pressing down this digital lever we raise its opposite end, which lifts an upright rod (a sticker), this in turn raising the front end of a horizontal lever (or back-fall) whose rear end is thus depressed and pulls down a thin upright strip of wood (a tracker) which in turn pulls a wire (a pull-down or pallet-wire) fastened to a valve (or pallet) which opens and lets the air (which was waiting in the groove from the wind-chest) rush up through the slider into the pipe to make it sound or speak. (Squares and roller-boards sometimes intervene between the stickers and trackers, while pneumatic or electric actions give still more direct connection between digital and pallet.) This is the mechanism by which each tone is secured. By means of a multitude of stops and couplers, what would be a simple tone or chord on another instrument may become a vast group of tones of various pitches and colours. ¶ By means of the swell (q. v.) the volume of sound may be gradually increased or diminished while it is sustained.

organ-bellows. A machine for supplying wind. o.-blower. One who works the bellows. o.-loft. The part of the church where the organ is placed. o. metal. A tin and lead mixture used in pipes. o. tablature. Vide TABLATURE. o. point. Vide PEDAL POINT. o. tone. A tone sustained with uniform power. buffet o. Very small organ. enharmonic, enharmonic organ. An American instr. giving three or four times the usual sounds within an octave, furnishing the precise intervals for every key, the scale of each key being produced by pressing a pedal. full organ. All the power of the organ. hand-organ or barrel-o. A cylinder turned by hand and acting on keys to produce set tunes. harmonium o. A reed instr. voiced to imitate organ-stops. organet'to, I. A small organ. organier (ôr-găn-yā), F. Organ-builder. organique (ôr-găn-ēk), F. Relating to the organ. organista (ôr-gä-nēs'-tä), I. and Sp. 1. An organ-player. 2. Formerly a composer.

organic. Old term for instrumental.

organis'trum, L. A hurdygurdy of about 1100 A.D.

organo (ör-gä'-nō), I. Organ (q. v.). o. di campan'a. Organ with bells. o. di legno (lān-yō). Xylophone. o. pieno (pĭ-ā'-nō), or pleno (plā'-no). Full organ. o. portatile (pôr-tä-tē'-lĕ). Portable organ. organi vocali (ôr-gä'-nē-vō-kä'-lĕ), I., pl. The vocal organs.

organo, in, L. Vide ORGANUM.

orga'nochor'dium. A combination of pf. and pipe-organ inv. by Abbé Vogler.

organophon'ic. Name adopted by a band of Polish performers imitating various instrs. vocally.

organographie (gră-fē), F. The description of an organ. organologie (zhē). The science of building and playing the organ.

or'ganum, L., or'ganon, Gr. 1. Any instrument, thence the organ. 2. The earliest polyphonic music, a continual progression of two parts in fourths or fifths (also called diapho- ny); later it developed into 3 parts (tripho'nia), the third part called triplum, hence our term treble; then into 4 parts (tetrapho'nia). 3. The part added to another in 2 part organum. in organo. Old term for in more than two parts. o. hydraul'icum. Hydraulic o. o. pneumaticum. The ordinary wind o. o. simplex, L. A mediæval term probably meaning the unisonal accompaniment of a single voice.

Orgell (ôr'-gĕl), G. An organ. O.-bälge (bĕlkh-ĕ). Organ-bellows. O.-bank (bänk). Organist's seat. O.-bauer (bow-ĕr). Organ-builder. O.-bühne (bü-nĕ), or -chor (kōr), or -platz (plätz). Organ-loft. O.-gehäuse (gĕ-hī'-zĕ). Organ-case. O.-kasten (käs'tĕn). 1. Cabinet organ. 2. Organ-case. O.-klang. Tone of an organ. O.-kunst (koonst). The art of playing, or constructing an organ. O.-metall (mā-täl'). Organ-metal. O.-pfeife (pfī'-fĕ). Organ-pipe. O.-punkt (poonkt). Pedal-point. O.-register (rĕ-gēs'-tĕr). Organ-stop. O.-schule (shoo'lĕ). Organ-school or method. O.-spiel (shpēl). Playing the organ; or the piece played. O.-spieler (shpē-lĕr). Organ-player. O.-stein (shtīn). Pan's pipes. O.-stimmen (shtĭm'-mĕn). Row of organ-pipes. O.-stücke (shtü'-kĕ). Organ-pieces. O.-treter (trā'-tĕr). Organ-treader, bellows-blower. O.-virtuose (fēr-too-ō'-zĕ). Organ-virtuoso. O.-wolf (vôlf). Ciphering. O.-zug (tsookh). Organ-stop or row of pipes.

orgeln (ôr'-gĕln). To play on the organ.

orgue (ôrg), F. Organ. o. de salon (dŭ să-lôṅ), orgue expressif. (a) The harmonium. (b) The swell organ. o. hydraulique (ē-drō-lēk). Hydraulic organ. o. à percussion (pĕr-küs'-yôṅ). A reed o. made by De Provins & Alexandre, Paris. o. plein (plăṅ). Full organ. o. portatif (pôr-tä-tēf). A portable organ. o. de barbarie (dŭ băr-bä-rē). A barrel-organ, hurdygurdy. o. positif (pô-zĭ-tēf). 1. The choir-organ. 2. A small fixed organ.

orguinette (ôr-gĭ-nĕt), F. A small reed-organ played with a crank, the music being perforated to admit air to the reeds.

orificcio (ôr-ĭ-fĭt'-chō), I. Orifice (of a pipe).

oris'cus. Vide NEUME.

or'nament, E., ornamen'to, I., ornement (ôrn-măṅ), F. An embellishment, as the turn, grace (q. v.), etc. ornamental note. An accessory note.

ornato (ôr-nä'-tō), ornatamen'te, I. Ornate(ly).

orpha'rion, orphéor(e)on (ôr-fā-ō-rôṅ), F. A kind of cither.

Orphéon (ôr-fā-ôṅ). 1. A piano-violin. 2. A popular male singing society of enormous proportions in France (in 1881 it had 60,000 members). orphéoniste (nēst). A member of such society.

Orpheus (ôrf'-yūs, or ôr'-fĕ-ŭs). Fabled Greek lyre-player and singer of supernatural power. O.-harmo'nika, G. Pan harmonikon.

orthog'raphy. Spelling and grammar are as necessary in music as in any other written language. Bad spelling occurs in music where, for instance, a chord is written in sharps when the key-relationship shows it to belong in the enharmonic flat notes. Sometimes, however, a note is mis-written intentionally for the sake of easier reading.

os'cillation, E., Oszillation (ôs-tsĭl-lä-tsĭ-ōn'), G. Beating, vibration.

osia (ō'-sē-ä), ossia (ôs'-sĭ-ä), I. Or, otherwise, or else. o. più facile (pĭ-oo' fä'-chĭ-lĕ). Or else this more easy way.

osservanza (vän'-tsä), I. Observation, strictness. osservato (vä'-tō). Strict, exact.

ostinato (ôs-tĭ-nä'-tō), I. 1. Obstinate, continuous. 2. A ground-bass, sometimes basso o.

otez (ō-tā), F. "Off!" (of a stop).

ottava (ôt-tä′-vä), I. Octave, eighth. o. alta (äl′-tä). The octave above; an octave higher (abbreviated 8va.); o. bassa (bäs′-sä). The octave below (abbreviated 8va. bassa). o. supra (soo′-prä). The octave above. coll' o. To be played with the octave added.

ottavina (öt-tä-vē′-nä), I. Vide OCTAVIANA.

ottavino (ôt-tä-vē′-nō), I. The piccolo.

ottemole (ôt-tĕ-mō′-lĕ). A group of eight equal notes.

ottet'to, I. Octet.

ou (oo), F. Or, or else.

ougab (oo′-gäb), Heb. Ancient reed-instrument.

ouïe (oo-ē), F. Soundhole.

outer voices. The highest and lowest voices.

ouvert (oo-vär′), F. Open. Vide LIVRE.

ouverture (oo-vär-tür), F., Ouvertüre (oo′-fĕr-tü-rĕ), G., overtura (ō-vĕr-too′-rä), I., overture (ō′-vĕr-tūr, not toor). An elaborate prelude to an opera, oratorio or play, often based (in the concert o.) on the sonata formula; often (in the opera o.) a mere medley of airs; sometimes an independent composition. o. di ballo (dē bäl′-lō), I. An overture introducing dance melodies.

overblow. 1. To blow with enough force to produce harmonics on a wind-instr. Vide ACOUSTICS and HORN. This feat is constantly necessary in playing many wind-instrs. 2. Of defective pipes, to sound a partial instead of the fundamental.

overchord. Vide PHONE.

overspun. Used of covered strings.

overstrung. Of a piano in which the strings of two or more of the lowest octaves are stretched diagonally under other strings, the object being to economise space.

ovvero (ôv-vā′-rō), I. Or.

O. W. Abbr. for Oberwerk.

oxypyc'ni. Church modes with a pyknon high in the tetrachord.

P

P Abbr. of pedale; piano; più, as più forte (pf.); poco, as p. a. p., poco a poco; parte (as colla p.); pointé, F. (toe); and positif (choir-organ).

pad. Vide PIANOFORTE.

padiglione (pä-dēl-yō′-nĕ), I. The bell (of a wind-instr.).

Padovano (pä-do-vä′-nō), Padava'ne, or, Paduane (pä-doo-ä′-nĕ), I. "From Padua." An Italian dance in ternary rhythm. Perhaps the same as Pavan.

paean (pē′-än), Gr. Hymn of invocation, usually to Apollo.

pair of organs. An organ with a complete set of pipes.

paired notes. Thirds, sixths, etc., in pf.-playing.

paisana (pä-ĭ-zä′-nä), Sp. A country dance.

palalaika. Vide BALALAIKA.

palco (päl′-kō), I. Stage of a theatre; box.

Palestrinastil (shtēl), G. The style of Palestrina (vide B. D.), i. e., a cappella.

palettes (păl-ĕt′), F. The white keys.

pal'let. A spring valve in the wind-chest of an organ.

palmadilla (păl-mä-dēl′-yä), Sp. A dance.

pam'be. Small Indian drum.

panathe'næa, Gr. An Athenian festival at which musical contests were held.

Pan'dean pipes, Pan's pipes. A primitive group of reeds or tubes of different lengths, fastened together and tuned, named for the god Pan.

pando'ran, Gr., Pandore (pän-dō′-rĕ), G., pando'ra, pandoura, pandura (pän-doo′-rä), I., pandure (pändür), F. Vide BANDORA.

Panflöte (pän′-flā′-tĕ), G. Pandean pipes.

panharmo'nicon. A kind of orchestrion inv. by Maelzel. panmelo'deon. A key-board instr. of wheels impinging on metal rods, inv. 1810, by Leppich.

panorgue (ôrg), F. A little reed-organ to be attached to a pf. inv. by J. Jaulin.

pan'sympho'nikon. An orchestrion inv. by Peter Singer, 1839.

pantaleone (pän-tä-lĕ-ō'-nĕ), pantalon. An instr. inv. by Pantaleon Hebenstreit, in the 18th century. It was 9 ft. long, 4 ft. wide, and had 186 gut strings, played on with two small sticks. P.-zug, G. A harpsichord-stop.

pantalon (päñ-tä-lôñ), F. First movement of the quadrille.

Papagenoflöte (pä'-pä-gā-nō-flā'-tĕ), G. Pan's pipes, from Mozart's Papageno (vide "Magic Flute" in "Stories of the Operas").

papillons (păp-ē-yôñ), F. "Butterflies." A frail and flitting composition.

parallel. Of intervals, consecutive; of keys, related. Of motion, the progression of two voices in the same direction at a fixed interval. It requires care in handling. Parallelen (pä-räl-lā'-lĕn), G. 1. Sliders. 2. Consecutives. Parallelbewegung (bĕ-vākh'-oongk), G. Similar or parallel motion. Parallel-tonarten (tōn-är-tĕn), G. Related keys.

parame'se, parane'te. Vide LYRE.

par'aphrase. Free or florid transcription.

parfait (păr-fĕ'), F. Perfect (of intervals), etc.

parlan'do, parlante (pär-län'-tĕ), I. "Speaking," in a recitative manner.

parhy'pate. Vide LYRE.

Parnas'sus. A mountain in Greece, sacred to Apollo, the Muses, and inspiration generally. Gradus ad Parnas'sum. Vide METHOD.

parole(s) (pă-rôl'), F. Word(s).

part, E. and G. 1. The music of an individual voice or instr. 2. A division.

part-book. 1. The music of any one voice or instr. 2. In the 15th–16th cent. a book with separate parts on facing pages.

part-song. A song for three or more voices.

part-writing. Counterpoint.

parte (pär'-tĕ), pl. i, I. Part(s). colla p. With the part, i. e., adopting the tempo of the singer or soloist. p. cantan'te. The vocal part, the leading voice. parti di ripieno (rē-pĭ-ā'-nō). Supplementary parts. a p. equale. With more than one voice of leading importance.

partial. 1. An harmonic. Vide ACOUSTICS. 2. Vide STOP. 3. Vide TURN.

partic'ipating. Accessory. partici-pa'tum syste'ma, L. Equal temperament.

Partie (pär-tē'), G. 1. Variations. 2. Vide SUITE.

partie(s) (păr-tē), F. Parts. p. de remplissage (dŭ räñ-plĭ-säzh), F. Accessory parts.

partimen'to, I. 1. An exercise. 2. Figured bass.

partita (pär-tē'-tä), I. 1. Variations. 2. Vide SUITE.

partitino (tē'-no). A small supplementary score.

partition, E. (in F. păr-tēs-yôñ), Partitur (pär-tĭ-toor'), G., partitura (pär-tĭ-too'-rä), partizione (pär-tē-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. A full score for voices or instrs. p. cancella'ta. A set of staves with vertical lines for the bass. Partiturspiel (toor'-shpēl), G. Playing from the score.

partito (par-tē'-tō), I. Scored, divided.

pas (pä), F. 1. Step, dance. p. ordinaire (pä-zôr-dĭ-năr). March time. p. de charge (dŭ shărzh). Double time. p. seul (sŭl). A dance for one performer; p. de deux (dŭ dŭ). For two, etc. p. redoublé (pä-rŭ-doo-blā'). A quick-step. 2. Not, as pas trop vite (pä trō vēt). Not too fast.

paspié (päs'-pĭ-ā), Sp. A kind of dance.

pas'py. Vide PASSEPIED.

passacaglio (päs-sä-käl'-yō), I., passacaille (päs-sä-kī'-yŭ), F., passacol'le, Sp., passagall'o, I. A chaconne with a ground-bass in 3-4 time, always in minor.

passage (in F. păs-säzh). 1. A phrase or section. 2. A figure. 3. A run. notes de p. Grace notes. passage-boards. Boards on which an organ-tuner may walk.

passaggio (päs-säd′-jō), I. 1. A passage. 2. Modulation.

passamezzo (päs-sä-mĕd′-zō). A slow Italian dance, in 2-4 time, resembling the Pavan.

passant (păs-säṅ), F. Slide (of a bow).

passepied (păs-pĭ-ā), F. A lively old French dance in 3-4, 3-8, or 6-8 time; a quick minuet with three or more reprises, the first of eight bars.

passe-rue (păs-rü). Passacaglio.

passing. Unessential, as a passing modulation. A transient modulation. passing tone, or note, a brief dissonance on the weak beat, leading from one consonant tone to another; it does not need to be prepared.

Passion, Passion-music. Oratorio, or play. A dramatic or musical setting of the "Passion" (suffering) of Christ. It differs from the oratorio (q. v.) in history and form only in the facts of its being always concerned with the one subject, and in the introduction usually of spiritual reflections.

passionata or -o (päs-sĭ-ō-nä′-tä), passionatamen′te, I. Passionate(ly).

passione (päs-sĭ-ō′-nĕ). 1. Passion, feeling. 2. Vide PASSION.

Passionsmusik (päs-sĭ-ōns-moo-zēk′), G. Vide PASSION.

pas′so, I. Step.

pas′sy-measure. Old E. Passamezzo.

Pastete (päs-tā′-tĕ), G. Pasticcio.

pasticcio (päs-tē′-chō), I., pastiche (păs-tēsh), F. 1. An opera, or other work in which old airs are used to new words. 2. A medley.

pas′toral, pastorale (päs-tō-rä′-lĕ in I.; in F. păs-tō-răl′). An opera, cantata, song or instrumental composition of rustic nature or subject. p. flute. Shepherd's pipe. p. organ-point. Vide PEDAL-POINT. pastorel′la, I., pastorelle (rĕl), F. A little pastoral.

pastorita (ē′-tä). 1. A shepherd's pipe. 2. A stop, the Nachthorn.

pastourelle (păs-too-rĕl), F. 1. A 6-8 movement of a quadrille. 2. A troubadour lyric.

patetica or -o (pä-tā′-tĭ-kä), I., pathétique (pä-tā-tēk), F., pathetisch (pä-tā′-tĭsh), G. Pathetic; a piano sonata in C minor by Beethoven is so-called; and a symphony by Tchaikovski. pateticamen′te, I. Pathetically.

patimen′to, I. Grief, suffering.

patouille (pät-oo-ē′-yŭ), F. Xylophone.

patte (păt), F. 1. A special clarinet key. 2. A music-pen.

Pauke(n) (pow′-kĕ(n)), G. Kettle-drum(s).

pause, E., pausa (pä′-oo-zä), I., pause (pōz), F. 1. A rest of variable length; if very protracted called lunga (or long) pausa. 2. A fermate. 3. F. and G. A whole rest. demi-pause (dĕ-mē′-pōz), F. A half-rest.

pavan′, E., pavana (pä-vä′-nä), I., pavane (pă-văn′), F. A grave stately dance in 3-4 time, generally in three strains, each repeated; once supposed to be derived from pavo, peacock, now from Paduna (q. v.).

paventato (pä-vĕn-tä′-tō), pavento′so, I. Fearful, timid.

pavillon (pä-vē′-yôṅ), F. The bell of a wind-instr. p. en l'air (äṅ lăr). "The bell upwards" (direction to horn-players). flûte à p. A stop with flaring pipes. p. chinois (shēn-wä). Chinese hat, crescent.

peal. 1. A chime. 2. A change, of bells.

pean. A pæan.

pearly (of runs, etc.). Bright, distinct.

ped. Abbr. of Pedal.

ped′al, E. (in G. pā-däl′), pédale (pā-dăl), F., pedale (pā-dä′-lĕ), I. 1. Abbr. of Pedal-point (q. v.). 2. A foot lever of various musical uses. The piano has usually two pedals: (a) The damper (open, loud, or extension) pedal, which raises all the dampers from the strings, allowing the tones struck to be sustained and broadened by sympathetic (q. v.) vibration. The use of the damper-pedal is indicated by Ped., and its cessation by the mark ✳ or ⊛. Wm. H. Sherwood (vide B. D.) has introduced a more accurate system of continuous lines ⌐¬ to indicate just when this pedal is to be pressed, how long held and when released. (b) The soft pedal (pétite (pā-tēt), pédale) in some cases merely lets a cloth fall over the strings, but usually shifts the action so that the hammers strike only one of the two, or three strings allotted each tone. Hence its use is indicated by una corda (oo′-na kôr′-dă, one string), or Verschiebung (fĕr-shē′-boongk), and its discontinuance by "tre corde" (trā kôr′-dā, "3 strings"). In the upright pf. this pedal simply moves the hammers nearer the strings. Some pianos are fitted with a (c) sustaining, or prolongation pedal. A damper-pedal holding the dampers from only those strings struck at the moment, until the pedal is released, thus permitting the sustention of a chord or tone while the hands are busy elsewhere. (d) A. B. Chase has inv. an octave-pedal, or octavo-attachment, sounding also the higher octave. Both pedals (a and b) may be pressed together; this is indicated by pedale doppio, or doppelte.

The harp (q. v.) has 8 pedals, one opening or closing a panel in the sounding-case with loud or soft effect. Reed-organs, etc., have double pedals or treadles for working the bellows. In the pipe-organ (and in the pedalier, q. v.) the pedals are of great variety. There is a pedal key-board, Pedalklaviatur (pā-däl′-klä-fī-ä-toor′), or Pedalklavier, G., clavier des pédales (dā pā-dăl′), F., pedaliera, I., with a compass of C–f, or, counting stops, from $C_{,,}$ up. This is played by the feet (∨ over a note indicating the right toe; under it, the left: ○ similarly marking the heel). To this part of the organ, called the pedal-organ, many stops are often allotted; hence pedal-pipe, stop-sound-board, etc.; it is locked from sounding by a pedal-check (worked by a stop-knob), a bar running beneath it. The pedal-stops may be made to sound with any of the manuals by means of mechanism, called pedal-couplers, coupler-pedals, or reversible-pedal.

The word pedal is also given to the organ, to such foot-levers as the combination, or composition pedals (pédales de combinaison), which if single-acting draw out certain new, or push in certain old, stops; if double-acting produce certain combinations regardless of the previous registration. The forte-pedal draws out all the stops of its key-board; the mezzo-p. the chief 4-8 ft. stops; the piano-pedal leaving only the softest on; the crescendo-p. draws out the full power gradually, the diminuendo withdraws it; the sforzando produces a sudden fulness. Vide also CELESTE.

The swell-pedal works the shutters of the swell-box; if it remains at rest where left, it is called a balance swell-pedal.

Pedalflügel (flü′-ghĕl), G. Pedalier.

Pedalharfe (pĕ-däl′-härfĕ), G., pedal-harp. A double-action harp.

pedalier (pĕd-ä-lēr′), E., pédalier (pā-dăl-yā′), F., pedal'ion. A pedal-key-board attachable to a piano and playing the bass-strings.

pedal-note, or tone. A tone sustained by the pedal or some voice, usually the bass, while the other parts move independently. As the word "point" originally meant "note," pedal-point (abbr. to pedal) is synonymous with pedal-note, but is now used rather of the phrase in which the pedal-note occurs. It is displacing the word organ-point, derived not from organ, but from organum (q. v.) and referring to the long notes of the cantus firmus against which the other voices moved, these notes being called organici puncti, or organum notes. Pedal-point is then a phrase in which one tone is sustained through independent harmonies. The tonic or the dominant is usually the tone sustained. If both are used at once it is called pastoral. If the pedal-pt. occurs in other voices than the bass it is inverted. It is sometimes exterior, or interior. It may be figurated, trilled, or florid.

peg. A tuning-pin; in the violin, etc., it is set in the head, in a space called the peg-box.

pegli (pāl-yē), I. For the (from per gli).

pek'tis, Gr. A Greek lute.

pel, pel'lo, I. For the (from per il, per lo).

penil'lion. A Welsh improvisation of verses.

pennant. Hook.

pennata (pĕn-nä'-tä), I. Quilled (of the spinet, etc.).

penorçon (pŭ-nôr'-sôṅ), F., from penor'kon, Gr. An ancient guitar.

pensieroso (pĕn-sē-ā-rō'-sō), penso'so, I. Pensive, thoughtful.

pentachium, Gr. A composition in 5 parts.

pen'tachord. 1. A series of 5 diatonic tones. 2. An instr. with 5 strings.

pen'tatone, E., pen'taton, Gr. 1. An interval of 5 whole tones, an augmented sixth. pentaton'ic. Having five whole tones. pentatonic scale. A five-toned scale, the same as the usual major scale, with the fourth and seventh tones skipped; called also the Scotch scale. The black keys of the piano represent a pentatonic scale.

per, L. and I. For, by, through, in, from.

percus'sion, E., percussione (pĕr-koos-sĕ-ō'-nĕ), I. 1. The actual sounding of a tone or chord (as opposed to its preparation or resolution). 2. Instrs. of percussion are those in which the tone is secured by striking, particularly the drums, cymbals, and triangle, also the piano, and so forth. percussion-stop. One in which the reed is struck just as it is blown, to emphasise its tone. percussive. An instr. of percussion.

perden'do, perden'dosi, I. Dying away in both speed and power.

perdu'na. Bourdon.

perfect, E., perfet'to, I. 1. Vide INTERVAL, CADENCE, CHORD. 2. An obsolete name for triple time. perfection. Vide NOTATION and LIGATURE.

Périgourdine (pā-rĭ-goor-dēn), F. Cheerful old French dance, in triple time, so called from the province of Perigord.

period, période (pā-rĭ-ôd), F., periodo (pā-rĭ-ō'-dō), I. A passage containing two or more sections and some form of cadence. Vide FORM. Periodenbau (pā'-rĭ-ōd-ĕn-bow), G. The building of periods, or composition.

perpetual, perpetuo (pĕr-pā'-too-ō), I. 1. Vide CANON. 2. Perpetual motion, or perpet'uum mo'bile, L. A piece of great rapidity and no pause till the end.

pes, L. Foot. A ground-bass to a round.

pesante (pā-sän'-tĕ), pesantemen'te, I. Heavy(ly), impressive(ly), forcibly.

peso, di (dē pā'-sō), I. At once.

petit (pŭ-tē'), petite (pŭ-tēt), F. Small. choeur p. A three-part chorus. p. flute. Piccolo. p. mesure à deux temps. 2-4 time. petits notes (pŭ-tē' nôt). Grace notes. p. pedale. Soft pedal.

pet'to, I. The chest. voce de p. Chest voice. di p. From the chest.

peu (pŭ), F. Little. un p. A little. p. à p. Little by little.

pezzo (pĕd'-zō), pl. i, I. A piece or number. pezzi concertanti. Concerted numbers.

pf. Abbr. of, 1. Pianoforte. 2. Poco forte.

Pfeife (pfī'-fĕ), G. 1. A fife. 2. A pipe, as of an organ. Pfeifendeckel. The covering of a pipe. P.-werk. The pipe-work. Pfei'fer. A fifer.

Phantasie (fän-tä-zē'), G. Fantasy, or fantasia. P.-bilder, P.-stücke. Fanciful pieces of no strict form. phantasieren (zē'-rĕn). To improvise. Phantasier'-maschine. A melograph. phantasi(e)rte (zēr'-tĕ). Improvised.

phil'harmon'ic. Music-loving.

philomèle (fē-lō-mĕl). Vide ZITHER.

phonas'cus, L., from Gr. Singing-teacher.

phisharmon'ica. An octagonal accordeon.

phonaut'ograph. 1. A name given first to a melograph, inv. by Abbé Moigno, a pencil fitted to a vibrating membrane. 2. An electric melograph for key-board instrs. inv. by Fenby.

phone, Gr. 1. Voice or tone. 2. Sound, a term appropriated by Dr. Th. Baker, to represent Riemann's term "clang" (q. v.), hence homophone, under phone, contro-phone, and phonic.

phonet'ics, pho'nics. The science of sounds.

pho'nikon. A metal wind-instr. with globular bell inv. by Czerveny, 1848.

phonom'eter, E., phonomètre (fôn-ō-mĕtr), F. A device for measuring vibration.

phor'minx, Gr. An ancient lyre-like instrument.

pho'tinx, Gr. An ancient crooked flute.

phrase, E. (in F. frăz, in G. frä'-zĕ). 1. A musical clause. Vide FORM. 2. A short passage or figure. phrase-mark. A long curve covering a phrase; or any musical punctuation-mark. phrasi(e)ren (zē'-rĕn), G. To phrase. phrasé (frä-zā), F., phrasing, E., Phrasierung (zē'-roongk), G. (a) The act or art of delivering music with due regard to its melodic and rhythmic punctuation, relation and contrast. (b) Signs for such phrasing.

Phrygian (frĭ'-jän), E., from Gr. phrygische (frē'-jĭsh-ĕ), G. Vide MODES.

physharmo'nica. 1. A small reed and bellows attachment to a piano key-board for sustaining and colouring tones; inv. by Häckel, Vienna, 1818; the forerunner of the harmonium. 2. A free-reed-stop.

piacere, a (ä pĭ-ä-chā'-re), a piacimen'to, I. At pleasure. piacevole (pĭ-ä-chā'-vō-lĕ), piacevolmen'te. Pleasant(ly). piacevolezza (lĕd'-zä). Suavity.

piagendo (pĭ-ä-jĕn'-dō), I. Plaintive.

piagnevole (pĭ-än-yā'-vō-lĕ), I. Sad, mournful.

pianar'tist, G. A mechanical attachment for playing the piano.

pianente (pĭ-ä-nĕn'-tĕ), I. Gently, softly. pianet'to. Very soft.

pianette (nĕt'). A small piano.

piangevole (pĭ-än-jā'-vō-lĕ), piangevolmen'te, I. Doleful(ly).

pianino (nē'-nō), I. An upright piano.

pianis'simo, I. Very soft. pianissis'simo. Extremely soft.

pianist (pĭ-än'-ĭst, not pē'-ăn-ĭst), E. A piano-player.

pianista (nē'-stä), I. 1. A pianist. 2. A mechanical piano.

pianiste (pĭ-än-ēst'), F. Pianist of either sex.

piano (pĭ-ä'nō), I. 1. Soft, softly, abbr. (p). hence piano-pedal. 2. The common form of the word pianoforte (q. v.); this shorter form is altogether used in France, and commonly elsewhere. Many terms are used to indicate sizes and forms of the piano, as the concert grand and par'lour grand or piano à queue (ä-kŭ'), the semi-grand or boudoir or p. à queue écourtée (ā-koor-tā), or baby-grand. Smaller form. The square or carré (căr-rā); p. à tavolins; the upright or cabinet, or p. à sécretaire (sā-krŭ-tăr), or droit (drwä), oblique, or à pilastres, or vertical, and still smaller sizes such as the cottage, or the piccolo, inv. by Wornum, of London, 1829. For practice there are the dumb p., or p. muet (mü), and the Virgil practice-clavier, etc. electric p. One employing electro-magnets in place of hammers. p-quatuor, or p. à archet (ä ăr-shā). Vide PIANO-VIOLIN. p. éolien. Vide AMEMOpianoforte (pĭ-ä'-nō-fôr-tĕ, or commonly pĭ-ä'-nō-fōrt), E. and I. pianoforté (fôr-tā), F.

CHORD. The p. harmon'icorde. A combination with an harmonium, inv. by Debain. the p. à claviers renversés (ä-klăv-yā rän-vĕr-sā). One with 2 key-boards, one above the other, the scale of the upper ascending from right to left. p. méchanique (mā-kă-nēk). A mechanical or automatic piano. p. organisé (ôr-gă-nĭ-zā). One with phys-harmonica attached.

Pianoforte.

By the Editor.

PIANOFORTE (in G. usually restricted to the square piano). The most used and most abused of instruments—a combination of the strings of the harp with a key-board system derived from the organ (in the 14th cent. there is mention of a "stringed instrument of the organ family: the Exaquir, Sp., Eschiquier d'Angleterre" i.e., "English chess-board," F. or Esquakiel, G.). ¶Its History is obscure and owes much possibly to the monochord and elaborations from it. In the monochord, the hurdygurdy, or organistrum, etc., a single string produced various tones by means of a movable bridge. So the early forms of the piano show a few strings serving for many digitals. The word monochord was kept even after the strings were increased in number, but was finally changed to clavichord (clavis=key) or clavier; the movable bridge was displaced by tangents which served both to divide the strings as with frets and to sound them. ¶Simultaneously with the fretted clavichord, in which each string served for several tones (as a guitar-string does) prospered a development from the dulcimer, a key-board dulcimer, or clavicymbal (from cymbal meaning dulcimer), called in France, clavecin; in Italy, clavi-cembalo or arpicordo; in England, harpsichord; in Germany, Flügel, Kielflügel, Steertstück or Schweinskopf. Small forms of this were the Virginal(s), the couched harp or spinet (from spina=quill), etc. In this variety there was a string for each tone, and the string was sharply plucked with a quill carried at the end of a wooden jack. In time the clavichord was also given a string to each tone and was now said to be "fret-free" (bundfrei) instead of "fretted" (gebunden). The tone was capable of a beautiful trembling effect (Bebung) and considerable virtuosity, but there was little possibility of shading from loud to soft. The appearance of the elaborate dulcimer the Pantaleon seems to have set the clavichordists to thinking, and Cristofori, in 1711, invented the hammer-mechanism, which he called, from its power to sound loudly or softly, piano forte, literally "loud-and-soft" (this name had been used as early as 1598). In Germany, Silbermann, the organ-builder, won Bach's approval for a Hammer-klavier of the same general idea. This idea, with many improvements in detail, but little fundamental change, persists to-day in the magnificent instrument on which great gymnasts combine brute-force with legerdemain. ¶The CONSTRUCTION of the piano of our time shows the triumph of ingenuity over a total string-tension of twelve to twenty tons. A powerful cast-iron frame, usually cast in one piece and braced with trusses and cross-bars, braces the wooden sound-board below, on which is a raised bridge of hard wood, over which are stretched the strings. The strings are of steel wire, the bass strings being covered with a finely-wound copper wire. The lowest octave of the bass has one string to each tone, the next octave or more has two strings to each tone, the rest of the instrument has three strings tuned exactly alike as unisons for each note. Some of the strings are generally carried back across the others to save space; this is called overstringing. The hammer of each tone strikes all three strings at once, except when the soft pedal by shifting lets it strike only one string (hence "tre corde" and "una corda"). ¶The ACTION of the piano consists of a key-board of finger-levers or digitals (loosely called keys), the white digitals forming the scale of C major, the black digitals furnishing the necessary semitones to give the piano (by means of temperament, q. v.) a command of all the major and minor keys—the fingering differing for each key except with the Jankó (q. v.) key-board. The pressure of a digital does not, as in the old clavichord or harpsichord, immediately affect the string, but reaches it by a complicated series of levers which bring the hammer into position for a new stroke instantly, so that a tone can, in a proper action, be repeated as rapidly as the fingers can strike the digital. (This is called the repetition or double escapement—the double échappement of Erard being the origin of the many forms of escapement.) The digital carries at the inner end a vertical pilot which supports a nearly horizontal carrier, at about a right angle to which is the rod called the hopper, which fits against the hammer by a notch or projection. As soon as the hopper has forced the hammer against the string, it slips loose from the hammer and is brought instantly back (by devices hard to describe briefly) into position so that the hammer on rebounding from the strings finds the hopper ready for an immediate new stroke. The hammer is hinged at the butt; at the other end of its shank is the hammer-shaped head with a pad of felt (or leather). The action which throws the hammer against the strings, and makes it rebound instantly, lifts away from the strings the little damper, which muffles the strings when not in use; this damper remains off the strings as long as the digital is held down. ¶By means of the damper-pedal (commonly called the "loud pedal") all the dampers may be lifted from all the strings, thus permitting sustained tones and sympathetic vibrations while the hands play other chords. Some pianos have also a sustaining as well as a piano, or soft pedal (vide PEDAL).

¶The piano has a complete chromatic scale with a compass of about seven octaves $A_{,,}$–a''''. It is capable of a rapidity and clarity of utterance of which the organ is incapable ; and no other instrument but the organ approaches its resources in chords, range, and brilliance. Except the organ, it is the only sèlf-supporting instrument ; it can furnish absorbing employment for the four hands of two performers. The chief lack is the inability to swell a sustained tone, and some method of adding this final touch of human interest will doubtless be devised in time by some of the many minds engaged upon the problem.

Piano Studies.

By James Huneker.

A CENTURY of experience in piano pedagogy has not been fruitless; skilled masters of the instrument no longer burden their pupils with futile finger exercises, and the precious morning hours instead of being devoted to mere digital tortures are now utilised for the memorising of a répertoire and the study of especial difficulties in a composition. Since Karl Tausig, the vast and useless étude literature has been sent to Limbo ; for in the music itself may be studied the precise technical difficulty to be overcome. ¶After the independence of the fingers, the scales in single and double notes, arpeggios and octaves have been thoroughly mastered, the following studies are generally employed for style, for endurance and the musical development of the scholar : Cramer—edited by Von Bülow ; Clementi —edited by Tausig ; Kessler—a judicious selection ; Kullak's octave school ; and the Chopin Etudes, opus 10 and opus 25. After these latter the studies of Liszt and Rubinstein, and Schumann's Symphonic Etudes may be essayed. Of special studies, the Toccata of Czerny, the Schumann Toccata, the Rubinstein Staccato study in C, and Thalberg's study in A minor, opus 45, repeated notes, are recommended. For beginners, Heller's studies in phrasing and later Czerny's finishing studies may be tried. But the Czerny school—with the exception of his excellent special studies for the left hand—is obsolete. ¶All the latter day writers of piano studies, Scharwenka, Moszkowski, Scriabine, Godowsky, and Joseffy, build on the Chopin-Liszt technics. For the quick grasp of the Brahms technique, study his fifty-one exercises. Isidor Philipp, taking his cue from Tausig, has given us the marrow of Chopin's technique in a volume of Daily Exercises. For pure polyphony, nothing is better than Bach. For daily gymnastics, use Tausig's studies, but in frugal manner. ¶For the rest, read all piano music from Alkan to Zaremski.

piano score. An arrangement of vocal or orchestral music for piano.

pian'ograph. A melograph, inv. by Guérin.

pianoharp. Vide KLAVIER HARFE.

piano'la. A detachable pneumatic attachment by which a piano may be played mechanically, the performer controlling the speed, the force, and, in a remarkable degree, also the expression; inv. by E. S. Votey of New York, in 1897. It has 65 felt-covered fingers brought into play by air-power forced through perforated music by treadle action.

piano-organ. Vide BARREL-ORGAN (2).

piano'tist. A mechanical attachment for playing the piano.

piano quatuor (kât-ü-ôr), F. Piano-violin.

piano-violin. A numerous group of instrs. endeavouring to combine the fulness and range of the piano with the violin's expression and power of increasing the volume of a sustained tone. In 1610 Hans Heydn of Nürnberg inv. the Gambenwerk, in which catgut strings were pressed by resined parchment rollers actuated by a wheel (other authorities say that Heydn's instr. was called Geigenwerk, and had wire strings; and that the Gambenwerk, or Klaviergamba, was inv. by Reich or Gleichmann of Ilmenau, about 1750, and had gut strings). In 1754 Hohlfeld inv. the Bogenflügel or Bogenklavier, with a horse-hair bow; von Meyer in 1794 provided each string with a bow. In 1800 Hübner devised the clavecin harmonique, which Pouleau developed into the orchestrin. Other instrs. of the same general idea were the gambe-clavier, inv. by Le Voirs, Paris, 1741; the Bogenklavier of Garbrecht, Königsberg, 1710; the Xänorphika of Röllig, Vienna, 1797; the Bogenhammer-klavier, of Karl Greiner, 1779; the harmonichord of Kaufman, 1785; the piano-violino, 1837. The most successful is the piano-quatuor or piano-violin, inv. 1865 by H. C. Baudin, of Paris, consisting of thick single strings to each of which is attached at a nodal point a projecting piece of stiff catgut, which on the pressure of the key, is brought in contact with a linen roller turned by pedals, the communicated vibration causing the string to sound; the general principle of these instrs. resembles that of the hurdygurdy.

pian piano (pĭ-än' pĭ-ä'-nō), I. Very softly.

piatti (pĭ-ät'-tē), I., pl. Cymbals.

pib (pēb), pibcorn. A Welsh pipe.

pibroch (pē'-brôkh), Scotch. A warlike composition for the bagpipes, consisting of three or four variations on a theme called the urlar; they are of increasing speed and close with a quick movement called the creanluidh.

piccanteria (pĭk-kän-tĕr-ē'-ä), I. Piquancy.

picchetta'to, or picchiettato (pĭk-kĭ-ĕt-tä'-tō), I. Staccato, in violin playing made with a bounding bow, and indicated by slur over dots.

picciolo (pĭt-chō'-lō), I. Small.

piccolo (pĭk'-kō-lō), I. 1. Small. Vide PIANO. 2. The octave flute (q. v.). 3. A 2-ft. stop. piccolino (lē'-no). Very small.

pic'co, picco pipe. A small whistle with 3 holes; it was named after a blind Sardinian peasant who played it in London (1856) with great brilliancy, securing a compass of 3 octaves.

pick. 1. A plectrum. 2. To pluck (of strings).

Pic'kelflöte, G. The octave flute.

piece. 1. A composition. 2. An instrument (generally used in pl.).

pièce (pĭ-ĕs'), F. 1. A piece; a composition. 2. An opera, or dramatic work. suite de pièces (swēt dŭ pĭ-ĕs). A set of pieces.

pieno (pĭ-ā'-nō), I. Full. p. coro, or p. organo. Full chorus, or full organ. pienamen'te. Fully.

pied (pĭ-ā′), F. Foot. avec les pieds (lā pĭ-ā). With the feet (on an organ).

pietà (pĭ-ā-tä′), I. Pity. pieto′so, pietosamen te. Tender(ly).

pierced gamba. Keraulophon.

pifara (pī-fä′-rä), I. A fife.

pifferare (rä′-rĕ), I. To play the fife. piffero. 1. A fife. 2. A primitive oboe. 3. A stop, the bifara. piffera′ro. A player on the fife.

pikieren (pĭ-kē′-rĕn), G. Vide PIQUER.

pilea′ta, L. "Capped" (of a covered pipe).

pincé (păṅ-sā), or pincement (păṅs-măṅ), F. "Pinched." 1. Plucked (as strings). 2. Pizzicato. 3. A mordent. p. étouffé. Acciaccatura. p. renversé. Inverted mordent. instruments à cordes pincées. Instrs. to be plucked, as guitar, etc., hence pincer (păṅ-sā). To play such an instrument. pincé bemolisé (or diésé). Trill with a flattened (or sharpened) note.

pipe. A tone-producing tube of reed, wood or metal. 1. One of the earliest musical-instrs., a simple straw. 2. The tone-producing tubes of an organ. (a) flue-pipe, or lip-pipe. One in which the column of air produces tone by being forced through a small opening with a sharp edge. The lip-pipe may be compared to a great flute standing on end (the flute is in fact a lip-pipe). The foot rests on the pipe-rack; the lower part of the body is the throat; just above it is an opening called the mouth, with an upper and lower lip; the upper lip is bevelled to an edge called the leaf. An ear projects on each side of the mouth; inside the mouth is a projection called the block (if it is very thin it is called the language). The passage between lower lip and block is the windway; through this the air is driven againt the leaf, which, vibrating, produces a tone from the air column that fills the upper part or body of the pipe. flue-pipes may be open at the top, or covered (stopped or plugged), the stopped-p. sounding an octave lower than the same pipe open. flue-pipes are tuned, or voiced, if metal, by flaps at the top called tuners; if wood, by small adjustable boards. (b) reed-pipe. One depending upon a reed for its tone, the body governing the quality of the tone only. The lowest part of the reed-p. is the boot; it contains a sheet of metal called the block, which contains two apertures, one holding an adjustable tuning-wire, the other a reed, or conical tube (called a shallot) with an opening giving play to a vibrating tongue. 3. bent-pipe. A rectangular bent tube connecting the bellows with the wind-trunk; also a secondary channel from the wind-chest to the wind-trunk. Speaking pipes may be bent without altering their tone, to fit them into smaller space. pipe-metal. That of which organ-pipes are made, usually an alloy of lead and tin.

pipe-organ. Vide ORGAN.

pique (pēk), F. Peg of a 'cello.

piqué (pē-kā′), F. Same as picchietato. piquer (pē-kā), F., piquiren (pē-kē′-rĕn), G. To play in such a manner.

pirolino (pē-rō-lē′-nō), I. Button.

piston(s). Vide VALVE and CORNET-À-PISTONS. piston-solo, G. Solo for cornet-à-pistons.

pitch. The height or depth of a tone relatively to others, or its absolute position on the complete scale adopted as the standard and divided into octaves definitely named (see the CHART OF PITCH). The vibration-number of a tone also gives it an absolute pitch according to the particular pitch accepted as the standard. The opinion of the civilised races, with the chief exception of England, has settled on the International (low or French) pitch adopted in France in 1859, and at the Vienna Congress in 1887. This gives the tone a′ 435 vibrations a second and c″ 522 vibrations. An older pitch was the classical or mean pitch, in which a' lay between 415 and 429 vibrations (apparently about the same as the most ancient standards). The desire to secure a more and more brilliant tone led instrument-makers to raise the pitch to outrageous heights. A congress of physicists adopted in 1834 the Stuttgart Pitch with a' at 440. The high or concert or English pitch gives a' about 450, which is a severe and needless strain and distortion. For convenience of calculation a theoretical middle c' has been given 256 vibrations, the number being a high power of 2; this so-called philosophical pitch gives a' about 427 vibrations.

The subject of Pitch-relationships is too abstruse for explanation here—though important in the tuning and temperament of instruments. The old Pythagorean theorists did not consider the third (as c to e) to be a legitimate interval; they reached it by four steps of a fifth (ignoring octaves) thus, c–g, g–d, d–a, a–e. This gives it the ratio of 64 : 81. But we now accept both the third and the fifth as intervals, and the ratio of a third is 4 : 5, or in larger terms 64 : 80. The note e may then be considered a quint-tone if reached by steps of a fifth; or a tierce-tone if reached by a step of a third. But 64 : 80 differs from 64 : 81 by the ratio of 80 : 81, which is called the comma syntonum. Starting from c' any tone may be reached by quint or tierce steps up or down. Every tierce step up is $\frac{80}{81}$ less than a quint step and the letter name of a tone reached by a tierce step may be marked with a line under it for every tierce step upward, or a line over it for every tierce step downward, required to reach it. These lines therefore indicate the number of commas by which it is lower or higher than the same tone reached by quint steps.

Relative pitches may also be expressed in (a) fractions showing the relative string lengths required to produce them; (b) in decimals showing relative vibrations; and (c) in logarithms showing comparatively the interval-ratios.

pitch-fork. A tuning-fork.

pitch-pipe. Small reed-pipe of fixed pitch.

più (pē-oo'), I. More; as p. mosso. More speed; più tosto. Rather, as p. t. allegro. Rather faster.

piva (pē'-vä), I. 1. A bag-pipe. 2. A composition in bag-pipe manner.

pizzican'do, pizzicato (pĭd-zĭ-kä'-tō), I. "Pinched," indicating that the strings are not to be bowed, but plucked with the fingers.

placido (plä'-chē-dō), placidamen'te, I. Placid(ly).

placito (plä'-chē-tō), I. Pleasure. A bene p. At pleasure, same as ad libitum.

pla'gal, E., pla'galis, L., plagalisch (plä-gä'-lĭsh), G. Used of those modes accessory to the authentic (vide MODES), and formed from them by taking the fourth below as the new tonic. Vide also CADENCE.

plagiau'los, Gr. Cross-flute.

plain-chant (in French pron. plăñ-shäñ), plain-song. The old Gregorian Church-music, so-called from its smooth progress in notes of equal length. It employs 8 modes (q. v.), and is written on four-line staves, employing 3 notes, the long, the breve and semibreve, and two clefs. It is still employed in the R. C. cantillation of priests at the altar, and is the basis of the Episcopal Church service.

plainte (plăñt), F. A lament. plaintif (plăñ-tēf). Plaintive.

plaisant (plĕz-äñ), F. Pleasant.

plaisanterie (plĕz-än-tŭ-rē), F., pleas'anterie. A cheerful harpsichord piece.

plana (plä'-nä), L. and I. Plain. musica p. plain=chant.

planchette (plăñ-shĕt), F. 1. A mechanical piano. 2. A part of its mechanism, a board fitted with pegs.

planta'tion. The manner in which the pipes of a stop are arranged on the sound-board.

planx'ty. Literally, "lament," though sometimes applied to lively melodies used by Welsh harpers.

plaqué (plă-kā), F. Played simultaneously (as a chord); opposed to "broken."

plec'toral, plec'tron, plec'trum. A small bit of ivory, metal or shell for plucking the strings of mandolins, etc.

plec'traphone. A piano attachment imitating the mandolin.

play-house tune. Old name for entr'act music.

plein-jeu (plăn-zhŭ), F. 1. Full-organ. 2. A mixture-stop.

ple'no orga'no, L. Full-organ.

plet'tro, I. 1. Bow. 2. Plectrum.

pli'ca, L. "Fold." A neume, used as a concluding ornament, indicated by a stroke up or down on the last note of a ligature.

plu'res ex u'na, L. "Many from one." Old name for canon.

plus (plü), F. More.

pneuma (nū'-mä), Gr. "Breath." 1. Neume. 2. The exhausting vocalisation of the closing syllable of the early Christian Alleluia. 3. A jubilation.

pneumat'ic. 1. Used of all wind-instrs. 2. p. action, or lever. A bellows attachment for lightening the touch of an organ, inv. 1832, by Barker. 3. p. organ. The modern wind-organ, so called originally in distinction to the hydraulic.

pocetta (pō-chet'-tä), I., poche (pôsh), pochette (pŏ-shĕt'), F. Pocket-fiddle.

pochessimo (pō-kĕs'-sĭ-mō), I. As little as possible. pochettino (pō-kĕt-tē'-nō), pochet'to, pochino (pō-kē'-nō), I. Just a little.

poco (pō'-kō), I. A little; rather; somewhat. poco a poco. Little by little.

poggiato (pôd-jä'-tō), I. "Leant" on, dwelt upon.

poi (pō'-ē), I. Then, afterwards, as piano poi forte. Soft then loud. poi segue, then follows; poi a poi. By degrees.

point. 1. Old name for note. Vide NOTATION. 2. A dot. 3. Staccato-mark. 4. Head of a bow. 5. The entrance of an important theme. 6. To divide words for chanting, hence pointing. 7. organ-point. Vide PEDAL-POINT. 8. Vide SIGNS. (In French pronounced pwăn.) A dot. p. détaché (dā-tă-shā). It usually aims to present a suggestion (rarely in decent music an imitation) of some music of nature as a brook, bird-improvisations, forest-sounds, or of some narrative, though its main effort is to deploy the emotions arising from such scenes and thoughts. Beethoven's ideal is expressed in his famous characterisation of his Pastoral Symphony as mehr Ausdruck als Malerei, "more an expression than a painting." So long as the "descriptive" element is a mere suggestion, music is capable of most felicitous hints, and programme-music has most ancient and venerable—authority, traceable farther back even than Bach (who wrote a musical suggestion of a postilion), to Jannequin, and others. When programme-music stoops to imitation direct it either grows ludicrously incompetent or ceases to be music and becomes noise.

programmist. A devotee of programme-music.

progrès (prō-grĕ), F. Progression.

progres'sion, E., progressione (sĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. 1. melodic progression. The advance of the melody from one tone to another. 2. harmonic p. The advance of the harmony from one chord to another. These two processes, particularly the latter, are hedged round with continual difficulties and restrictions, some of them based on human nature and acoustics, others deriving no sustenance from either, but depending for their existence in the text-books entirely on tradition, history, conservatism, fashion, or a sense of hearing rendered artificial by long pedantry. The science of progressions constitutes the greater part of the Theory of Music, and of harmony and counterpoint (q. v.).

progres'sio harmo'nica, I. A mixture-stop.

Progressions-schweller (prō-grĕs-sĭ-ōns'-shvĕl-lĕr), G. A device inv. by Abbé Vogler, for gradually calling in play, then gradually closing off, the stops of an organ, to produce a crescendo, then a diminuendo.

quintet′, E., Quintett′, G., quintette (kwēn-tĕt), F., quinta′to, I. A five-part composition.

Quintole (in E. quĭn′-tōl; in G. kvēn-tō′-lĕ). Quintuplet.

quinton (kwēn-tôn), F. 1. The 5-stringed treble viol. 2. The tenor viol.

quintuor (kwēn-tü-ôr), F. Quintet.

quintu′plum, L. Vide TRIPLUM.

quin′tuple. Five-fold.

quin′tuplet. A group of five equal notes.

quin′tus, L., or quin′ta. A fifth part in compositions; as it occasionally wandered from one voice to another it was called q. vagans.

quinzième (kăñz-yĕm), F. Fifteenth.

quire. Choir. qui′rister. Chorister.

quodlibet, or quotlibet, L. "What (or "as many as") you please." 1. A comic medley, without connecting links. 2. A charivari.

Qui tollis, L. "Who takest away (the sins of the world)." Vide GLORIA.

quitter (kĭt-tā), F. To leave.

Quo′niam tu so′lus, L. "For Thou only (art Holy)." Part of the Gloria.

R

R Abbr. for 1. Right, as r. h., right hand. 2. Responsorium (r. g.=r. Graduale) in Catholic music. 3. Ripieno. 4. Clavier de récit (swell-manual). In organ music.

raban′, raban′na. Hindu tambourine.

rabbia (räb-bē′-ä). Mad rage, fury.

rabé (rä-bā′), rabel′, Sp. Rebec.

raccontan′do, I. As if relating or describing.

Rackett′, Rankett′, G. 1. An obsolete bombard with many curves in its tube, and a weak voice. Made in five sizes, it was simplified as the R. fagott by Denner. 2. A reed-stop, obsolete.

raccourcir (răk-koor-sēr′), F. To abridge.

racler (ră-klā′), F. To saw, and scratch, hence racleur (ră-klŭr). A bad fiddler.

raddolcen′do, raddolcente (räd-dôl-chĕn′-tĕ). Growing softer and sweeter. raddolcito (chē′-tō). Pacified.

raddoppiamen′to, I. 1. Doubling, as the notes of a chord. 2. Multiplying copies. raddoppiato (pĭ-ä′-tō). Doubled.

Radel (rä′-dĕl), G. A solo with chorus.

radia′ting. Used of a fan-shaped pedal key-board.

rad′ical. Fundamental. Vide CADENCE.

Radleier (rät′-lī-ĕr), G. Hurdygurdy.

Radlmaschine (rätl-mä-shē′-nĕ). Valve mechanism.

rag. The clog dance of the American negro, perhaps related to the Spanish verb raer, to scrape. The music has some resemblance to the Abanera in spirit and syncopation, but is in 4-4 time and of an hilarious character, hence the verb to rag, and rag-time music in this style.

raggione (räd-jō′-nĕ), I. Proportion.

rago′ke. Small Russian horn.

rake. A 5-pointed device for ruling off staves.

rall. Abbr. of rallentando.

rallentare (tä′-rĕ). To become slower, hence rallentan′do (abbr. rall). With gradually reduced speed. rallentamen′to. Retardation. rallentato (tä′-tō). Retarded. rallenta′te. Retard!

rang (räṅ), F. Rank.

range. Compass, as of a voice.

rank. A row of pipes belonging to one stop.

rant. An old country-dance; a reel.

ranz des vaches (räṅ-dā-väsh), F. "Calling of the cows." A Swiss tune sung or played on long horns by herdsmen.

rapido (rä′-pē-dō), rapidamen′te, I. Rapid(ly). rapidità (rä-pē-dĭ-tä′). Rapidity.

rapsodie (răp-sō-dē), F. Rhapsody.

rappel′, F. A military call.

rasch (räsh), G. Fast. rascher. Faster.

rasend (rä′-zĕnt), G. Raging, hence Rasegesang, and Raselied (rä′-zĕ-lēt). Dithyramb.

rasgado (răs-gă′-dhō), Sp. "Scraping," hence in guitar playing, sweeping the strings with the thumb to produce an arpeggio.

rast′ral, ras′trum. Vide RAKE.

Räthselkanon (rāt′-zĕl-kä-nōn), G. Vide CANON.

ra′tio. Used of the relative value of vibration-numbers.

rattenen′do, rattenuto (noo′-tō), I. Restraining, or restrained, i. e., retarded.

rattezza (rät-tĕd′-zä), I. Speed.

rauco (rä′-oo-kō), I., rauh (rŏw), G., rauque (rōk), F. Harsh, hoarse, rough. raucedine (rä-oo-chĕ-dē′-nĕ), I. Harshness.

Rauscher (row′-shĕr), G. The rapid repetition of a note.

rausch- (rowsh), G. Prefix denoting a stop of 2 ranks sounding the twelfth and fifteenth, or fifteenth and octave twelfth; hence Rauschflöte, -pfeife, -quinte, -werk; and also Ruszpipe (roos′-pē-pē).

ravanas′tron. A primitive violin with one or two strings, claimed by the Ceylonese as the invention of a king who reigned about 5000 B.C. It is still used by the Buddhists.

rav(v)ivare (vä′-rĕ), I. To accelerate, hence, ravivan′do. Accelerating. ravivato (vä′-tō). Accelerated.

ray. Name for re, in the Tonic-Sol-fa.

re (rā), I., ré (rā), F. 1. Vide SOLMISATION. 2. In France and Italy, the note D.

rebab, Arab. Rebec.

re′bec(k), rebec′ca, re′bet, rebed, rebibe, re′bible. Old E. An early violin with 3 gut-strings. Its origin has been credited to the Moors, who are said to have brought it into Spain; it has been claimed that the Spanish gave it to the Moors; it has been also derived from the British Chrotta, or crwth.

re′al. Vide FUGUE.

récension (rā-săṅs-yôṅ), F. An analytical editing.

rechange (rŭ-shäṅzh). "Change." Hence, corps (kôr) or tons (tôṅ) de r. Crooks.

recheat′. A hunting recall.

récit (rā-sē), F. 1. Recitative. 2. A solo part. 3. The chief of several parts. clavier de r. (klăv-yā dŭ). Swell manual on the organ.

recitado (rā-thē-tä′-dhō), Sp. Recitative.

reci′tal. A musical performance given entirely by one performer, or from one composer's works. Said to have been initiated by Liszt in 1840.

recitan′do, recitan′te, recitato (rā-chē-tä′-tō). In recitative style.

récitant (rā-sē-täṅ), Recitante (rā′-tsē-tänt), F. A man (or woman) soloist.

recitative (rĕs-ĭ-tä-tēv′), E., recitatif (rā-sē-tä-tēf′), F., Recitativ (rā-tsē-tä-tēf′), G., recitativo (rā-chē-tä-tē′-vō), I. Musical declamation or recitation, as opposed to strict melody. It usually aims to be a sort of musical colloquialism. In modern form it began in the first operatic works of Peri (vide B.D.), and the others; it was more or less a sing-song declamation with an accompaniment consisting of occasional chords to keep the singer on the key; it was well-called "dry," or recitativo secco, or parlante, and the accompaniment was indicated merely by figured bass. This accompaniment was gradually elaborated into the recitativo stromentato. "Instrumented," or accompagnato, or con accompagnamento or obbligato (in F. accompagné, or obligé). In later opera, particularly Wagner's, the whole musical structure is inclined to be in recitative with a descriptive and complicated orchestral background. Recitative is usually delivered at the singer's pleasure except when specially marked a tempo.

réciter (rā-sē-tā), F. To perform a récit, or solo.

reci'ting note. That tone of a church-mode on which most of the chanting is done, usually the dominant.

rec'ord. Old E. To play the record'er. An obsolete flageolet with 9 holes, one of them covered with gold beater's skin, compass 2 octaves f'–f'''.

recreation, récréation (rā-krā-ăs-yôn̆), F. A light composition.

rec'te et re'tro, L. Forward and backward. Vide CANON.

rec'tus, L. Similar (of motion).

reddi'ta, redita (rā-dē'-tä), I., redite (rŭ-dēt), F. A repeat.

redondilla (rā-dôn-dēl'-yä), Sp. Roundelay.

redoub'led. Compound (of an interval).

redoublement (rŭ-doob-lŭ-măn̆), F. Doubling.

red'owa, redowak', redowazka (rā-dō-väts'-kä), Bohemian. A dance in lively 3-4 time; in the Bohemian form 2-4 time is also employed.

redublicato (rā'-doob-lĭ-kä'-tō), I. Redoubled.

reduciren, reduziren (rā-doo-tsē'-rĕn), G., réduire (rā-dwēr), F. To arrange or transcribe a composition in a smaller form. Hence, such condensation is called reduction, E., réduction (rā-dŭks-yôn̆), F., Reduktion (rĕ-dook'-tsĭ-ōn), G., riduzione (re-doo-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I.

reduc'tio, L. Reduction (of a mode to its original key).

red-note. Vide NOTATION.

reed. Originally a thin and elastic strip of cane, now made of other fibres and of metal. It is fixed in an opening by one end; its free end is set in motion by the breath or by a current of air, and transmits this vibration with musical effect to the column of air in the main tube, to which it serves as a sort of quivering valve. The human larynx has a membranous reed, and the lips of horn-players serve the same purpose, the tone being determined by the tension of the lips and the length of the instrument. Vide EMBOUCHURE. free-reeds vibrate without striking the edges of their sockets. Those which strike the edges are called beating (impinging, percussion, or striking) reeds. They are used in the organ for brass effects. Some instrs., as the oboe and bassoon, have 2 reeds which strike each other, and are called double. Reeds are usually tuned by a sliding wire by which the vibrating portion is shortened or lengthened.

reed-instruments. A general name for those employing the reed mechanism, particularly the oboe and clarinet groups of the orchestra.

reed-pipe, r. stop, r. work. Refer to the pipes and stops of an organ which employ reeds.

reed-organ. Originally, a small portable organ called the regal, or a pair of regals (if it had 2 pipes for each digital). This small instr. which could sometimes be folded up like a book or Bible [hence Bibel-regall (bē'-bĕl-rā'-gäl)], employed beating reeds, in the pipes. In 1810 Grénié inv. what he called the orgue expressif, because he could swell and diminish the tone. In 1843, Debain developed the Harmonium, which possessed several stops. The air pressure is usually applied by pedals worked by treadles; with levers, worked by the knees, to produce a swell. The American Organ (q. v.) employed a suction mechanism. The Vocalion returns to the harmonium style with elaborate improvements. There are many other instrs. which differ chiefly in name from the typical reed-organ.

reel. A lively dance usually in 4-4 (sometimes 6-8) time, perhaps of Scandinavian origin, but chiefly popular in Scotland. It is danced by 2 couples. The Virginia reel of America is danced by 2 long facing lines, the men on one side, and the women on the other.

refrain'. A burden, or stanza, repeated at the end of each new stanza of a song.

Re'gal (in G. rā'-găl), régale (rā-găl), F. 1. Vide REED-ORGAN. 2. An old suffix indicating a reed-stop. 3. An obsolete xylophone.

Regel (rā'-gĕl), G. Rule.

re'genschori, L. Choirmaster.

Regi'na cœ'li, L. "Queen of Heaven." A hymn to the Virgin.

Register (rĕj'-ĭs-tĕr in E.; in G. rā-jĕs'-tĕr). 1. The handle or draw-knob which bears the name of a stop. Hence, 2. A complete stop, or the set of pipes controlled by a single draw-knob. Accordingly registering and registration are the act or art of bringing into play and combination the different stops of an organ. Regis'ter-knopf (knôpf), G. Draw-knob. R.-stange (shtäng-ĕ). Stop-lever. R.-zug (tsookh). The mechanism of the draw-stop. Speaking stops (R.-stimmen, or tönende R.) are distinguished from mechanical stops. stumme (shtoom'-mĕ) R. 3. A frame through which trackers run. 4. A distinct section of the tone-quality of a voice or instr. Vide VOICE.

registre (rŭ-zhēst'r), F., registro (rā-jĕs'-trō), I. 1. A stop-knob. 2. Vide REGISTER (4).

registri(e)ren (rā-jĕs-trē'-rĕn), G. To register. Registri(e)ung (trē'-roongk). Registration.

règle (rĕgl), F., regola (rā'-gō-lä), I. Rule.

reg'ula, L. 1. Register. 2. Rule.

reg'ular. 1. Strict (of fugue). 2. Similar (of motion).

regula'tion. Adjustment of touch.

Reigen (rī'-gĕn), or Reihen (rī'-ĕn), G. A circular dance.

rein (rīn), G. Pure, perfect (of intervals), exact, hence reingreifen (grī-fĕn). To play accurately.

Reiselied (rī'-zĕ-lēt), G. Traveller's or pilgrim's song.

Reitertrompete (rī'-tĕr-trôm-pā'-tĕ), G. A clarion, obsolete straight trumpet 30 inches long.

rela'ted. Vide RELATION.

rela'tion (in F. rŭ-lăs-yôn), rela'tio, L., relazione (rā-läts-ĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. The affinity of keys based upon the similarity or identity of certain chords. Upon key-relationship the whole subject of harmony and modern counterpoint is largely based, and upon this split hair more great theorists jostle than there were angels dancing upon the needle-point of the old monkish dogmatists. In a liberal sense all keys are closely related. For purposes of distinction those keys are said to be related (attendant, accessory, or auxiliary) which have one or more chords in common. The most nearly related (or least remote) keys to any key are those founded on its dominant and subdominant (as the keys of G and F are most nearly related to the key of C), also the absolute and relative major and minor (as c minor is the absolute minor of C major while the relative minor to C major is a minor, which has the same signature). false-relation, or rela'tio non harmon'ica. Vide FALSE.

rel'ative key, E., mode-relatif (môd-rŭl-ä-tēf'), F., tono relativo (tē'-vō), I. 1. The relative key to a major is the minor key whose tonic is a minor third below. The relative major of a minor key has its tonic a minor third above. Vide RELATION.

religio'so (rā-lē-jĭ-ō'-sō), I., religiosamen'te. Solemn(ly), devout(ly).

rel'ish. An old grace (q. v.).

remote'. Unrelated. Vide RELATION.

remo'tus,-a, L. Remote; open (as harmony).

remplissage (räṅ-plĭs-säzh), F. 1. "Filling," as the inner parts of a harmony. 2. Padding. 3. Cadenzas, and bravura passages.

rentrée (räṅ-trā), F. Re-entrance (of a part).

renverser (räṅ-vĕr-sā), F. To invert, hence renversé (răṅ-vĕr-sā). Inverted. renversement (vĕrs-măṅ). Inversion.

renvoi (räṅ-vwä), F. A repeat; a sign of repetition.

repeat. A sign indicating the repetition of certain measures—marked by two or more dots in the spaces between the lines, before (or after) the double bar, which indicates the end (or beginning) of the portion to be repeated.

repeating. 1. Of action in which the hammer rebounds quickly enough to permit a rapid reiteration of the tone. 2. Of mixed stops whose overtones do not keep always the same height above the pitch, but sound an octave lower, as the pitch rises.

repercus'sa (vox), L. A "repeated tone." 1. In neumes the notes called bi-, di-, or tri. 2. In Gregorian music, the principal note of a mode.

repercus'sion, repercus'sio, L. 1. Repetition, of a chord or note. 2. The reappearance of the subject of the fugue after the exposition. 3. The dominant of a church-mode.

repeti(e)ren (rā-pā-tē'-rĕn), G. 1. Vide to BREAK (3). Hence repeti(e)rende Stimme. A mixture-stop with a break. 2. To repeat.

Repeti'tion (in G. rā-pā-tē'-tsĭ-ōn). 1. The rapid repeating of a note or chord. 2. (In G. Repetions'mecha'nik). Vide REPEATING (1). 3. Vide BREAK (3).

répétition (rā-pā-tēs-yôṅ), F. 1. Rehearsal. 2. Repetition.

répétiteur (rā'-pā'-tē-tŭr'), F., repetitore (rā-pā-tē-tō'-rĕ), I. Trainer of an opera chorus; the rehearser.

repetizione (rā-pā-tē-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), repetimen'to, I. Repetition.

replica (rā'-plē-kä), I. A repeat; repetition, hence replicato (kä'-tō). Repeated; doubled.

rep'licate. The octave of a tone.

Replik (rā-plēk'). Complementary interval.

réplique (rā-plēk), F. 1. The octave of a tone. 2. The answer of a fugue. 3. Complementary interval. 4. Cue.

reply. Answer (of a fugue).

répons (rā-pôṅ), F. Response (1).

réponse (rā-pôṅs), F. Answer.

report. Answer.

repos (rŭ-pō), F. Point of repose, following a cadence.

reprise (rē-prīz'), E. The reappearance of the first theme of a sonata or symphony after the development.

reprise (rŭ-prēz), F. 1. Repetition. 2. Vide REPRISE. 3. Reappearance of a theme. 4. Vide BREAK (3). 5. Revival of a work.

reprendre (rŭ-präṅdr), F. To resume.

Requiem (rā'-kwĭ-ĕm), L. The first word and title of the Mass for the Dead (missa pro defunctis). Beginning "Requiem æternam dona eis, domine" "rest eternal, grant them, Lord." The requiem is divided into the introit, kyrie, gradual (with tractus, "Absolve," and sequence "dies iræ"). Offertory, "Domine Jesu Christe"; Sanctus, and Benedictus; Agnus Dei; and Communion "Lux æterna." research'. An improvisation used as a prelude to a composition and made up of its chief theme.

res'ervoir. The portion of a bellows in which wind is stored.

resin (rĕz'-ĭn). A refined gum applied to the hair of the bow to improve its grip on the strings.

resolu'tion, résolution (rā-zō-lüs-yôṅ), F., resolu'tio, L., resoluzione (rā-zō-loo-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. 1. Firmness, determination. 2. The dissolving of dissonance into concord; the satisfaction of the mental demand for that partial repose found only in consonance. Dissonant tones are generally resolved by progressing half a tone or a whole tone down or up.

res'onance, E., Resonanz (rā-zō-nänts'), G. The sympathetic response of a vibrating body to its own particular tone or tones, under the impulsion of vibrations received from another vibrating body sounding the same tone or tones. Thus if one sounds the note a' on a violin, a tuning fork of the same pitch will give forth the same tone spontaneously, as also will a piano with the damper pedal down; a pane of glass or a loose plate of metal of the proper nature will also reply; furthermore each partial tone will be affected similarly. This acoustic fact is used for the reinforcing of tones; as cavities of air and sheets of wood have this same property of resonance to all the tones and partials which they themselves contain. The violin, etc., employ a hollow space called the resonance box, or Resonanzkasten, G. Certain old instrs. used a sympathetic string or Resonanzsaite, G. The piano, etc., use a resonance board, or sound-board, Resonanz'boden, G.

respiro (rā-spē'-rô), I. "A breath"; a sixteenth rest.

respond'. A psalm (or part of one) sung between lessons at canonical hours.

response', E., respon'sum, L., responsio'ne, respon'so, I. 1. The reply of choir or congregation to a phrase read or chanted by a priest or officiant, in R. C. and Episcopal churches. 2. Responsory. 3. The answer in fugue.

respon'sory, E., responso'rium, L. 1. The psalm or portion of one sung between Missal lessons. 2. The graduale. 3. A respond.

responsivo (rā-spôn-sē'-vō), I. Responsive(ly).

resserrement (rŭs-sĕr-mäṅ), F. Stretto.

ressort (rŭs-sôr'), F. Bass-bar.

rest. 1. A period of rhythmic silence, the tempo continuing to be counted passively. 2. A symbol indicating such rest. The rests are usually named according to the portion of a measure they occupy, as 16th rest; sometimes being called after the note which has the same duration, as quarter-note rest, breve rest. They may be augmented by dots and may extend beyond the limits of one measure, as the four-measure rest. Vide SIGNS AND SYMBOLS. large-rest, long-rest. Vide NOTATION.

restric'tio, L. Stretto.

result'ant. Used of secondary tones formed by the combined vibration of two independent tones. Vide ACOUSTICS. When sounded together they produce a difference tone or differential tone whose vibration equals the difference between theirs; also a summational tone whose vibration is the sum of theirs.

Resurrex'it, L. "And rose again." Part of the Credo. Vide MASS.

retard'. 1. To diminish the velocity. 2. To suspend and then resolve upwards, hence retarded progression, or retarda'tion, retarda'tio, L. 1. A suspension resolving upwards. 2. A decrease in velocity.

retraite (rŭ-trĕt'), F. Retreat, tattoo.

ret'ro, L. Backwards. Vide CANON.

ret'rograde, retrogra'dus, L., retrogrado (rā-trō-grä'-dō), I. Vide IMITATION.

ret'to, I. Direct, similar. Vide MOTION.

réveil (rā-vĕ'), F., reveille (rŭ-vā'-yŭ, in E. rĕ-vĕl'-yĕ. In the American army rĕv-ĕ-lē', in G. rā-fīl'-lĕ). "Awakening," the first morning military signal. In old E. reveil', or revel'ly.

rev'erie. A contemplative composition.

reversed. Contrary (of motion). rever'sion. Retrograde imitation. revoice. To tune an organ-pipe. rf., rfz. Abbr. for Rinforzando.
r. h. Abbr. for right hand.
rhapsodie (răp-sō-dē'), F. and G., rhap'sody, E. "A song of patches." In ancient music a fragment of an epic poem, sung by a minstrel or rhapsode, or rhapsodist. In modern music a brilliant composition which combines the idea of a medley with the acquired idea of great joy or ecstasy. rhythm, E., rhyth'mus, L. (in G. rēt'-moos), rhythme (rēdhm), F. The "flow" and undulation of progression, marked by the rise and fall of stress and duration. The arrangement of accented and unaccented, and of long and short sounds. Rhythm usually follows some pattern which is repeated with more or less variation through an entire movement or composition. Rhythm might be called the melody of monotone. It is distinct from melodic or harmonic progression, and can be vividly shown on such an instr. as the drum, and it can be written on a single line without reference to pitch. The rhythm sometimes is so complicated that it is not completed in less than a musical period, vide FORM; but it is usually based upon a fundamental series of pulsations that can be expressed within the limits of three or four or nine beats. These are accordingly taken as a unit and grouped within the limits of a measure, and cut off by two bars; the first bar being placed before the strongest accent of the group, the second after the weakest. Time may be expressed by the regular swing of a bâton; rhythm embellishes this bâton pulsation, and usually coincides with it in accentuation, except in a syncopated rhythm. rhythmique (rēdh-mēk), F., rhythmisch (rēt'-mĭsh), G. Rhythmical. ribattuta (rē-bät-too'-tä), I. "Restriking." The slow beginning of a trill. ribe'ba, ribeca (rē-bä'-kä), I. Rebeck. ribbechino (kē'-nō). Small Rebeck. ribs. The sides connecting back and belly of violins, etc.
ricerca're, ricercata (rē-chĕr-kä'-tä), I., ricercar (rē-tsĕr-kär'), G. "Searched out," cf. récherché. Used of compositions or passages, usually of fugal form, and employing all the resources and learning of the composer. Vide FUGUE.
richiamare (rē-kĭ-ä-mä'-rĕ), I. To imitate the Richia'mo or bird-call. ricordanza (rē-kôr-dän'-tsä), I. Recollection. riddo'ne, I. A roundelay. ridevolmente (rē-dā'-vōl-mĕn'-tĕ), I. Laughingly. ridicolosamen'te, I. Ridiculously. rid'dle-canon. Vide CANON. ridot'to, I. 1. Reduced (cf. reduciren). 2. A reduction. riduzione (rē-doo-tsĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. Arrangement, reduction.
Riesenharfe (rē'-zĕn-här-fĕ), G. Æolian harp. rifiormento (rē-fĭ-ôr-mĕn'-tō), I. Ornament. riga (rē'-gä), I. Staff. rigabel'lo, I., rigabel'lum, L. Regal. rigadoon', E., rigaudon, rigodon (rē-gō-dôn'), F. A lively and humorous dance of Provençal origin, and consisting of three or four reprises, the third in a lower position. The time is usually 4-4, with an uptake of a quarter note.
rigals, rigol(e)s. Regals. rigore (rē-gō'-rĕ), I. Rigour, exactness of tempo. rigoro'so. Exact. rilasciando (rē-lä-shän'-dō), I. Relaxing the speed. rilascian'te. With reduced speed. rikk. Egyptian tambourine. rilch (rĭlsh), ril'ka. Russian lute. rimett. Abbr. for rimettendo, I. Retarding. rinforzare (rĭn-fôr-tsä'-rĕ), I. To reinforce, emphasise. rinforzamen'to, rinforzo (fôr'-tsō). Reinforcement. rinforzan'do, -a'to. Suddenly emphasised and accented.

Ringelpauke (rĭng'-ĕl-pow-kĕ), G. A rattle with rings on bars.

Ringeltanz (rĭng'-ĕl-tänts), G. Circular dance.

ripercussio'ne, I. Repercussion.

ripetizione (rē-pā-tē-tsĭ-ō'-nē), ripetitura (too'-rä), I. 1. Repetition. 2. Refrain.

ripieno, pl. -i (rē-pē-ā'-nō[ē]), I. "Filling." 1. Used of a part or an instr. which merely strengthens and rounds out the harmony, as opposed to solo or concertante. 2. Used in scores to indicate the entrance of the full band. One who plays a ripieno (in G. Ripienstimme, rē-pĭ-ān-shtĭm-mĕ) is called Ripienist, or ripienis'ta. 3. A mixture-stop called ripieno di due, tre, quattro or cinque, according as it has 2, 3, 4, or 5 ranks.

ripienino (nē'-nō). 4-ft. stop.

ripigliare (rē-pēl-yä'-rĕ), ripren'dere (prĕn'-dĕ-rĕ), I. To resume, hence, ripiglan'do, riprenden'do. Resuming. ripiglio (rē-pēl'-yō). Reprise.

slur. 1. A curved line above or beneath two or more notes, which are, (a) to be played legato, (b) to be sung to one syllable, hence slurred as opposed to syllabic melody.

small octave. Vide PITCH.

smaniante (smä-nĭ-än′-tĕ), smaniato (ä′-tō), smanio′so, I. Frantic.

sminuendo (smē-noo-ĕn′-dō). Diminishing. siminuito (smē-noo-ē′-tō). Softer.

smoran′do, I. Dying away.

smorfioso (smôr-fĭ-ō′-zō), I. Affected.

smorz. Abbr. of smorzando (smôr-tsän′-dō), I. Dying away. Extinguished.

snap. Vide SCOTCH.

snare-drum. Side-drum. Vide DRUM.

snuff-box. 1. A musical box combined with a snuff-box. 2. A famous waltz written for it.

soave (sō-ä′-vĕ), soavemen′te, I. Suave(ly), sweet(ly).

sobb. Damping (on the lute).

sock′et. The round joint which holds the mouthpiece of a clarinet.

soggetto (sôd-jĕt′-tō), I. Subject, theme, motive. s. invariato (ä′-tō). The invariable subject. s. variato (vä-rĭ-ä′-tō), I. Variable subject of a counterpoint.

sognando (sōn-yän′-dō), I. Dreamy.

soh. Tonic Sol-fa, for Sol.

sol (sōl). 1. Vide SOLMISATION. 2. The note G in France and Italy.

sola (sō′-lä), I. Alone, solo.

solem′nis, L. Solemn.

solenne (sō-lĕn′-nĕ), solennemen′te, I. Solemn(ly). solennità (ĭ-tä′). Solemnity.

solfà (sōl-fä′), I. 1. Gamut; scale. 2. A bâton. 3. Time, a bat′tere la s., to beat time.

solfa, E. 1. Solmisation (q. v.). 2. Solfeggio. 3. To sing in solmisation or solfeggio. 4. Vide TONIC SOL-FA.

solfège (sŭl-fĕzh), F., solfeggio (sôl-fĕd′-jō), I. Exercise for the voice in solmisation or on one syllable. solfeggiare (sôl-fĕd-jä′-rĕ), I., solfeggi(e)ren (zôl-fĕd-jē′-rĕn), G., solfier (sŭl-fĭ-ā), F. To sing a solfeggio.

soli (sō-lē), I. 1. Plural of solo. 2. A passage played by one performer to each part.

sol′id. Of a chord not broken (q. v.).

so′list. Soloist, solo-player.

solito (sō-lē′-tō), I. Usual. al s. As usual.

sollecito (sôl-lā′-chē′-tō), I. Careful, exact.

solmisation. "The singing of the syllables do, re, sol, mi, etc." A venerable method of teaching and singing scales and intervals ascribed to Guido D'Arezzo (or Aretinus). It is a convenient crutch for those who are not going far; but must soon be discarded.

Greek music (Vide MODES) divided the complete scale into groups of four consecutive degrees or tetrachords. Guido or a disciple divided it into groups of six degrees, or hexachords. It happened that the initial syllables of the six phrases of a certain familiar hymn to St. John formed the ascending scale of one of these hexachords (the one called naturale). The device was hit upon (as an aid for weak memories) of using these syllables as names of the notes; hence the notes of this hexachord began to be called ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la. (The hymn ran as follows: "Ut queant laxis, *Re*sonare fibris *Mi*ra gestorum *Fa*muli tuorum *Sol*ve polluti *La*bii reatum, Sancte Johannes.") It was later found convenient to use these syllables for other hexachords, the ut being movable. A crude form of modulation was developed called mutation. When the modern scale came into play early in the 17th cent. it brought into use the heptachord or scale of seven degrees. A new syllable si was therefore devised and the so-called Aretinian syllables, used for singing in all the keys; ut, being always the tonic, sol, the dominant, etc. The syllables have persisted for primary use and for vocal exercises ever since. In many countries they have been since used as the definite names of the notes of the scale of C, except that the syllable do (being more easily sung) has displaced ut except in France, since its first use (perhaps by Bononcini), in 1673. This is the only change that has been accepted among the many that have been advocated, such as the bocedisation, or bodisation (bo, ce, di, ga, lo, ma, ni) of Waelraut, 1550 (Pedro d'Urenna in 1620 proposing ñi for si), and the bebisation, or labecidation (la, be, ce, de, me, fe, ge)—satirically called labisation—of Hitzler in 1628. The damenisation (da, me, ni, po, tu, la, be) of Graun, 1750, was not for solmisation but for use in place of words in vocalising.

solo (sō′-lō), I. 1. As adjective, "alone." 2. A passage or composition for a single voice or instr. violino solo may mean either "violin only"; or the solo (i. e., leading) vln. solo-organ. A manual of the organ (q. v.). solo pitch. A scordature (q. v.) used by a soloist. solo quartet. A group of four soloists; a composition for such a group; a solo with 3-part accompaniment. solo-stop. Vide STOP. The word is used in compounds of various languages, as Solo-sänger, G. Solo-singer, etc.

solomanie (sō-lō-mä-nē′). A Turkish flute, without reed.

sombrer (sôṅ-brā), F. To give a sombre, veiled tone.

somma (sôm′-mä), I. Greatest, highest, extreme.

Sommer′ophone. A bombardon-like instr. inv. by Sommer of Weimar, 1843 (also called euphonion, euphonic horn).

son (sôṅ), F., son (sōn), Sp. Sound. s. harmonique (sō-năr-mō-nēk). Harmonic.

sonabile (sō-nä′-bĭ-lĕ), sonante (nän′-tĕ), I. Sounding, sonorous.

sonare (sō-nä′-rĕ), I. To sound; to ring; to play. s. alla mente. To improvise.

sonata (sō-nä′-tā), I., Sonate (in F. sō-năt, in G. zō-nä′-tĕ). Music "sounded or played" as opposed to music sung (cantata). Originally any instrumental piece, as s. da chiesa. For church. s. da camera. For the salon. Later the term was applied to a group of three to five dance-tunes of varied rhythms. The treatment came to be less and less lyrical and more and more thematic (q. v.). Such were Bach's organ and violin sonatas. The very human Haydn added a lyric interest as contrast in the form both of counter-themes to the principal theme and of separate movements of melodious character. Mozart made no formal change but added more human interest and warmth. The sonata now consisted of 3 or 4 movements; first an allegro written on what is confusedly called the sonata-form (the editor suggests "sonata-formula" (q. v.) as a substitute term for describing the structure of this one movement, retaining the word "sonata-form" for the entire group of movements); second, a slow movement; third a minuet; fourth, a rondo, or finale on the same formula as the first movement. Beethoven substituted for the minuet a light and witty scherzo (q. v.); other composers have made other substitutions. This general group of varied movements and moods is applied to many forms, notably the symphony, the classic overture, the concerto, the string quartet, and chamber-music generally, which are hence said to be "in sonata-form." The sonata-formula, sonata-piece, or Sonatasatz (zäts), the structure of the first movement, marks the highest period of classic formalism. It is described under Form (q. v.). The word is qualified in many ways as grand, a highly elaborate form, double, for two solo instrs. A short easy composition with few movements and little development is called sonatina (sōn-ä-tē′-nä). sonatil′la, I., Sonatine (zō-nä-tē′-nĕ), G.

sonatore (to′-rĕ), feminine sonatrice (trē′-chĕ), I. A man (or woman) instrumentalist.

sonevole (sō-nā′-vo-lĕ), I. Resounding.

sonetto (sō-nĕt′-tō), I. A composition based on a poetic sonnet.

song. 1. A melody for voice. 2. Lyric piece for any instr.

song-form. A structure of 3 chief sections, (a) a first theme, (b) a contrasting second theme, (c) a return of the first theme. In poems of many stanzas, the same air is commonly used for all the stanzas regardless of changed language and emphasis. This strophic treatment is discarded by more conscientious composers for a treatment in which each stanza is individually set to music with intelligent deference to its meaning. This is the through-composed or durchkomponi(e)rt (doorkh-kôm-pō-nērt′) style.

song without words. A lyric instrumental piece.

sonnante (sôn-nänt), F. A scale of hanging steel bars struck with a hammer.

sonner (sŭn-nā), F. To sound. s. le tambour (lŭ tän-boor). To sound the drum, used of a jarring G string in the 'cello.

sonnerie (sŭn-rē), F. 1. Chime. 2. Military call.

sono (sō′-nō), I. Sound, tone.

sonomètre (sō-nō-mĕtr), F., sonome′ter. 1. A monochord inv. by Loulis to aid piano-tuners. 2. A sounding-board with two strings for acoustic experiments.

sonore (sō-nôr), F., sonoro (sō-nō′-rō), I., sonoramen′te. Sonorous(ly). sonoridad (sō-nō-rĭ-dădh′), Sp., sonorità (sō-nō-rĭ-tä′), I., sonorité (sō-nō-rĭ-tā), F. Sonority.

sonor′ophone. A form of bombardon.

sonorous (sō-nō′-rous). Capable of musical sound; sounding.

so′nus, L. Sound, tone.

so′pra, I. Over, above, upon, before. come s. As above. di s. Above. s. u′na cor′da. On one string. par′te di s. Higher part. s. dominante. The dominant. s. quinta. Upper dominant. s. to′nica. Supertonic.

soprano (sō-prä′-nō), I. (pl. -i), Sopran (zō-prän′), G. 1. The highest kind of human voice, differing from the alto in lying chiefly in the "head-register"; this voice is typically a woman's voice, but is also found in boys. It occurs naturally in some men (called falsetti, alti naturali, or tenorini), but was obtained artificially in others (called evirati, castrati), particularly in the last century when the eunuch "artificial" sopranos achieved marvellous power and agility. The soprano voice has an average range from c′–a″ (Vide PITCH), the tones from f′ up being head-tones. The voice occasionally reaches lower, and often higher than this normal range, c‴, being not unusual. A voice that reaches f‴ or g‴ is phenomenal (Agujari sang c‴″ three octaves above mid-C). (Vide also mezzo-soprano.) Soprano voices are divided into the more powerful or dramatic (drammat′ico), and the flexible, and light or lyric leggiero (lĕd-jā′-rō) or légier (lā-zhā). 2. The part sung by the highest voice or the highest instrument. 3. The instr. which is the highest of its class (sometimes an extra high instr. is called sopranino). 4. The possessor of a soprano voice. soprana chorda (kôr-dä). The E string of a violin. sopran′ist. A male soprano. soprano clef. The C clef on the first line of the staff; sometimes used of the G clef.

sordo (sôr′-dō), I. Muffled, veiled tone. sordamen′te. Soft(ly).

sordellina (lē′-nä), I. A small 4-piped bagpipe.

sor′dine, E., Sordino (sôr-dē′-nō, pl. -i, German pl. -en), I. 1. A small tone-softening device, damper or mute to set against piano-strings, in the mouth of a trumpet, or, on the bridge of a violin. 2. A kit. con s. In piano-playing "use the soft pedal"; in playing violin, horn, etc., "use the mute." senza (sĕn'-tsä), s. or s. levato (lĕ-vä'-tō). "Remove the mute or damper."

sordo'no, I., sordone (sôr-dŭn), F., Sordun (zôr-doon'), G. 1. Obs bombard of 5 sizes, and 12 ventages. 2. An old stop. 3. In G. a trumpet-mute.

sorgfältig (zôrkh'-fĕl-tĭkh), G. Careful(ly).

sortita (sôr-tē'-tä), I. 1. Entrance aria. 2. Voluntary for close of service.

sospensione (sĭ-ō'-nĕ), I. Suspension. sospensivamen'te. Doubtfully.

sospiran'do, sospirante (rän'-tĕ), sospirevole (rā'-vō-lĕ), sospiro'so, I. 1. Sighing, doleful. 2. A sobbing catch in the breath.

sostenen'do, sostenen'te, I. Sustaining the tone.

sostenuto (sōs-tĕ-noo'-tō), I. 1. Sustained, prolonged, retarded. 2. Gradually retarded. 3. Andante.

sostinen'te, I. Used of instrs. with special device for sustaining tones.

sotto (sôt'-tō), I. Under, below. s. voce (vō'-chĕ). In an undertone. s. dominan'te. Sub-dominant.

soubass (soo-băs), F. Sub-bass.

souf farah. Oriental reedless wind-instrs. in general.

soum. Burmese harp.

soufflerie (soof-flĕ-rē), F. The bellows action. soufflet (soof-flā). Bellows. souffler (soof-flā). To blow. soufleur (flŭr), fem. souffleuse (flŭz). 1. Organ-blower. 2. Prompter.

sound. Vide ACOUSTICS.

sound-board, sounding-board. 1. A thin resonant board which by sympathetic vibrations enlarges, enriches and prolongs the tone of the strings stretched across it (as in pianos, the belly of violins, etc.). 2. The cover of the wind-chest, sound-body or box, a resonance box; s. bow, the rim of a bell; s. hole, a hole in the resonance box to give communication from the resonance chamber to the air. s. post. Vide VIOLIN. s. register. A sound-recorder inv. in Paris, 1858. s. waves. The alternate condensation and rarefaction of air in vibration (q. v.).

soupape (soo-păp), F. Valve.

soupir (soo-pēr), F. A quarter rest. demi-s. 8th rest. quart de s. 16th rest. huitième (or demi quart) de s. 32d rest. seizième. 64th rest.

sourdeline (soor-dĕ-lēn), F. Sordellina.

sourdement (soord-mäṅ), F. In a subdued manner.

sourdine (soor-dēn), F. 1. Sordino. 2. A soft harmonium-stop. 3. Céleste pedal. 4. An old spinet.

sous (soo), F. Under, below. s.-chantre (shäṅtr). Subcantor. s.-dominante. Sub-dominant. s.-médiante. Sub-mediante. s.-tonique. Leading note.

soutenir (soo-tĕ-nēr), F. To sustain.

souvenir (soo-vĕ-nēr), F. Reminiscence.

Sp. Abbr. of Spitz.

space. The interval between 2 lines of the staff, or between 2 ledger lines.

spagnuola (spän-yoo-ō'-lä), I. The guitar.

spalla (späl'-lä), I. Vide VIOL.

spanisch (spän-ĭsh), G., spagnolesco (spän-yō-lĕs'-kō), I. Spanish. spanischer Reiter (rī'-ter), G. Tones made by running. spanisches Kreuz (kroits), G. Double sharp.

spar'ta, spartita (spär-tē'-tä), or -o, I., Sparte (spär'-tĕ), G. Partitura.

spartire (tē'-rĕ), I. To score; particularly to rescore an old work.

spassapensiero (pĕn-sĭ-ā'-rŏ), I. Jew's harp.

spasshaft (späss'-häft), G. Sportive(ly). S.-tigkeit (tĭkh-kīt). Sportiveness, playfulness.

spa'tium, L., spazio (spä'-tsĭ-ō), I. A space.

spe'cies. Kind. Vide COUNTERPOINT.

Sperrventil, G. Vide VENTIL 2.

spezzato (spĕd-zä'-tō), I. Divided.

spianato (spĭ-ä-nä′-tō). 1. Legato. 2. Calm.

spiccato (spĭk-kä′-tō), I. Separated. pointed. Vide BOW.

Spiel (shpēl), G. Playing; style of playing. S.-art. 1. Style of performance. 2. Touch. s.-bar. Playable. S.-leute (loi-tĕ). 1. The drummer and fifers of a band. 2. Strolling players. S.-manieren (mä-nē′-rĕn). Ornaments, graces. S.-oper. Light opera. S.-tenor, etc. Light opera tenor, etc.

Spillflöte, G. Spitzflöte.

spina (spē′-nä), L. "Thorn," jack; quill of a spinet (q. v.).

Spin′delflöte, G. Spitzflöte.

spinet (spĭn′-ĕt or spĭ-nĕt′), E., Spinett (spĭ-nĕt′), G., spinet′ta, I. Obsolete and small square form of harpsichord, originally called the couched harp, later called spinet, from its quills, or spinae.

spirito (spē′-rĭ-tō), I. Spirit, energy. spirituo′so, spirito′so, spiritosamen′te. Spirited(ly).

spirituale (spē-rĭ-too-ä′-lĕ), I., spirituel (spĭr-ĭ-too-ĕl′), F. Spiritual.

spis′si gravis′simi, L. Hypatoides—the deep sounds of the Greek system.

spis′sus, L. "Thick;" full (of intervals).

Spitz (shpĭts), G. Point (of bow); toe (of foot). S.-flöte (flā-tĕ). A soft stop with pointed pipes. S.-quint. Its quint. S.-harfe (här′-fĕ). Pointed harp. A small harp with strings on each side of its sounding-board.

spondau′lium. Greek hymn with flute.

spread. Open.

springing bow. Vide BOW.

spressione (ĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. Expression.

Sprung (sproongk), G. A skip. s. weise (vī-zĕ). By skip.

square. Vide ORGAN. square B. Vide B. square piano. Vide PIANO.

squil′la, I. A little bell. squillan′te. Tinkling.

srou′tis. The 22 degrees of the Hindu scale.

sta (stä), I. "Let it stand;" i. e., to be played just as it stands.

Stab′at Ma′ter Do′loro′sa, L. "The grieving Mother stood," a hymn on the Crucifixion, written by Jacoponus, 14th cent. Vide SEQUENCE.

stabile (stä′-bĭ-lĕ), I. Firm.

stac. Abbr. of Staccato.

staccare (stäk-kä′-rĕ), I. To play staccato.

staccato (stäk-kä′-tō), I. "Detached," used of short, non-legato notes or a touch which leaves the key or string immediately. This crispness is marked over the notes by round dots called staccato marks; it may be modified by a slur over the dots, or emphasised by small wedge-like dots. staccatis′simo. As staccato as possible.

Stadt (shtät), G. Town, city; used of a salaried municipal musician, as S.-musikus, -pfeifer, etc.

staff, stave. The five horizontal parallel lines on, between, above and below which the notes are placed, the pitch of the note being determined by the key-signature and the clef, from which the s. takes its name. The usual arrangement is a bass s. (with F clef) under a treble s. (with G clef); they form a continuous notation except for the middle C, which is sometimes given a line, making the 11-line or great s. s. notation is opp. to alphabetical notation. The Gregorian s. had 4 lines.

Stahlharmo′nika (shtäl), G. Steel bars played (a) with a bow, inv. by Nobe, 1796, (b) with a hammer; more commonly Stahlspiel (shtäl-shpēl).

Stamentienpfeife (shtä-mĕn′-tĭ-ĕn-pfī′-fĕ), G. Vide SCHWEGEL.

Stamm (shtäm), G. Stem, trunk. S.-akkord. A chord in root position, unaltered and uninverted. S.-ton. Natural tone. S.-tonleiter. Key of C major.

stampita (stäm-pē′-tä), I. A song.

Ständchen (shtĕnt′-khĕn), G. Serenade.

Standhaftigkeit (shtänt′-häf-tĭkh-kīt), G. Firmness.

stanghetta (stän-gĕt′-tä), I. A bar.

sta'ple. The tube which holds the oboe's reed. stark (shtärk), G. Strong, loud. stärker (shtĕr'-kĕr). Louder. stave. Staff.
steam-organ. Calliope.
stec'ca, I. A choked and strained tone-production.
Stecher (stĕkh'-ĕr), G. Sticker. Vide ORGAN.
Steg (stākh), G. Bridge.
Stellung (shtĕl'-loongk), G. Position.
stem. The thin stroke attached to the head of a note. stentan'do, I. Retarding. stentato (tä'-tō). Slow and forced.
step. A progression to the adjoining note or tone, hence whole-step, and half-step or chromatic-step; a diatonic-step is a progression to the next note of the key. sterbend (shtĕr'-bĕnt), G. Dying away. Sterbelied (shtĕr'-bĕ-lēt). Death-song.
steso (stā'-sō), I. Extended, prolonged, slow. stes'so, I. The same. s. tempo. Same time.
sthénocire (stā-nō-sēr), F. A finger-strengthener.
stibbacchiato (stĭb-bäk-kĭ-ä'-tō), I. Retarded. sticca'do, sticcato (stĭk-kä'-tō), I. Xylophone. stick'er. Vide ORGAN.
Stiefel (shtē'-fĕl), G. Boot (of a pipe).
Stiel (shtēl), G. 1. Stem. 2. Neck.
Stift (shtĭft), G. Jack (of violin).
Stil (shtēl), G., stile (stē'-lĕ), stilo (stē'-lō), I., sti'lus, L. Style. s. rigoro'so, or osservato (vä'-tō). Strict style. s. rappresentativo (tē'-vō). Vide OPERA. still (shtĭl), G. Calm, quietly. S.-gedakt. A stopped diapason.
Stimme (shtĭm'-mĕ), pl. -en, G. 1. The voice. 2. Part. mit der S. Colla parte. 3. Organ-stop. 4. Sound-post. Stim'menssatz. Vocal attack. Stimm'bänder (bĕnt-ĕr). Vocal cords. S.-bildung. Voice-building. S.-bruch (brookh). Change of voice. Vide MUTATION. S.-buch. Part-book. Stimmer. Tuner; drone. stimmen. To tune, or voice. Stimmflöte, or -pfeife. Pitch-pipe. S.-führer. Chorus-leader. S.-mittel. Vocal capacity. S.-ritze (rĭt-zĕ). Glottis. S.-holz (hôlts), or -hölzchen (hĕlts'-khĕn), or -stock. Sound-post; wrestplank. S.-werkzeuge (vĕrk'-tsoi-khĕ). Vocal organs. S.-führung (fü-roongk). Part-progression. S.-gabel (gä-bĕl). Tuning-fork. S.-hammer (häm-mĕr). Tuning-hammer. S.-horn. Tuning-cone. S.-keil. Tuning-wedge. S.-krucke. Tuning-wire. S.-zange. Tuning-tongs. S.-umfang, S.-weite (vī-tĕ). Compass.
Stimmung (shtĭm'-moongk), G. 1. Tune. 2. Accordature. 3. Pitch. 4. Mood. S. halten. To keep the key. S.-bild. Tone-picture.
stinguendo (stĭn-gwĕn'-dō), I. Dying away. stiracchiato (stē-räk-kĭ-ä'-tō), stirato (stē-rä'-tō), I. Retarded. sti'va, L. Neuma.
Stock (shtôk), G. Bundle of 30 strings. S.-fagott. Rackett. S.-flöte. 1. Bamboo flute. 2. A flute in a walking-stick. Stöckchen (shtĕk'-khĕn). Heel (of violin, etc.).
Stollen (shtôl'-lĕn), G., pl. Vide STROPHE. stolz (shtôlts), G. Proud. stonante (nän'-tĕ), I. Dissonant. stone-harmon'ica. Lapideon. stop. 1. Loosely used for (a) draw-knob and stop-knob and draw-stop, which only carry the label and, by admitting wind, bring into play the stop proper. (b) A mechanical stop, which does not sound or speak, but acts as a coupler, a bell-signal, a tremulant, etc. Strictly, the sounding, or speaking stop is a complete graduated series of organ-pipes of uniform quality. It is this quality which gives the stop its individual name (as dulciana, cremona, etc.). Stops are divided into two chief classes, (a) those with flue-pipes, flue- work, or flue-stops, and (b) those with reed-pipes (q. v.), reed-work, or reed-stops. flue-work is again divided, according to the character of the pipes, into (a) the cylindrical open pipes that give the diapason, or typical organ-quality, also called principal-stops, or -work; (b) covered, plugged, or stopped pipes (without chimneys), gedackt-work; (c) pipes too broad or too narrow of scale to give diapason tone, 3 or 4 sided wooden pipes, and stopped pipes with chimneys.

stops are further grouped according to the length of their pipes as 2-ft., 4-ft., 8-ft., etc., the standard being the 8-ft., or foundation-stops, which are the basis of the organ, and to which the other stops are tuned (vide FOOT).

stops which do not produce the unison or the octave of the key-board, but sound the third (tierce), fifth (quint) and such of their octaves as the tenth (double tierce), fifteenth, etc., are called mutation-stops.

furniture, mixture, or compound stops are composed of 2 or more ranks of pipes and produce the octave of the key depressed and also one or more of its other overtones.

A stop may have its pipes divided between two draw-knobs. If it has a pipe for every key of the key-board, it is complete; otherwise it is an imperfect, incomplete, partial or half-stop.

Some stops are given only to the pedal; or to only one of the manuals; these are said to be on the pedal, on the swell, etc. A solo-stop is one complete enough in itself to sound a melody. stopped. Vide PIPE.

stop. 2. A fret, or similar position on an unfretted instr. 3. The pressure of the finger at a nodal point of a string. double stop. The stopping, hence sounding, of two or more notes at once on the violin, etc. 4. On a wind-instr. the closing with key or finger of a ventage. 5. On horns, etc., the inserting of the hand in the bell to produce a raised tone of muffled quality. Such a tone is said to be stopped, as opposed to open or natural.

stop'fen, G. To stop (of trumpet, etc.). stopftöne (shtôpf'-tā-nĕ). Stopped tones.

stop-knob. Vide STOP.

stor'ta, I. A serpent. stortina (tē'-nä). A small serpent.

Stosszeichen (shtôs'-tsī-khĕn), G. Staccato mark.

str. Abbr. for String(s).

straccicalando (strät-chĭ-kä-län'-dō), I. Prattling.

straccinato (strä-chĭ-nä'-tō), I. Retarded.

Strad., Stradivari, Stradivarius, etc. A violin made by Stradivari (vide B. D.), A.D. 1650.

strain. Section, motive, theme, air.

strascicando (strä-shĭ-kän'-dō), strascinan'do, I. Dragging, playing slowly. s. l'arco. Keeping the bow of the violin close to the strings to slur the notes. strascinato (ä'-tō). Slow. strascino (strä-shē'-nō). A drag, a slurring race, in slow vocal music.

strath'spey. A lively Scotch dance, in common time, employing the Scotch snap freely.

stravagante (gän'-tĕ), I. Extravagant, odd. stravaganza (gän-tsä). Eccentricity.

straw-fiddle. Xylophone, because its bars are often laid on straw cords.

straziante (strä-tsĭ-än'-tĕ), I. Mocking.

street-organ. Hand-organ.

Streich (strīkh), G. Stroke (as of a bow), hence S.-instrumente. Stringed instrs. S.-quartett. String quartet. S.-orchester. The strings of the orch. S.-zither. Bow-zither. streichen. 1. To draw the bow. 2. To cut (as a scene). streichend. "Stringy" (of the violin quality of certain stops). Strei'cher. Bow-instr. player(s). strene. A breve.

streng (shtrĕng), G. Firm(ly), strict(ly), strepito (strā'-pĭ-tō), I. Noise. strepito'so, strepitosamen'te. Boisterous(ly).

stretch. The interval covered by the fingers of one hand.

stretta (strĕt'-tä), I. A concluding passage, or finale, in an opera, taken in quicker time to enhance the effect.

stret'to, sometimes stretta, I., strette (strĕt), F. 1. "Compressed." In fugue a closing treatment in which subject and answer are so compressed as to overlap. s. maëstrale, or majestrale. A strictly canonic stretto. alla s. In stretto-style. andante s. A slow agitato. 2. "Hastened." A closing movement at increased speed.

Strich (strĭkh), G. Stroke. 1. A dash. 2. A cut. Strichart. Manner of bowing.

strict. Used of a composition following the most rigid and severe rules. Vide CANON, FUGUE, etc.

strident (strē-dän), F., striden'te, stridevole (dā'-vō-lĕ), I. Sharp, shrill.

striking reed. Vide REED.

string. A sonorous cord made of various materials, the strings of violins, etc., being of gut, or cat-gut (so-called, although made of the entrails of sheep). Guitar, etc., strings are of brass, copper, or a core of steel wire or silk, sometimes covered (wound round with silver or other wire); piano strings are of drawn cast steel. Strings are measured in thickness by a string-gauge. "The strings" is a general term for the stringed instruments of an orchestra (also string-band, etc., or string orchestra). s. pendulum. A Weber chronometer. s. quartet. 1. A group of four instrs. of the violin species, 1st and 2d violin, a viola, and 'cello. 2. All the instrs. of these kinds in the orchestra. 3. A composition for these 4 instrs. s. quintet, sextet, etc., (a) the string-quartet with addition of some other stringed instr. (as double-bass), or more of the same kind (as an extra violin). The strings of an instr. are numbered beginning with the highest (or soprano or chanterelle). stringy is used of tone (such as that of an organ-stop), which resembles a bow and string instr.). open strings are those which are not pressed with the finger, or stopped. string-organ. Vide SAITENORGEL.

stringendo (jĕn'-dō), I. Accelerating.

Stroh- (shtrō), G. Straw. S.-bass. The husky lower tones of a bass voice. S.-fiedel (fē-dĕl). Xylophone.

stroke. 1. Vide SIGNS. 2. The rise and fall of a pedal.

strombazzata (strôm-bäd-zä'-tä), strombettata (bĕt-tä'-tä), I. Sound of a trumpet. strombettare (tä'-rĕ). To play on the trumpet. strombettiere (tĭ-ā'-rĕ). Trumpeter.

stromentato (tä'-tō), I. Instrumented. Vide RECITATIVE.

stromen'to, strumen'to (pl. -i), I. Instrument(s). s. da fiato (dä fĭ-ä'-tō), or s. di ven'to. Wind-instr. s. d'arco (där'-kō). Bow-instr. s. da cor'da. String-instr. s. da tacto. Key-board instr. s. di legno (di metallo). Wooden (metal) instr. s. di rinforzo (fôr'-tsō). An instr. used to support or strengthen an effect.

Stuben-orgel (shtoo'-bĕn-ôr-gĕl), G. Chamber-organ.

Stück (shtük), pl. Stücke (shtük-ĕ), G. Piece. S.-chen (khĕn). Little tune.

Studie (stoo'-dē), pl. -ien (ĭ-ĕn), G., studio (stoo'-dĭ-ō), I., stu'dium, L., stud'y, E. Vide ÉTUDE and PIANO STUDIES.

Stufe (stoo'-fĕ), pl. en, G. Step, degree. stufenweise (vī-zĕ). By degrees.

stumm (shtoom), G. Dumb. S.-regis'ter. Mechanical stop.

stürmisch (shtür'-mĭsh), G. Stormy.

Stürze (shtür'-tsĕ), G. Bell (of horns, etc.). S. in der Höhe (hā'-ĕ). "The bell turned upwards."

Stutt'gart pitch. Vide PITCH.

Stuzflügel (shtoots'-flü-gĕl), G. "Baby" grand piano.
Styl (shtēl), G. Style. su (soo), I. Above, upon. arco in su. Up-bow. suabe-flute. A soft stop.
suave (soo-ä'-vĕ), I., suave (swăv), F. Suave. suavità (soo-ä-vĭ-tä'), I. Suavity. sub, L. Under, below, beneath.
Subbass (soop'-bäs) G., subbour'don. A double-stopped 16 or 32 ft. stop. subcan'tor. Assistant cantor. subdiapen'te. The 5th below. subdom'inant. The fourth tone of a scale or key.
Subflöte, G. Sifflöte. subito (soo'-bĭ-tō), I., subitamen'te. Sudden(ly), immediate(ly). volti s. Turn quickly. p. subito. A soft touch immediately after a loud. sub'ject, E., Subjekt (soop'-yĕkht), G. A motive or theme for development usually followed by an answer, or second (secondary or subsidiary) subject, or counter-subject. Vide FORM. subme'diant. The sixth tone of a scale or key. suboct'ave. 1. The octave below. 2. Coupler producing the octave below. subor'dinate. Not principal or fundamental, used of chords on the 2d, 3d, 6th, and 7th degrees of a scale, and of all 7th chords except that on the 5th degree. subprin'cipal. Below the pedal diapason, a double open bass 32-ft. stop. subsemifu'sa, L. A 32d note. subsem'itone, subsemito'nium mo'di, L. Leading note. substitu'tion. The resolution of a dissonance in some other part an octave removed.
substitution (süb-stĭ-tüs-yôṅ), F. Change of fingers. subton'ic. Leading note. succen'tor, L. 1. Subcantor. 2. Bass-singer. succes'sion. 1. Sequence. 2. Progression.
Sufflöte (soof-flā-tĕ), G. Sifflöte. sudden modulation. Modulation to a remote key without intermediate harmony.
suffocato (soof-fō-kä'-tō), I. "Suffocated," muffled. sugli (sool-yē), sui (soo-ē), I. Vide SUL. suite (swēt), F., or suite de pièces (dŭ pĭ-ĕs'). A set or series of pieces. Originally a group of dances, the s. has followed the line deserted by the sonata. Strictly it is a cycle series of classic dance-forms in one key. The number varies from three to five, often with a prelude. The dance-forms are chosen from the following: allemande, courante, sarabande, bourée, gigue, gavotte, minuet, passepied, loure, anglaise, polonaise, pavane. The allemande is usually first, the gigue last; the first dances named were the regular constituents, the others being called intermezzi. The modern suite aims chiefly at lightness even when extended to the orchestra, and great liberty is now taken with keys and forms. suivez (swē-vā), F. "Follow" (the soloist); continue similarly.
sujet (sü-zhā), F. Subject.
sul (sool), sull', sulla (sool'-lä), I. On the, near the, as sul a. On the a string. sulla tastiera. Near the finger-board (of bowing). sul ponticel'lo. Near the bridge.
suma'ra. A two-piped Turkish flute. summa'tional tones. Vide RESULTANT. sumpun'jah, Heb. Sambuca. sumsen (zoom'-zĕn), G. To hum. suonare (soo-o-nä'-rĕ), I. To play, sound, ring. suonata (soo-o-nä'-tä). Sonata. suonatina (tē'-nä). Sonatina. suono (soo-ō'-nō), I. Sound. suo'ni armonichi (är-mō'-nĭ-kē). Harmonics.
superano (soo-pĕr-ä'-nō), Sp. Soprano. superdom'inant. The 6th tone in the scale. super'fluous, E., superflu (sü-pĕr-flü), F. Augmented.

supe'rius, L. Higher, i. e., the highest part.

superoc'tave. 1. The octave above. 2. A stop two octaves above the diapasons. 3. Coupler producing the octave above.

superton'ic, E., supertonique (süpĕr-tôn-ēk'), F. The second tone of a scale.

supplican'do, supplichevole (soopplī-kä'-vō-lĕ), supplichevolmen'te, I. Pleading(ly), appealing(ly).

support'. Accompaniment, reinforcement.

supposed bass. The lowest note of an inverted chord (q. v.).

sur (soor), I., sur (sür), F. On, upon, over. sur une corde. On one string.

surabondant(es) (sür-ă-bôn̆-dän̆(t)), F. Used of triplets, quintoles, etc.

suraigu (sür-ĕ-gü), F. Over-acute.

surdelina (soor-dā-lē'-nä), I. Small bagpipe.

surprise. 1. Vide CADENCE. 2. Name of Haydn's 6th symphony with an unexpected crash breaking in on a long, soft movement.

susdominante (sü-), F. Superdominant.

suspended cadence. 1. Vide CADENCE. 2. Vide SUSPENSION.

suspen'sion. 1. The holding back of one note of a chord with the result that it causes, with the following chord, a clash that earnestly demands its progress to the destined note in which it will find resolution (q. v.). 2. The note so suspended. A s. may be unprepared, that is, it may be the only note of a group that is not proper to a sudden chord. s. may be double or triple, by occurring in more than one note of a group at once.

suspir'ium, L. 1. A quarter rest. 2. More anciently, a half-rest.

süss (züs), G. Sweet(ly). Sussflöte. A soft flute-stop.

su(s)surando (soo(s)-soo-rän'-dō), su(s)surante (rän'-tĕ), I. Whispering, murmur. sussura'tion, E. A soft murmur.

sustain. To hold a note during its full time-value; to perform in legato manner, vide also PEDAL-POINT. Vide PEDAL.

svegliato (svāl-yä'-tō), I. Lively.

svelto (svĕl'-tō), I. Light, easy.

sw. Abbr. of Swell-organ.

swell. 1. Gradual increase (and decrease) of sound. 2. The device for increasing and diminishing a sustained tone on an organ, hence swell-organ, and swell key-board. Part of an organ (the swell-organ), is surrounded by a swell-box, the front of which is filled with Venetian swell-blinds (Jalousie, G.), opened or closed by a lever worked by a swell-pedal. In old organs, there was but one shutter (nag's-head swell); in harpsichords the cover moved.

Sylbe (zēl'-bĕ), G. Syllable.

syllab'ic, E., syllabisch (zēl-läp'-ĭsh), G., syllabique (sēl-lăb-ēk), F. Of an air in which each syllable has its own note.

syllable-names. Do, re, mi, etc., as opposed to letter-names, C, d, e, etc. Vide SOLMISATION.

sym'bal. Cymbal.

sympathet'ic. Of strings, etc., which are made to sound by sympathetic vibration (q. v.), and strengthen some other tone by unison or by sounding some overtone.

symphone'ta, L. Polyphony.

sympho'nia, Gr. 1. Agreement. 2. Hurdygurdy. 3. A symphony.

symphon'ic, E., symphonique (săn̆-fō-nēk), F., symphonisch (zēm-fō'-nĭsh), G. Pertaining to or relating to the symphony. symphonic poem, poème s. (pō-ĕm' săn̆-fō-nēk), F., sympho'nische Dichtung (dĭkh-toongk), G. A composition of symphonic demands on orchestra and intelligence, but not built on the sonata form and rather descriptive than thematic. The name was first given by Liszt to some of his best works.

Symphonie (săn̆-fō-nē in F., in G. zēm-fō-nē'). 1. Symphony. 2. Concord. 3. Instrumental accompaniment. 4. String-band. 5. Orchestra. Symphonie-Ode (ō'-dĕ), G. Choral symphony.

sympho'nion. 1. A combination of flute-stop with piano, inv. by Kaufmann. 2. A music-box with interchangeable disk in place of a cylinder.

sym'phonist, symphoniste (săṅ'-fō-nēst'), F., Sympho'niker, symphonienseser (zēm-fō'-nĭ-ĕn-zā'-zĕr), G. A composer of symphonies; in F. also a church-composer, or member of an orchestra.

sympho'nious. Harmonious.

sym'phony, Symphonie (in F. săṅ-fō-nē', in G. zēm-fō-nē'). 1. A sonata for orchestra with all the elaboration and extension permitted by the larger resources. Beethoven (and followers of him) even added a chorus, hence choral symphony. Historically founded on the overture, Haydn, the father of the sonata (q. v.), established the form, which has survived with minor substitutions (as in the sonata) till now. 2. In E. and elsewhere the instrumental pre-, inter-, and postludes, of vocal composition. 3. Old name for hurdygurdy, etc.

sympo'sia. Convivial compositions.

syn'copate. To perform syncopation.

syncopato (sĭn-kō-pä'-tō), I., Syncopated.

syn'copation, E., syncopa'tio, L., syncope (săṅ-kôp in F., in G. zēn'-kō-pĕ). A pleasantly confusing rhythmic "intersection" caused by suppressing a natural accent or strong-beat, or moving it from its natural place to a weak beat, usually by means of tie-ing over a note on a weak beat across the time belonging to a strong beat. The note so prolonged is said to be syncopated. In piano-music, only one hand usually has the syncopation.

Synkope (zēn'-kō-pĕ), G. Syncopation. synkopi(e)ren (pē'-rĕn). To syncopate.

synnem'enon. Vide MODES.

synonyme (sē-nō-nēm), F. Homophone.

synton'ic. Vide COMMA.

syntonolyd'ian. Hypolydian.

sy'ren. Siren.

syr'inx, Gr., syringe (sē-răṅzh), F. 1. Pandean pipes. 2. A portion of a hymn to Apollo sung by candidates for Pythian prizes.

sys'tem (in G. zēs'-tām). 1. A group of staves. 2. In G. a staff.

syste'ma, Gr. 1. A tetrachord, or other interval. 2. In L. Staff. 3. Hexachord series. Vide MODES.

système (sēs-tĕm), F. 1. All musical tones. 2. Compass.

syzygi'a, Gr. and L. A chord. s. perfecta, or simplex. Triad. s. composita. Triad with a tone doubled. s. propin'qua (remo'ta). Close (open) chord.

szopelka (shō-pĕl'-kä). Russian oboe with brass mouthpiece.

T

T Abbr. of Talon, Tasto, Tempo, Tenor, Toe, Tre, Tutti.

tabal'lo, I. A kettle-drum.

tabar (tä-bär'), I., tab'arde, tab'arte, Old E. A tabor.

tabl. Egyptian drum.

tablatura (täb-lä-too'-rä), I., tablature (tă-blä-tür'), F., tablature (tăb'-lä-tūr), E., Tabulatur (tä-boo-lä-toor'), G. 1. The Tonic Sol-fa notation. 2. The rules of poetic and musical composition established by the Meistersinger. Vide "STORIES OF THE OPERAS." 3. An early form of notation from which our present system got its vertical character, the bar and the tails of its notes. Old tablature had many forms. In lute-tablature the French and English used letters, the Italians, numerals, designating the frets to be touched on the lute. These were written on a staff with as many lines as the instr. written for had strings; beneath were stems with tails, indicating the time-value of the notes; these tails represent our modern values except that our whole note (their semibreve) had a stem like that of our half-note; our half-note (their minima) had the tail of an eighth note; our ¼ note (semiminima) a double-hooked-stem, our ⅛ note (fusa) three hooks, our 1/16 note (semifusa) the tail of a 64th note. The hooks of consecutive notes were often run together in thick lines as in our music. organ (or German) t. was used for key-board instrs., and employed the letter-names of the notes, the melody being marked on a staff with chord-accompaniment in vertical rows of letters beneath.

table d'harmonie (tăbl dăr-mō-nē), F. 1. A table of chords, intervals, etc. 2. Sound-board.

table d'instrument (tăbl dăṅ-strü-măṅ), F. Belly.

ta'ble-music. 1. Part-songs. 2. Music printed so that singers at opposite sides of a table could read it.

ta'bor, taboret', E., tabourin (tă-boo-răṅ), F., tab'ret. A small drum; a tambourine without jingles.

ta'cet, pl. ta'cent, L., tace (tä'-chĕ), pl. taci (tä'-chē), taciasi (tä-chĭ-ä'-sĭ), I. "Be silent!" as oboe tacet, let the oboe be silent.

tac'tus, L. The stroke of the hand or bâton in conducting.

Tafel (tä'-fĕl), G. Table. T.-förmiges (fĕr-mĭkh-ĕs) klavier, or T.-klavier. Square piano. T.-musik (moo-zēk'). 1. Music sung at a banquet. 2. Vide TABLE-MUSIC.

tail. Stem. tail-piece. The wooden brace which holds the strings of violins, etc., below the bridge.

taille (tī'-yŭ), F. 1. Tenor. 2. Viola, also t. de violin, t. de basson. Oboe da caccia.

takigo'to. 1. Japanese dulcimer.

Takt (täkt), G. 1. Time. 2. Measure. 3. Beat. im T. In time. ein T. wie vorher zwei. Double the former time. T.-accent. Primary accent. T.-art. Species of time, as duple or triple. T.-erstickung (ĕr-shtĭk-oongk). Syncopation. T.-fach (fäkh). Space. T.-fest. Steady in keeping time. T.-glied (glēt). Measure-note. T.-führer (fü'-rĕr). Conductor; leader. T.-halten. To keep time. takti(e)ren (täk-tēr'-ĕn) or t.-schlagen. To beat time. T.-linie (lĭn'ē), T.-strich (strĭkh). Bar-line. t.-mässig (mĕs-sĭkh). In time. T.-messer. Metronome. T.-note. Whole note. T.-pause. Whole rest. T.-stock. Bâton. guter T.-teil. Strong beat. schlechter T.-teil. Weak beat. T.-vorzeichnung, or Taktzeichen (tsī-khĕn). Signature.

talabalac'co, I. Moorish drum.

ta'lan. Hindu cymbals.

talon (tă-lôṅ), F. Heel. 1. Of a bow. 2. Of the foot.

tambour (täṅ-boor), F. 1. Drum. 2. Drummer. t. de basque (dŭ băsk). Tambourine. t. chromatique. Timbalarion. t. roulante (roo-länt). Long drum. t. major (mă-zhôr). Drum-major.

tamb(o)u'ra. An ancient instr., used in the East, like a guitar, struck with a plectrum.

tambouret (täṅ-boo-rā), F., tambourine (tăm'boo-rēn), E., Tambourin (täm-boo-rēn'), G. 1. A small drum, with little bells (called jingles) pivoted in the rim. Notes with waved stems indicate a roll; notes with vertical lines above, call for the jingles. tambourineur (nŭr'), F. Tambourine-player.

tambourin (täṅ-boo-răṅ), F. 1. A tambourine without jingles. 2. A lively dance in 2-4 time with t. accompaniment.

tamburaccio (täm-boo-rät'-chō), I. A large drum. tamburel'lo, tamburet'to, I. 1. Tabor. 2. Drummer.

tamburino (täm-boo-rē'-nō), I. 1. Drummer. 2. Tambourine.

tamburo (täm-boo'-rō), I. Side-drum.

tamburone (täm-boo-rō'-nē), I. The great drum.

tamis (tă-mē'), F. Pipe-rack.

tam'tam'. 1. Indian drum. 2. Gong.

Tanbur (tän-boor′), G. Tamburo. tändelnd (tĕn′-dĕlnt), G. Playful, trifling. tan′gent, E., Tangente (tän-jĕn′-tĕ), G. Vide CLAVICHORD. Tangentenflügel. A "wing-shaped" clavichord. tantino (tän-tē′-nō), I. A little.
tanto (tän′-tō), I. So much; as much; but allegro non t. Not too quick. allegro t. possibile. As fast as possible.
Tan′tum er′go, L. "So much therefore." A hymn sung at the Benediction in the R. C. service.
Tanz (tänts), G., pl. Tänze (tĕn′-tsĕ). A dance. Tänzer (tĕn′-tsĕr). A dancer. Tänzerin (tĕn′-tsĕ-rĭn). A female dancer. T.-lied (lēt). Dance-song. T.-musik, or T.-stück (shtük). Dance-tune.
tap. A single note on the drum. taps. The last military signal at night. It is also used at the funeral of a soldier.
tapada (tä-pădh′-ä), Sp. Stop. tapadillo (dhēl′-yō). Baxoncillo. ta′rabouk. Instr. used by Turks, a parchment over the bottom of a large earthen vessel.
tarantella (tä-rän-tĕl′-lä), tarentelle (tăr-äṅ-tĕl′), F. Perhaps of Tarentine origin, but claimed to be derived from the tarantula, two explanations being given, one that the bite of the spider incites a mania for dancing; a more probable one that the fatal effects of the poison find an antidote in violent exercise. The dance is a wild presto in 3-8 or 6-8 time, with increasing frenzy and alternatingly major and minor. tarau, theyau thro. Burmese violin with 3 silk strings.
tar′do, tardato (tär-dä′-tō), tardan′do, tardamen′te, I. Slow(ly).
Tartini's tones. Resultant tones, first observed by Tartini. (Vide B. D.).
Taschengeige (täsh′-ĕn-gī-khĕ), G. Kit. tasseau (tăs-sō), F. The mould on which violins are built.
tastame (täs-tä′-mĕ), I., Tastatur (täs-tä-toor′), G., tastatura (täs-tä-too′-rä), I., tastiera (täs-tĭ-ā′-rä), I. Key-board; finger-board. sulla tastiera. Near the finger-board (of a vln.).
Taste (täs′-tĕ), G. The touch, hence a key. Tas′tenbreit. Key-board. Tastenstäbchen (stĕp-khĕn). Fret. Tastenschwanz (shvänts). Extremity of key-board. Tastenwerk. A keyed instrument.
tasto (täs′-tō), I. 1. Touch. 2. Key. 3. Fret. 4. Finger-board. sul t. "Near the finger-board." t. solo. "One key alone," a note to be played without other harmony than the octaves. tatto (tät′-tō), I. Touch. tattoo′. The drum-beat at night recalling soldiers to quarters for sleep. It precedes taps (q. v.). tche (chē). A Chinese stringed instrument.
te. Tonic Sol-fa name for the 7th tone si.
té (tā), F. C sharp.
technic(s) (tĕk′-nĭk(s)), E., Technik (tĕkh-nēk′), G., technique (tĕk-nēk), F. The mechanical side of musical performance, including dexterity, velocity, distinctness, shading as opposed to the poetical or interpretative side. The means, not the end, of a properly balanced musical ambition.
tech′nicon. A device for training the fingers, inv. by J. Brotherhood, 1889. tech′niphone. First name of the Virgil Practice-Clavier. technisch (tĕkh′-nĭsh), G. Technical, used to indicate proficiency.
tedesco (-a) (tĕ-dĕs′-kō), I. German. alla t. In the German style, in waltz-rhythm. lira t. Hurdygurdy.
Te De′um Lauda′mus, L. "Thee, Lord, we praise," a hymn attributed to St. Ambrosius. Vide MASS.
Teil (tīl), G. Vide THEIL. tel′ephone-harp. An instr. for transmitting music by telephone. tell′tale. An indicator of wind-pressure.

tema (tā′-mä), I. Theme; subject; melody.

tem′perament, E., tempérament (täṅ-pā-rä-mäṅ), F., temperamen′to, I. A method of tuning, representing the triumph of practice over theory; of art over science. It is a system of compromise, whereby, for practical musical purposes, the octave is divided into twelve intervals, none of which is quite true. In the present piano, and similar instrs. the tones c♯ and d♭, for example, are identical, and are given the same string and digital. As a matter of acoustical fact there is a difference between them. If they were given different digitals and tuned exactly, the present freedom of modulation from one key to another would be impossible without some elaborate device, and the piano, organ, etc., would need a greatly increased finger-board, with 53 digitals to the octave instead of 12 as now. The present tuning was not reached without a war of the bitterest sort; but since the 18th century began, only 12 degrees have been given to the octave. The earliest method was unequal temperament, the key of C major being tuned true, and the other tones forced to conform. In the twelve-semitone system, the octave was divided into twelve equal parts, no interval being quite true. The mean-tone system had the major thirds tuned true, the intermediate space being divided into two equal intervals; this system produced much discord called the wolf. equal temperament is now generally employed; it is the practice of tuning by fifths. A series of twelve fifths beginning with c lacks only 74/73 of forming a perfect seven octaves; by dividing this slight discrepancy equally among the 12 fifths, the circle of fifths is tempered and made perfect; thus in major C–G–D–A–E–B–F♯– (or G♭)–D♭–A♭–E♭–B♭ F– C (B♯); in minor a–e–b–f♯–c♯–g♯–d♯ (or e♭)–b♭–f–c–g–d–a; and one can modulate by means of dominant harmony (chords on the fifths) through the whole succession of keys with almost imperceptible acoustic falsehood. It is this great convenience and simplicity of Equal Temperament that has prevented thus far the acceptance of any of the many instruments invented with the rival method of just intonation. Nevertheless the music we know and enjoy has no perfect intervals except the octave; the fifths are a 12th of a comma flat; the fourths a 12th of a comma sharp; the major thirds ¼th of a comma sharp, etc.

Temperatur (tām-pĕ-rä-toor′), G. Temperament.

tempesto′so, tempestosamen′te. Tempestuous(ly), furious(ly).

tempête (täṅ-pĕt), F. "Tempest." A boisterous quadrille in 2-4 time.

tem′po, I. "Time." 1. Rate of speed, ranging from the slowest to the fastest, thus Grave, largo, lento, adagio, andante, moderato, allegro, presto, prestissimo. 2. Rhythm, measure. 3. Beat. a tempo. In exact time (usually appearing after retardation). t. primo (or 1mo), or primiero. Original speed. t. alla breve (brā′-vĕ). Vide BREVE. t. a. piacere, or senza t. The time at pleasure. t. bina′rio (terna′rio). Duple (triple) time. t. como′do. Convenient, moderate time. t. debole (dā′-bō-lĕ). Weak beat. t. di bal′lo. Dance-time. t. di bole′ro, gavot′ta, mar′cia, etc. In the time of a bolero, gavotte, march, etc. t. di cappel′la. In the Church-time. Vide BREVE. t. di pri′ma par′te. In the same time as the first part. t. for′te. Strong beat. t. giusto (joos′-tō). In strict time. l'istesso (or lo stesso), t. Continue at "the same speed." t. maggiore (mäd-jō′-rĕ). Vide BREVE. t. mino′re, or t. ordina′rio. 1. Common time, 4 beats to the measure. 2. The original time of the piece. t. perdu′to. "Lost," unsteady time. t.

reggiato (rĕd-jä′-tō), same as colla parte. t. rubato. Vide RUBATO. T. wie vorher (vē fôr-hār), G. Same time as before.

tempo-mark, Tempo-Bezeichnung (bĕ-tsīkh′-noongk), G. A word or phrase indicating the standard or unit of time for a composition, as andante; or indicating some deviation from this unit, as meno mosso.

temporiser (täṅ-pôr-ĭ-zā), F. In an accompaniment, to follow the soloist's time.

temps (täṅ), F. 1. Time. 2. Beat. t. faible (fĕbl), or levé (lŭ-vā). Weak beat. t. fort (fôr), frappé (frăp-pā′). Strong beat.

tem′pus, L. Time, i. e., of the breve. t. perfec′tum (marked O). That in which the breve equalled 3 semibreves. t. im′perfectum (marked ☾). That in which it equalled 2 semibreves. t. bina′rium (or terna′-rium). Duple or triple time. Vide NOTATION.

tenete (tĕ-nā′-tĕ), I. Hold.

Ten′ebræ, L. "Shadows, Darkness"; R. C. Evening Service, during Holy Week, in commemoration of the Crucifixion, the candles being extinguished one by one.

tenen′do, I. Sustaining (as the melody).

tenero (tā′-nĕ-rō), tenero′so, teneramen′te, I. Tender(ly). tenerezza (tā-nĕ-rĕd′-zä). Tenderness.

teneur (tŭ-nŭr), F. Cantus firmus of a hymn.

tenor (in G. tā-nôr′), ténor (tā-nôr), F. tenore (tā-nō′-rĕ), I. 1. The highest male voice produced "in the chest." Vide SOPRÁNO. (a) The more powerful tenor is almost a barytone and is called dramatic (Heldentenor′), teno′re robus′to, or di mezzo carrattere (dē mĕd′-zō kä-răt-tā′-rĕ), or di forza (dē fôr′-tsä). Compass c–b′ (𝄞). The more light and flexile tenor is called lyric, lyrischer (lēr-ĭsh-ĕr). T. tenore leggiero (lĕd-jā-rō), légier (lā-zhā), or di grazia (dē gräts′-yä). Compass d–c″, sometimes higher. 2. The part corresponding to the tenor voice in compass. 3. The highest of a chime of bells. 4. The viola, as tenor violin. 5. As a prefix for instrs. of tenor range; e. g., tenor trombone (Tenorposaune), etc. 6. tenor C is an octave below mid-c. 7. tenor-clef, Tenor-schlüssel or -zeichen, the C clef on the fourth line. 8. The lowest string of the viola. 9. In Gregorian music, the principal melody taken by a medium male voice, above which sang the counter- or contra-tenor, or the altus or alto. 10. In mediæval music, (a) fermate, (b) ambitus, (c) tone of a mode of the evovae.

tenorino (tā-nō-rē′-nō), I. Falsetto or castrato tenor. Tenorist (tĕn-ō-rēst′), G., tenorista (tān-ō-rēs′-tä), I., ténoriste (tā-nō-rēst′), F. A tenor-singer.

tenoroon′. 1. Old tenor oboe, compass downward to tenor C. 2. A stop that does not go below E.

ten′sile. Applied to stringed instruments.

tenth. 1. An interval of an octave and a third. 2. A stop a tenth above the diapasons. 3. Decima.

tenu(e) (tŭ-nü), F., tenuto (tā-noo′-tō), I. "Held." 1. Sustained. 2. A sustained note or pedal-point. 3. Legato. 4. Constantly, as forte t. Pl. tenute (note).

téorbe (tā-ôrb), F. Theorbo.

teoretico (tā-ō-rā′-tĭ-kō), I. Theoretical.

teoria (tā-ō-rē′-ä), I. Theory.

tepidità (tā-pē-dĭ-tä′), I. Indifference, lukewarmth. tepidamen′te. Calmly.

teponaz′tli. An Aztec drum still used in Central America; a log about a yard long, hollowed from below, then cut through till two tongues of wood are left. These sound an interval when struck with padded sticks.

ter (tĕr), L. Thrice, three times (of a passage to be repeated twice). ter un′ca. "Three-hooked"; 16th note. ter sanctus. "Thrice holy," referring to the "Holy, holy, holy," of the Te Deum.

terce. 1. Tierce. 2. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ. tercet (tĕr-sā), F. Triplet. ternaire (tĕr-năr), F., ternario (tĕr-nä'-rĭ-ō), I., ter'nary, E. Triple, three-fold. ternary form. Rondo-form. ternary measure. Triple time. terpo'dion. 1. An instr. inv. 1816 by Buschmann, resembling the harmonium, the tone being produced from sticks of wood. 2. An 8-ft. stop.
Terpsichore (tĕrp-sĭk'-ō-rĕ). The muse of dance and song. ter'tia, L., Terzia (tĕr'-tsĭ-ä), G. 1. Third, tierce. tertia modi. The 3d degree. 2. A stop sounding a third or tenth above.
tertian Zweifach (tĕr-tsĭ-än tsvī'-fäkh), G. A stop combining tierce and larigot.
Terz (tĕrts) (pl. en), G., terzo(-a) (tĕr'-tsō), I. 1. Third, (a) the interval, (b) in number. 2. Tierce, terzo mano. Octave-coupler. terzadecima, Terzde'zime. A 13th. Terzquart'akkord, or Terzquartsext'akkord, 6–4–3 chord. (Vide CHORD.) Terzquintsext'akkord, 6 – 5 – 3 chord. (Vide CHORD.) Terztöne. Tierce-tones. Terzflöte. 1. Small flute, a minor third above. 2. A stop.
Terzdecimole (dā-tsĭ-mō'-lĕ). A group of thirteen equal notes.
Terzett (tĕr-tsĕt'), G., terzetto (tĕr-tsĕt'-tō), I. A trio. terzina (tĕr-tsē'-nä), I. A triplet. tessitura (tĕs-sĭ-too'-rä), I., tessiture (tĕs'-sĭ-tūr), E. "The web." The general "lie" of a song or phrase—its average pitch, whether high or low.
tes'ta, I. Head. di t. In the head as the voice. testo (tĕs'-tō), I. "Text." 1. Subject, or theme. 2. The words of a song. testu'do, L. "Tortoise." The lyre. tête (tĕt not tāt), F. Head, of a note; of a vln., etc. tet'rachord, E., tetrachorde (tĕt-rä-kôrd), F., tetracor'do, I. 1. A 4-stringed instr. 2. The interval of a fourth. 3. The 4 diatonic tones of a perfect fourth. (Vide MODES.) tetrachordal system. Original form of Tonic Sol-fa. tetrachor'don. A small piano-like instr. with a rubber cylinder, impinging on strings.
tetrato'non, Gr., tet'ratone. An interval of four whole tones. tet'rad. Chord of the seventh. tet'radiapa'son. Interval of 4 octaves. tet'raphone. Tetratone. tetrapho'nia. Organum in 4 parts.
T(h)eil (tīl), G. Part. T.-ton. Partial tone. the'ma, Gr., Thema (tā'-mä), G., thème (tĕm), F., theme, E. Loosely, the general idea of a composition. Strictly, the structural molecule, of which motive or subject and answer are the component atoms. The theme of a "theme with variations," tema con variazioni, is an extended air. Such a work as a sonata has contrasting themes which are developed. themat'ic treatment refers to the contrapuntal handling of a musical design as opposed to a lyric treatment, though the theme itself may be lyric in nature.
Theorbe (tĕ-ôr'-bĕ), G., théorbe (tā-ôrb), F., theorbo (thē-ôr'-bō), E. A large bass lute with two necks, the longer carrying a set of bass strings.
Theoretiker (tĕ-ō-rā'-tĭ-kĕr), G., théoricien (tā-ō-rēs-yăn), F. A theorist. theoria, Gr. and L., théorie (tā-ō-rē), F., theory (thē'-ō-rĭ), E. The science of music, particularly of its composition. the'sis, Gr. The accented downbeat. Vide ARSIS.
Theur'gic hymns. Songs performed in Greek mysteries. theyau. Vide TARAU. thin. Used of chords and harmonies that lack support and fulness. thior'bo. Theorbo.

third. 1. Vide INTERVAL. 2. The mediant. third-flute. Vide TERZFLÖTE. third-tones. Vide QUINT-TONES.

thirteenth. An octave and a sixth.

thirty-second note. A demisemiquaver. 32d rest. A rest of equal duration.

thorough-bass. Vide BASS.

thorough-composed. Vide SONG.

three-eighth time. That in which each measure contains three eighth notes.

threefold. Used of triads.

three-lined. Vide PITCH.

three-time. Triple time.

threno'dia, L. and Gr. A song. thren'ody. Lamentation.

thrice-marked, or lined. Vide PITCH.

thro. Vide TARA.

through-composed. Vide SONG.

thumb-position. On the 'cello, a high position where the thumb quits the neck.

thumb-string. Banjo melody-string.

Thürmer (tür'-měr), G. Town-musician.

tib'ia (pl. tib'iae), L. "Shin-bone." 1. Ancient name of all wind-instrs. with holes, such as the flute, pipe and fife, originally made from the human leg-bone. tibiae pa'res, L., pl. Two flutes of the same length. t. impares. Unequal flutes, one for the right hand and the other for the left, which were played on by the same performer; those for the right hand, t. dextrae, being perhaps of higher pitch than those for the left (sinistrae). t. obli'qua, or vas'ca. Cross-flute. 2. Name of various flute-stops, as t. major, a 16-ft. covered stop. 3. t. utric'ularis. The bagpipe.

tib'icen (pl. tibic'ines, feminine tibici'na), L. Flute-player. tibicin'ium. Piping.

tie. A slur; a curved line placed over notes on the same degree which are to be sustained as one tone. Vide SIGNS. tied-notes. 1. Those thus tied. 2. A series of notes (16th notes, etc.) with a single tail.

tief (tēf), G. Deep, low. tiefer (tē'-fĕr). Lower. 8va tiefer. Octave below. tieftönend (tēf-tā'-nĕnt). Deep-toned.

tier (tēr). Rank (of pipes).

tierce (tērs), E. 1. A third, hence tierce-tones, those reached by skips of major thirds. Vide PITCH. 2. The 4th in a series of harmonics. 3. A mutation stop 2⅖ octaves above diapason. 4. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ.

tierce (tĭ-ĕrs'), F. 1. A third. 2. Vide HORÆ CANONICÆ. t. de Picardie (dŭ pē-kăr-dē), F. Tierce of Picardy; a major third introduced in the last chord of a composition in minor; supposed to have originated in Picardy. t. coulée (koo-lā). A sliding grace in thirds. Vide GRACE.

timbala'rion. A series of 8 drums chromatically tuned and fitted with pedals.

timbale (tăn-băl), F., timbal'lo, I. A kettle-drum. timbalier (tăn-băl-yā). A kettle-drummer.

timbre (tăn-br), F., tim'bro, I. 1. Quality and color of tone. 2. A ball struck with a hammer. jeux de timbres (zhŭ-dŭ-tănbr). A chromatic series of small bells or metal bars. 3. The snare of a drum.

tim'brel. Hebrew tambourine.

time. A word used loosely and interchangeably with its Italian equivalent tempo, to indicate: 1. Rate of movement, or speed. 2. Rhythm.

Speed is indicated in various ways by descriptive words, such as slow, andante, langsam, etc., or by the metronome mark.

Rhythm is generally indicated by a fraction, as 2-4 or 3-8 set at the beginning of the composition or movement. The denominator indicates the unit of note-value; the numerator fixes the number of those unit-notes in each measure. Thus 2-4 means that the quarter-note is the standard of value, and that each measure contains two quarter notes or their equivalents.

With the exception of such rare

NOTE.—Some English writers classify times also as quadruple and octuple, and indicate compound times by the signatures of the corresponding simple times with a dot added after the denominator.

rhythms as the 5-8 time, all musical time-patterns are divisible by 2 or 3, and are called duple or triple. Thus in 2-4 time there are two beats to the measure, in 3-4 time there are three. In more elaborate times the beats may themselves be divided by twos or threes. These are called compound duple or compound triple times.

The chart gives the various times in various languages. (See also Accent and Tempo.)

timido (tē′-mĭ-dō), I. Timid. timidezza (tē-mĭ-dĕd′-zä). Timidity.

timoro′so, timorosamen′te, I. Timid(ly). timore (tĭ-mō′-rĕ). Fear.

timpano (tĭm′-pä-nō) (Pl. -i), I. Kettle-drum. t. coper′to. Muffled drum. timpanis′to. Drummer.

tin′termell. An old dance.

tintinnab′ulum, L., tintinnabolo, I. (tĭn-tĭn-nä′-bō-lō), tintinna′bulo (boo-lō). 1. A little bell. 2. A small rattle of bells.

tintinnamen′to, tintinnio (nē′-ō), tintin′no, I. Tinkling.

tin′to, I. Shading.

tiorba (tē-ôr′-bâ), I. Theorbo.

tipping. Vide DOUBLE-TONGUING.

tirade (tē-răd), F. A slide across an interval.

tiran′na, Sp. A national air with guitar.

tirant (tē-räṅ), F. Stop-knob. t. à coupler (ä-koo-plā). 1. Coupler. 2. Button. 3. Drum-cord.

tirarsi, da (dä tē-rär′-sē), I. "With a slide," as tromba da t.

tirasse (tĭ-răs), F. 1. A pedal-coupler. 2. A pedal key-board acting only on the manual pipes.

tirata (tē-rä′-tä), I. A group of equal notes, moving in joint degrees.

tirato (tē-rä′-tō), I. 1. Down-bow. 2. Pedal-coupler.

tira tutto (tē-rä toot′-tō), I. A pedal mechanism controlling the full power of an organ.

tiré (tē-rā), F. Drawn, pulled; a down-bow. tirez (tē-rā). "Use the down-bow."

Tischharfe (tĭsh′-här-fĕ), G. "Dish harp," an autoharp.

tlap′anhuehue′tl. Huehuetl.

tit′ty. Hindu bagpipe.

tirolienne. Tyrolienne.

toccata (tôk-kä′-tä), I. From toccare, to touch, to play. In its 16th century form, a prelude made up of runs and arpeggios. The modern toccata develops with great thematic hilarity and contrapuntal informality a brilliant, swift and showy improvisation. toccatina (tē′-nä), toccatel′la. Short toccata.

toccato (tôk-kä′-tō), I. A fourth-trumpet part in place of kettle-drums.

toc′sin. An alarm-bell.

To(d)tesgesang (tōt′-ĕs-gĕ-zäng), To(d)teslied (lēt), G. A dirge. To(d)tenglöckchen (glĕk′-khĕn). Funeral-bell. To(d)tenmarsch (märsh). Funeral ("dead") march.

tombeau (tôṅ-bō), F. "Tomb." Dramatic elegy.

tomb′estere. Old E. A dancer with tambourine.

tom′tom. Hindu drums.

Ton (tōn), pl. Töne (tā′-nĕ), G. 1. Tone. T.-bestimmung, or -messung. Calculation of tones. Tongattung (gät′-toongk). The division of the octave. The selection of tones. Hence, mode. T.-rein. True in pitch. T.-bildung. Tone-production; voice-training. T.-bühne. Orchestra. T.-dichter. Tone-poet, composer (also T.-setzer). T.-dichtung (dĭkh-toongk) or satz. Composition. T.-farbe (fär-be). Tone-colour, timbre. T.-folge. Series of tones. T.-führung. Melodic progression, modulation. T.-fuss, T.-fall (or -schluss). Cadence. T.-setzung, or -verhalt. Rhythm, measure. T.-gang. Melody. T.-gebung. Intonation. T.-kunde. Science of music. T.-kunst (koonst). Music; the art of music. Tonkunstschule. School of music. Tonlehre (tōn′-lā-rĕ). Acoustics. Tonleiter (lī-tĕr). Scale. T.-loch. Ventage. T.-malerei. "Tone-painting," programme music. T.-messer. Monochord, siren, sonometer. Tonschlüssel (shlüs'-sĕl). Key-note. T.-runge. Fugue. T.-setzkunst. Art of composition. T.-sprache. Music. T.-stück or -werk. Piece of music. T.-schrift. Musical notes. T.-verwandschaft. Relation of tones. T.-verziehung. Tempo rubato. T.-veränderung. Modulation. T.-werkzeug. Instrument (including the voice). T.-system, or wissenschaft. Theory of music. T.-zeichen. Note or other musical sign.

2. Pitch. den T. angaben (halten). To give (keep) the pitch. T.-höhe. Pitch. T.-lage. Register.

3. Key, octave-scale, mode, usually Tonart (tōn'-ärt). T.-anverwandschaft (fĕr-vänt'-shäft). Key-relationship. T.-geschlecht (gĕ-shlĕkht'). Mode (i. e , major or minor). Tonabstand (äp-shtänt). Interval. T.-achtel. Eighth note. T.-stufe. Degree. T.-umfang. Compass.

ton (tôn), F. 1. Tone. t. bouché (boo-shā). Stopped tone of a horn. t. entier (äñ-tĭ-ā). Whole tone. t. feint (făñ). Old term for flatted tone. t. ouvert (oo-văr). Open tone, of a wind-instr. t. générateur (zhā-nā-ră-tŭr). Fundamental. 2. Pitch. donner le t. Give the pitch. 3. Key, scale, mode. t. majeur (mineur). Major (minor) key. t. relatif. Related key. t. de l'église (dŭ lā-glēz). Church-mode. 4. Crook of a horn. t. de réchange, or du cor. Tuning-fork.

tonadica (tō-nä-dē'-kä), tonadilla (dēl'-yä), Sp. Cheerful song with guitar.

to'næ fic'ti, L. Transposed church-modes.

to'nal. Relating to a tone, a key, mode, etc. Vide FUGUE, and IMITATION.

Tonalität (tōn-äl-ĭ-tät'), G., tonalité (tôn-ăl-ĭ-tā), F., tonal'ity, E. The unity in key-relationship of a phrase or composition. It may pass out of the predominant key, but so long as it does not stray beyond the limits of easy return and constant relationship with this key, the composition has not overstepped its general tonality.

ton'do, I. Round, full (of tone).

tone. 1. A sound of musical quality and regular vibration as opposed to noise. 2. A sound, (a) of definite pitch, (b) of a definite quality. 3. A full interval of two semitones. 4. A mode. 5. Of aliquot, combinational, differential, partial, resultant, summational, etc., tones or difference-tones, overtones, etc. Vide those words, also ACOUSTICS. Of fifth-tones, quint-tones, third-tones. Vide QUINT-TONES. bridge-tone. Vide TONIC SOL-FA. tone-colour. The distinctive quality or timbre of a tone. tone-painting. Description by music. tone-poem. A musical expression of sentiment. determination of t. The investigation of vibrations, or tone-values, tone-relationship, etc. tone-relationship. Tones which concur in a major or minor chord are said to be of the first degree of relationship; c is so related to g, f, e, a♭, a, and e♭, etc.

tönen (tā'-nĕn), G. To sound. tö'nend. Sounding.

tongue. 1. Reed; or the vibrating metal slip of a reed; hence, tongue-pipes. 2. As a verb, to use the tongue in playing wind-instr.; called tonguing. Vide DOUBLE-TONGUING. Triple-tonguing is the rapid iteration by tongue-thrust with the consonants, t-k-t, t-k-t, etc.

ton'ic, E., tonica (tō'-nē-kä), I., To'nika, G., tonique (tō-nēk), F. 1. The key-note of a key, that on which the scale begins and ends, the tone from which a key takes its name, as C. 2. The tonic-chord, the diatonic chord built on the key-note. t.-pedal. Pedal-point on the key-note. t. section. One which closes with a cadence to the tonic of the chief key of the movement.

Tonic Sol-fa. A system of teaching singing, inv. by Sarah Ann Glover, of Norwich, and improved by Rev. John Curwen, and his son John Spencer Curwen. It consists, first, in analysis with constant reference to key-relations, or "tones in key"; the second element is a notation modified from solmisation (q. v.), and consisting of doh for do, ray for re, me for mi, fah for fa, soh for sol, lah for la, te for si. These take the place of notes and are written on one line by their initials, d, r, m, etc., an accent being affixed below or above the letter to indicate an octave lower or higher as d' r'. Sharps are sung dē, rē, etc.; flats dä, rä, etc. In modulation, bridge-tones are indicated by the new key-value of the tone large with its old key value small as ˢd. In notation, rhythm is expressed by time-spaces, the number varying according to the beats or pulses in the bar; a thick bar before a letter marks a strong accent; a colon a weak accent; a dot and a comma mark half and quarter beats; a dash indicates prolongation of tone; a rest is marked by a vacant space.

to'no, I. 1. Tone. 2. Key.

to'nos, Gr., to'nus, L. 1. A whole tone. t. grav'is, tris'tis, mys'ticus, harmon'icus, laet'us, devo'tus, angel'icus, perfect'us, respectively the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th tones in church-music. t. cur'rens. Reciting note. t. peregri'nus. Foreign tone. 2. Mode.

toquet (tō-kā), touquet, F. Toccato.

toomour'ah. Hindu tambourine.

too'rooree'. Brahmin trumpet.

toph (tôf), Heb. Hebrew tambourine.

torcelli (tôr-chĕl'-lē), I. Organs.

tosto (tôs'-tō). Quick, rapid. più tosto. Rather; sooner.

touch. 1. Act or style of pressing the keys of a key-board instr. 2. The response or resistance of the action.

touche (toosh), F. 1. Touch. 2. A digital. 3. A fret. 4. A finger-board.

toucher (too-shā), F. 1. As a noun, touch. 2. As a verb, to touch, play.

touchette (too-shĕt'), F. Fret.

toujours (too-zhoor), F. Always. Vide SEMPRE.

touquet (too-kā), F. Toccato.

tourdion (toor-dĭ-ôn), F. Saltarella 2.

tourmenté (toor-mäṅ-tā), F. Over-elaborated.

tourne-boute (toorn-boot), F. An instr. like a flute.

tour de force (toor dŭ fôrs), F. Bravura passage, etc.

tourniquet (toor-nĭ-kā), F. Plug, cap.

touta'ri. Hindu bagpipe.

tout (too), pl. touts (too), or toutes (toot), F. All. t. ensemble (too-täṅ-säṅ'-bl). All; the whole together; the general effect.

toy. A trivial air or dance. toy symphony. A comic work, particularly one by Haydn employing toy cuckoo, trumpet, etc.

tp. Abbr. of Timpani.

tr. Abbr. for trumpet or trill.

track'ers, E., Tractur (träk-toor'), G. Vide ORGAN.

tract, E., trac'tus, L. Solemn melodies sung from the Psalms during Lent in the Requiem Mass. The words are taken from the Psalms.

tradolce (trä-dōl'-chĕ), I. Very sweet.

tradotto (trä-dôt'-tō), I. Translated, arranged.

Tra'gen der Stim'me, G. Portamento.

trainé (trĕ-nā), F. 1. Slurred. 2. A slow waltz.

trait (trĕ), F. 1. Passage as t. de chant. Vocal run. 2. A phrase, progression. t. d'harmonie. Sequence. 3. Rule. t. d'octave. Rate of the octave.

traité (trĕ-tā), F. A treatise.

Traktur (träk-toor'), G. Trackers. Vide ORGAN.

tranquillezza (trän-kwĭl-lĕd'-zä), tranquillità (trän-kwĭl-lĭ-tä'), I. Tranquillity. tranquil'lo, tranquillamen'te. Calm(ly).

transcription (in F. träṅ-skrēps-yôṅ). A rearrangement of a composition for a different instr. or instrs. t.

uniforme. The notation, common in French bands, of writing all the transposing instrs. in the G clef.

tran'sient. Used of notes, chords and modulations that are merely passing and secondary, the means, not the end.

tran'sito, L., transit'ion (in F. träñ-ses-yôñ). 1. A modulation of transient value; so also in Tonic Sol-fa.

tran'situs, L. A passing note (usually t. re'gularis). t. irre'gularis. Changing note.

transponi(e)ren (pō-nē'-rĕn), G. To transpose. transponi'rende In'strumente. Transposing instrs.

transpose, E., transposer (träñ-spô-zā), F. To change the pitch of a composition to a key higher or lower. Thus the tonic is replaced by the tonic of the new key, the old dominant by the new, etc.

transposing. 1. Used of instruments, which are not written as they sound, but always in the key of C major. This is done so that the player's ease and accuracy may be insured, by keeping the fingering, etc., the same in all keys, the key of the instr. being changed by changing the instr. entirely or merely changing a crook. The extent of this transposition is the interval between the key of the instr. and the key of C major. So an instr. in B, sounds a half-tone lower than written; an instr. in E♭ sounds a major 6th below or a minor 3d above the actual note. 2. t. piano, etc., one in which, by a mechanism, the action is shifted to higher or lower pitch. t.-scale. Vide MODES.

transpositeur (träñs-pō-zĭ-tŭr'), F. 1. One who transposes. 2. A single-valve inv. by Gautrot as a substitute for the series usually used. 3. A key-board instr., piano t., inv. by A. Wolff, 1873.

transposition (in G. träns-pō-zē'-tsĭ-ōn). The changing of the key of a composition. T.-skalen. Transposing Scales. Vide MODES.

transverse flute. Vide FLUTE.

traquenard (trăk-năr), F. A brisk dance.

trascinando (trä-shĭ-nän'-dō), I. Dragging, retarding.

trascrit'to, I. Copied, transcribed.

trasportato (trä-spôr-tä'-tō), I. Transposed. chiavi trasportati. Vide CHIAVETTE.

tratt. Abbr. of trattenuto.

trattato (trät-tä'-tō), I. Treatise.

trattenuto (noo'-tō), I. Retarded.

Trauergesang (trow'-ĕr-gĕ-zäng), G. Dirge. Trauermarsch (märsh). Funeral-march. trauervoll. Sad. traurig (trow'-rĭkh). Heavy, sad.

travailler (trä-vī-yā), F. To work; to lead, play solo part. travaillé (vī-yā). Worked up elaborately.

Travers'flöte. 1. A cross-flute. 2. A 4-ft. stop.

traversière (trä-vĕrs-yăr), F., traverso (trä-vĕr'-sō). Vide FLUTE.

tre (trā), I. Three. a tre. For three voices or instrs. tre cor'de. Loud-pedal. Vide PIANO. tre volte. Three times.

treble. 1. The highest voice, soprano (from triplum, q. v.). 2. Highest part of a comp. 3. Highest register. 4. The highest of a group of instrs. t. clef. The G clef. t. forte stop. A stop for cabinet organs, increasing the treble at will, while the bass remains soft. t. staff. The staff on which the treble clef is placed.

Tredezime (trā-dā'-tsē-mĕ), G. Thirteenth.

treibend (trī'-bĕnt), G. Hurrying, accelerating.

treizième (trĕz-yĕm), F. Thirteenth.

tremblant (träñ-blän), F., tremen'do, I. Shaking. trembler (blā), F. To trill. Vide TREMULANT. tremblement (träñ-bl-mäñ), F. A trill, shake.

tremolando (trām-ō-län'-dō), tremolate (lä'-tĕ), tremolo (trā'-mō-lō), tremulo (trā'-moo-lō), I. Trembling, trilling, quivering, reiterated with great rapidity.

trem'olant, trem'ulant. A stop which gives to the tone a waving or trembling effect.

tremore (trā-mō'-rĕ), tremoro'so, I. Tremor(ous).

tremuli(e)ren (trā-moo-lē'-rĕn). To trill.

trench'more. An old dance in triple or compound duple time.

trénise (trā-nēz), F. Vide QUADRILLE.

trenodia (trā-nō'-dĭ-ä), I. A funeral-dirge.

très (trĕ), F. Very.

tres'ca, trescone (trĕs-kō'-nĕ), I. A country-dance.

Treter (trā'-tĕr), G. Bellows treader.

tri'ad, E., triade (in F. trē-ăd; in I. trē-ä'-dĕ). A chord of three tones. Vide CHORD. harmonic t. Major triad.

tri'angle, E. (in F. trē-äṅgl), Triangel (trē'-äng-ĕl), G., triangolo (trē-än'-gō-lō), I., triangulo (trē-än'-goo-lō), Sp., triang'ulus, L. A small steel rod bent into a triangle and tapped with a straight rod, for emphasising rhythm. Triangular harp. Vide HARP.

tri'as, L. Triad. t. defic'iens. Imperfect chord. t. harmo'nica. Perfect chord.

tri'chord. The three-stringed lyre. t. piano. One with three strings tuned in unison for each note. trichord'on. 3-stringed colachon.

Trichter (trĭkh'-tĕr), G. 1. Tube of a reed-pipe. 2. Bell of horn, etc.

tricin'ium, L. An unaccompanied trio.

tricorde (trē-kôr'-dĕ), I. 3-stringed.

tridiapa'son, Gr. A triple octave.

tri'gon, trigo'num. A 3-stringed lyre-like instrument.

trihemito'nium, Gr. Minor third.

trill, trille (trē'-yŭ), F., Triller (trĭl'-lĕr), G., rillo (trĭl'-lō), I. The rapid alternation of a principal note with an auxiliary, usually the major or minor second above (a small chromatic sign being set above the note when its auxiliary is not to be diatonic). The trill begins on the auxiliary note only when the auxiliary is written as a grace note before the principal, in this case the trill ends on the principal; normally it ends on the auxiliary. A trill is long or short (trillette (trē-yĕt), F., trillet'ta, trillet'to, I.) according to the duration of the principal, the short trill sometimes amounting only to a mordent. A series of trills on different notes is a chain of trills (Trillerket'te). A mere rough rattle on one note instead of two notes crisply trilled is called goat-trill, Bockstriller, chèvrotement, or trillo caprino. trillettino (tē'nō), I. A soft trill. imperfect t. One without a turn at the close. In Caccini's Method, 1601, the trillo was the reiteration of a single note, our trill being called gruppo. trillando (trēl-län'-dō), I. 1. Trilling. 2. A succession, or chain, of shakes on different notes. trillern (trĭl'-lĕrn), G. To trill. Vide GRACES and SIGNS.

trine (trēn). A triad, with 2 major thirds.

Trinkgesang (trĭnk'-gĕ-zäng), T.-lied (lēt), G. Drinking-song.

trino'na. Open 8-ft. stop.

trio (trē'-ō), I. 1. A composition for three instrs. or voices, often in sonata form. pianoforte trio. pf., vln., and cello. string trio (vln., viola (or 2d vln.), and cello). (The name was formerly used for 3 instrs., accompanied by a fourth playing basso continuo.) organ trio. A strongly contrasted work for 2 manuals and pedal or for 3 manuals. 2. In the dance-form, the contrastingly quiet or lyrical second division. Gaining its name from being once written in 3 parts, the word should now be laid aside as meaningless and confusing, and the phrase second part, or second subject used instead.

Triole (trĭ-ō'-lĕ), G., triolet (in F. trĕ-ō-lā). A triplet.

triomphale (trē-ôṅ-făl), F., trionfale (trē-ōn-fä'-lĕ), I. Triumphal. triomphant (trē-ôṅ-fäṅ), F., trionfante (trē-ôn-fän'tĕ), I. Triumphant.

tripar'tite. In three parts. tripel (trē'-pĕl), G. Triple, as T. fuge, triple fugue. T.-konzert. Triple concerto. T.-takt. Triple time. T.-zunge. Triple-tonguing. triph'ony. Three sounds heard at once. tripho'nia. Organum in 3 parts. triphonisch (trē-fō'-nĭsh), G. Triphonic, 3-voiced. tripla (trē'-plä), I. Triple time. t. de min'ima. 1. 3-2 time. 2. Triplet. triple (in F. trēp'-l). Threefold. Vide COUNTERPOINT, TIME, etc. t.-croche (krôsh). 32d note. trip'let. A group of three equal notes. doublet. A sextole. trip'lum, L. The third part in organum, hence the highest; in 4-part next to the highest, the 4th being called quadruplum; if there is a 5th it is called quintuplum, etc.
tripola (trē'-pō-lä), I. Tripla.
Trisa'gion, Gr., Trisa'gium, L. "Thrice Holy," the Sanctus. trisemito'nium, L. Minor third.
tristezza (trĭs-tĕd'-zä), I. Sadness. tristro'pha, Gr. Triple square note of the greater stress. triton (trē-tôn), F., tritone (trī'-tōn), E., tritono (trē-tō'-nō), I., tri'tonus, L. (in G. trē-tō-noos'). An augmented fourth; long a forbidden interval in strict writing, since it was augmented and was said to be hard to sing. mi chord of the t. Third inversion of the dominant seventh, which contains the tritone. Vide MI.
tri'ton a'vis, L. "3-toned bird," a West-Indian bird, capable of singing a note, and its twelfth and seventeenth, all at the same time.
Tritt (trĭt), G. Treadle, pedal. Tritt'schuh (shoo). Place for the foot on bellows. Tritt'harfe. Pedal-harp. Tritt'bret or T.-holz. The board on which the bellows-treader steps. tri'tus, L. Lydian Church-mode. triumphirend (trē-oom-fē'-rĕnt), G. Triumphant. Triumphlied (lēt). Song of triumph. trois (trwä), F. Three. mesure à trois-deux (trwä-dŭ). 3-2 time. A trois-huit (trwä zwēt). 3-8 time. trois-quatre (trwä kătr). 3-4 time. troll. 1. Round or catch. 2. As a verb, to sing a catch. tromba (trōm'-bä), I. 1. A trumpet. 2. 8-ft. reed-stop. t. croma'tica, I. Valve trumpet. t.-bas'sa, or di bas'so, or spezzata (spĕd-zä-tä). The bass trumpet. t. da tirar'si. Old slide trumpet, perhaps a soprano trombone. t.-marina (ma-rē'-nä), I. Marine trumpet. spezzata (spĕd-zä'-tä), I. An obsolete name for the bass trombone. t. sor'da. Muted trumpet. trombadore (dō'-rĕ), trombacelloclyde. A B♭ ophicleide. trombet'ta, trombettino (tē'-no), trombettatto're- or iere. (ĭ-ā'-rĕ). 1. Trumpet. 2. A small trumpet. trombone (in E. träm'-bōn; in I. trôm-bō'-nĕ; in F. trôṅ-bŭn), I., pl. -i. 1. A trumpet-like instr. with valves; or more anciently, with a tube that may be lengthened or shortened by means of a U-shaped portion to be pushed in or drawn out. This slide moving by semitones has seven positions, each of which virtually, makes a separate instr. of it with a distinct key, the partial tones of this being obtained by variations of pressure (vide EMBOUCHURE). The tone of the instr., though suffering from misuse in bad hands, is of the utmost richness, dignity and humanity. Berlioz calls it "epic." It is a non-transposing instr. in four sizes, the tenor being most used; the tenor and alto are written on the C clef; the bass and contrabass on the F clef; compasses; tenor, chromatic E–b'♭ (with pedal-tones G,–B, ♭, and difficult tones b'–d''); alto, A–e''♭; bass B,–f'. 2. A powerful 8, 16 or 32 ft. stop.
Trommel (trôm'-mĕl), G. Drum. gros'se T. Bass drum. Militär-t., or Wirbel-t. Side drum. Roll-t. Tenor drum. T.-bass. A bass note thumped drum-wise. T.-boden (bō'-den). Bottom of a drum. T.-kas'ten. The body of a drum. T.-klöpfel (klĕp-fĕl), or T.-schlägel (shlā-gĕl). Drumsticks. T.-schläger. Drummer. trom'meln. To drum; drumming.

Trommelstück (trôm'-mĕl-shtük), G. Tambourine, tabor.

trompe (trôṅp), F. 1. Hunt-horn. 2. Reed-stop. t. de Béarn (dŭ bā-ărn), or à laquais (ä lăk-ĕ'). Jew's harp.

Trompete (trôm-pā'-tĕ), G. 1. Trumpet. 2. A reed-stop. Trompetengeige. Marine trumpet. Trompetenzug (tsookh). Trumpet-stop. Trompeter (trôm-pā'-tĕr), trompéteur (trôṅ-pā-tŭr), F. Trumpeter.

trompette (trôṅ-pĕt), F. 1. A trumpet. 2. Trumpeter. 3. A reed-stop. t. à coulisse (ä koo-lēs). Slide-trumpet. t. à clefs (ä klā). The trumpet with keys. t. à pistons (ä pēs-tôṅ). Valve trumpet. t. d'harmonie (dăr-mŭ-nē). Orchestral t. t. harmonieuse (ăr-môn-yŭz). Trombone. t. marine. Marine trumpet. t. harmonique (ăr-mŭn-ēk). A reed-stop.

troop. 1. A quick march for trooping the colors. 2. The 2d drum-beat as a march-signal.

trope, tro'pus. 1. A Gregorian formula for the close of the lesser doxology. 2. Mode.

troppo (trôp'-pō), I. Too, too much. lento ma non t. Slow, but not too slow.

troubadour (troo-bä-door), F., trovador (trō-vă-dhôr), Sp., trovatore (trō-vä-tō'-rĕ), I. A poet musician, usually of noble rank, skilled in singing, chiefly of love. The cult arising in Southern France, flourished widely from the 11th Century. The t. sometimes had hired minstrels (ménestrels, ménétriers, or jongleurs) in attendance on him. trouvères (troovăr), F. A cult of poet-musicians contemporary with and often confused with the troubadours, but more characteristic of the north of France, and singing songs rather of war and epic struggle than of love.

trüb(e) (trüp or trü'-bĕ), G. Sad.

Trug (trookh), G. Deception. T.-fortschreitung. Progression of a dissonance, not to its resolution, but to another dissonance. T.-kadenz, or -schluss. Vide CADENCE.

Trumbscheit (troomp'-shīt), G. Marine trumpet.

trump. 1. Trumpet. 2. Jew's harp.

trump'et. 1. A metal wind-instr. with a tube half as long as that of the horn, but bent in longer folds, and with a smaller bell. The tube is narrow and cylindrical till near the bell; the mouthpiece is hemispherical and cupped. It is a transposing instr. written in the G clef (almost always), and in the key of C. Its pitch is an octave higher than that of the horn, and it is used in fewer keys. It is the most commanding of all brass instrs., but its stopped tones are unpleasant. It should be written for in a distinctly vocal manner. It is fitted with crooks to give it any key, the tone being produced by embouchure (q. v.) except in the valve; or chromatic, trumpet; which is displacing the older form. Its extreme compass is d–b''♭. In England the slide trumpet is used, working like a trombone but with shorter slide. Trumpets of the same key but sounding an octave apart are called alto (high), and basso (low). 2. An 8-ft. reed-stop.

marine trumpet. An old instr. once used for signalling in the English navy, hence its name; also used in convents, whence it was called "nun's fiddle." It was played chiefly in harmonics, and had one thick gut string, sometimes an octave string, and one or more drone-strings. The box was long and thin with short neck and flat belly; one foot of the bridge rested loosely producing a powerful resonance. harmonic t. A sackbut. reed-t. A trumpet with 36 brass-reeded pipes inclosed, arranged in a circle, so that each pipe was brought in turn between the mouthpiece and the bell.

Trumscheit (troom'-shīt), G. Marine trumpet.

t. s. Abbr. of Tasto Solo. tscheng (chĕng). Cheng. tschung (choong). Chinese gong. tuba (too′-bä), I. 1. The lowest of the saxhorns (q. v.), an enormous brass horn with four pistons, a trombone-like mouthpiece, and a compass of 4 octaves. It is a non-transposing instr. (except in the case of a tenor-tuba in B♭, and a bass-tuba in F so written by Wagner), and is written in the G clef. It is usually made of 3 sizes, the bass or the euphonium, in B flat (compass available B♭–f′), or in E♭; the bombardon, a fifth lower; and the contrabass tuba (or bombardon) in B♭ an octave lower than the Euphonium. 2. The straight Roman trumpet, or t. communis; the t. duc′tilis, being curved. 3. t. curva. A limited natural French trumpet of the 18th Century. 4. A powerful 8-ft. reed-stop. t. major, t. mirab′ilis, t. clarion. A 4-ft. stop. tu′bicen, L. A trumpeter. tuck′et. A flourish of trumpets. tuiau (twē-ō), F. Tuyau. tumultuoso (too-mool-too-ō′-sō), I. Agitated.
tun. Ancient Yucatan drum.
tune. An air or melody, usually short and simple. tu′ner. 1. One who tunes instruments. 2. The flap or cut in the top of a pipe by which it is tuned. 3. Tuning-cone. tu′ning. 1. The correction of the tone-production of an instr. 2. Accordature. t.-cone or horn. A cone of horn or metal which can be inserted in the top of an organ-pipe; by "coning out" or increasing its flare and raising its pitch; by "coning in" or pressing it, point upwards, over the top of a pipe, it decreases the flare and lowers the pitch. t.-crook. Vide CROOK. t.-fork. A small steel instr. with two prongs which upon being struck sounds a certain fixed tone. t.-hammer or key. A hand-wrench. t. slide. 1. An English instr. for producing thirteen semitones. 2. An adjustable U-shaped portion of the tube of certain brass instrs. t. wire. Vide REED and PIPE.
tuono (too-ō′-nō), I. 1. Mode, as t. ecclesias′tico. Church-mode. 2. Tone.
tuorbe (twôrb), F. Theorbo. tur′ba, pl. -æ, L. "Crowd, multitude." The heathen or Jewish chorus in Passion music.
turbinoso (toor-bĭ-nō′-so), I. Tempestuous. turbo (toor′-bō), Gr. A seashell trumpet.
turco (toor′-kō), I. Turkish. alla turca. In the style of Turkish music.
turdion (toor′-dĭ-ōn), Sp., turchesco (toor-kā′-skō), I. An old dance. türkish (tür′-kĭsh), G. Turkish. Turkisch-muzik. Janizary music. turn. An embellishment consisting of a principal tone (struck twice) and one higher and one lower auxiliary a diatonic second removed, unless a chromatic sign accompanies the symbol; if a sharp or flat is placed above the turn-mark, it alters the higher auxiliary; if below, the lower. The common, direct, or regular turn usually begins on the upper auxiliary; the back or inverted t. begins with the lower; the rebounding or trilled t. begins with a passing shake; the double t. affects two notes at once. Vide GRACES.
turr. 3-stringed Burmese violin.
Tusch (toosh), G. A triple flourish of trumpets and drums.
Tute (too′-tĕ), G. Cornet. tutta (toot′-tä), tutto, pl. tutte (toot′-tĕ), or tutti (toot′-tē), I. All; the entire band or chorus; in a solo or concerto it means that the full orchestra is to come in. tutte corde (kôr′-dĕ). "All the strings"; i. e., release the soft pedal. tutti. Full band or chorus—the entire force. tutto ar′co. With the whole bow.
tuyau (twe′-yō), F. 1. Tube, as of a horn. 2. Pipe. t. à anche. Reed-pipe. t. à bouche. Flue-pipe.

twelfth. 1. An interval of an octave plus a fifth. 2. A stop twelve tones above the diapasons. twenty-second. A triple octave. twice-marked, or -accented. Vide PITCH. two-lined. Vide PITCH. two-time. Duple time. two-step. A dance in 6-8 time, somewhat resembling the waltz, but in duple accent. tymb'estere. Vide TOMBESTERE. tym'pan. 1. Timbrel. 2. Drum. 3. Irish instr., perhaps the crowd. tympani (tĭm'-pä-nē), I., pl. Kettle-drums. tympanis'ta. Kettle-drummer. tympanischi'za. Marine trumpet. tympan'on (tēm-pä-nôń), F. 1. Dulcimer. 2. Kettle-drum. tym'panum, L. 1. Ancient drum resembling the kettle-drum. 2. Kettle-drum. 3. The water-wheel in old hydraulic organs. ty'pophone. A piano-like instr., with steel wands instead of strings, compass c'–c''''. tyrolienne (tē-rōl-yĕn), F. 1. Song, or dance peculiar to the Tyrolese; and characterised by the jodel. 2. Round dance in 3-4 time. tzeltze'lim, Heb. Cymbals. tzet'ze. Abyssinian guitar. tzi'ti. Hindu bagpipe.

U

ÜBELKLANG (ü'-bĕl-kläng) or -laut (lowt), G. Discord. üben (ü'-bĕn), G. To practise. über (ü'-bĕr), G. Over, above. Ü.-einstimmung (īn-shtĭm-moongk). Harmony. ü.-geführt (gĕ-fürt). Divided (of stops). ü.-greifen (grī-fĕn). (a) To cross the hands; (b) to lift the thumb from the neck of a 'cello. ü.-greifendes System (zēs'-tām). Hauptmann's plan of forming a new key-system by adding to the group of triads of one key, a triad in its dominant or sub-dominant key.
Ü.-blasen (blä-zĕn). Overblowing, to overblow. Ü.-gang (gäng). Transition, modulation. Ü.-leitung (lī-toongk). Transition passage. ü.-mässig (mĕs-sĭkh). Augmented. ü.-schlagen (shlä'-gĕn). (a) To cross over (the hands). (b) To overblow. (c) To break. ü.-setzen (zĕt'-zĕn). To pass a finger over the thumb; or one foot over the other. ü.-steigen (shtī'-ghĕn). For a part to soar temporarily higher than the part normally above it.
Übung (ü-boongk), G. (pl. -en). Exercise; a study. Übungsabend. Pupils' concert.
ugab (oo'-gäb), Heb. An organ. uguale (oo-gwä'-lĕ), I. Equal, like. ugualità (lĭ-tä'). Equality. ugualmen'te. Equality, alike. umana (oo-mä'-nä), I. Human. voce u. (vō'-chĕ). 1. The human voice. 2. A stop.
Umfang (oom'-fäng), G. Compass. umgekehrt (oom-gĕ-kārt'), G. Reversed, inverted.
Umkehrung (oom-kā'-roongk), G. Inversion. umore (oo-mō'-rĕ), I. Humour.
um (oom), G. Prefix about, around. umschlagen (slä'-gĕn). 1. To break, to make a pronounced change of register. 2. To overblow. 3. To make the goose. Um'stimmung (shtĭm-moongk). (a) Change. (b) Cordature, pitch or key.
un. Abbr. of Unison. un (ŭń), F., un (oon), una (oo'-nä), uno (oo'-nō), I. A, an, one. unaccented. Vide PITCH. unaccompanied. Without instrumental accompaniment. unacknowledged. Used of passing or unessential notes.
un'ca, L. "Hooked"; quarter note. bis unca. 16th note. uncoupled. With coupler released.
und (oont), G. And.
un'da ma'ris, L. "Wave of the sea." A stop tuned sharp or flat and producing an undulating effect by means of beats; sometimes a pipe with two mouths, one higher than the other.

undecima (oon-dä-chē′-mä), L. and I. An eleventh. undecimole (oon-dā-chĭ-mō′-lĕ), I. A group of eleven equal notes. underchord. The minor triad. underpart. That beneath, or subordinate to others.
undersong. A burden.
undertone. A lower partial sometimes produced by the simultaneous sounding of two higher tones. (Vide ACOUSTICS.) Undezime (oon-dā′-tsē-mĕ), G. An eleventh. Unde′zimo′le. Undecimole. undula′tion, E., undulazione (oon-doo-lä-tsĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. Vibrato effect on bow instruments. une (ün), F. A, an, one. uneigentliche (oon-ī′-gĕnt-lĭkh-ĕ). Irregular (of fugue). unendlich(er) (oon-ĕnt′-lĭkh-(ĕr)), G. Endless (of canon). unequal. 1. Vide TEMPERAMENT. 2. Of voices = mixed. unessen′tial. Used of passing and grace notes, etc. unfret′ted. Vide FRETTED. ungar (oon′-gär), ungarisch (oon-gä′-rĭsh), G. Hungarian. ungebunden (oon-gĕ-boont′-ĕn), G. 1. Vide FRETTED. 2. Unconstrained. ungeduldig (oon-gĕ-dool′-dĭkh), G. Impatient. ungerade Takt (oon-gĕ-rä′-dĕ täkt), G. Triple time. ungestrichen (oon-gĕ-strĭkh′-ĕn). Unaccented. Vide PITCH. ungestüm (oon′-gĕ-shtüm), G. Impetuous. ungezwungen (oon-gĕ-tsvoong′-ĕn), G. Easy. ungleich (oon′-glīkh). Unequal. Vide COUNTERPOINT. ungleichschwebende (shvā-bĕn-dĕ). Unequal, of temperament (q. v.). unharmo′nischer Querstand (kwär′-shtänt) or umstand (oom′-shtänt). False relation. u′nichord, E., unichor′dum, L. 1. Monochord. 2. Marine trumpet. union (ün-yôn), F. Union. u. des régistres (dā rā-zhĕstr). Blending of registers. unione (oo-nĭ-ō′-nĕ), I. Coupler.
u′nison (in G., oo-nĭ-zōn′), uniso′nus, L., unisono (oo-nē-sō′-nō), I.; unisson (ü-nĭs-sôn), F. 1. Identity of pitch. 2. Any octave of a pitch. 3. A tone of the same or octave pitch. 4. A prime, hence augmented unison. 5. A group of 2 or 3 strings tuned in the piano to one note. all' unisono, à l'unisson, in unison, or progressing in the unison or the octave. unis′onant, unis′onous. In unison or octave.
unito (oo-nē′-tō), unitamen′te, I. United(ly). uniti cancels divisi (q. v.). unmeasured. Without definite measure.
uno (oo′-nō), una (oo′-nä), I. One; a, an. uno a uno. One by one; one after another. unrein (oon′-rīn′), G. Impure; out of tune. unruhig (oon-roo′-ĭkh), G. Restless; uneasy. unschuldig (oon-shool′-dĭkh), G. Innocent. unsingbar (oon-zĭng′-bär), G. Not singable. unstrung. Of strings (a) relaxed in tension, (b) removed entirely. unter (oon′-tĕr), G. Under, below, sub. U.-bass (bäs). Double bass. U.-brechung (brĕkh′-oongk). Interruption. u.-brochen (brôkh-ĕn). Interrupted. U.-dominante (dō-mĭ-nän′-tĕ). Subdominant. U.-halbton (hälp-tōn). Half-step below. U.-haltungsstück (häl-toongs-shtük). Divertissement. U.-leitton (līt-tōn). Dominant seventh. U.-mediante (mā-dĭ-änt′-ĕ). Submediant. U.-satz (zäts). Supporter; a 32-ft. stop on the pedal. u.-setzen (zĕt′-zĕn). To pass the thumb under a finger; or one foot under another. U.-stimme. Lowest voice, or part. U.-tasten (täs-tĕn). The white keys of the piano or organ. U.-töne (tā-nĕ).

Untertönreihe (rī-ĕ). Vide UNDERTONES.

unverziert (oon-fĕr-tsērt′), G. Unornamented.

unvolkommen (oon′-fôl-kôm-mĕn), G. Incomplete.

uomo (oo-ō′-mō), I. A man. Vide PRIMO.

up-beat. 1. The raising of the hand or bâton, hence 2. An unaccented part of a measure.

up-bow. Vide BOW.

upright. Vide PIANO.

ura′nion. An instrument like the harpsichord or piano.

uhr-heen. Chinese violin.

upper-clang. Vide CLANG.

uscir di tuono (oo′-shēr dē too-ō-′nō), I. To get out of tune.

u′sus, L. 1. The rules of music. 2. Old synonym for neumes and the neume system.

ut (üt in F.; in I. and L. oot). 1. In France the key and note C, so used also in indicating pitch, as ut 2. 2. Vide SOLMISATION. 3. In Latin, as, like that. ut supra. As above, as before.

Ut que′ant lax′is, L. Vide SOLMISATION.

V Abbr. for vide = see; violin(s); volti; voce.

va (vä), I. Go on. va crescendo (krĕ-shĕn′-dō), I. Go on increasing the volume.

vaccilando (vät-chĭ-län′-dō), vacci-lante (län′-tĕ), I. Wavering, irregular.

va′gans, L. Vague. Vide QUINTUS.

vago (vä′-gō), I. Vague, rambling.

valce (väl′-chĕ), I. Waltz.

valeur (vă-lŭr), F., val′or, L., valore (vä-lō′-rĕ), I. Duration (of a note).

valse (vals), F. Waltz; used in E. rather of a concert-piece (v. de salon), than of a strict dance-tune. v. chantée (shäṅ-tā), vocal waltz. v. à deux temps (dŭ täṅ). A quick waltz, with two steps in each measure.

value. Duration of a note or rest.

valve, valvola (väl′-vō-lä), I. 1. The device inv. by Claggett, 1790, and Blühmel, 1813, by which natural brass instrs. are made chromatic. A natural horn produces the fundamental tone naturally made by a column of air of its exact length; it can be made to produce a series of partials of this tone by the method of blowing. Vide EMBOUCHURE and ACOUSTICS. The key of the horn can be changed by substituting for one section of its tube a longer or shorter section called a crook, which alters the length of the horn, and the column of air, and alters therefore its fundamental key and gives it a new series of partials. Until the valve-mechanism was invented a horn could therefore play only in one key at a time. Valve instrs. have auxiliary tubes fitted to the main tube; they are, in fact, merely stationary crooks. The pressure of a certain valve acts as an instantaneous change of crook by shutting off the air in one crook, and turning it into another of different length. This device permits the sounding of a complete chromatic scale along the instrument's whole range. The valves are usually three in number, the first lowering the pitch a semitone, the second a tone, the third three semitones, thus giving a command of all keys (cf. HARP), (a) the piston, or piston-valve, is a plunger in an air-tight cylinder; by means of two holes the plunger at rest carries the air through the main tube; when pressed it shuts off the main tube and opens a side-tube, thus changing the key; a spiral spring restores it after pressure to the natural position. (b) the rotary valve is a stop-cock with four holes which produce the same effect. 2. organ-valves are (a) suction-valves, or suckers, which admit the wind to the bellows and retain it there; (b) joint-valves which regulate the air-density in the wind channels. (c) key-valves or pallets, which are worked by a draw-stop; and (d) the waste-pallet relieving the bellows of surplus air.

valzer (väl-tsār), I. Waltz. v. a due passi. Two-step.

vamp. 1. To improvise an accompaniment or prelude. 2. Such an accompaniment or prelude.

variamento (vä-rĭ-ä-mĕn′-tō), I. Variation, difference. variamen′te. Varied, freely.

Varia′tion, E. (in G. fä-rĭ-ä-tsĭ-ōn′, pl. -en; in F. văr-ĭ-ăs-yôṅ), variazione (vä-rĭ-ä-tsĭ-ō′-nĕ, pl. -i), I. The manipulation of a given theme or air. In the old sense (called doubles), and in cheap modern usage such as "Home, sweet Home with variations," the air is simply smothered in ornaments, arpeggios, etc.; in the better sense (character variations) the theme is subjected to as much remodelling, inversion, change of note-value, etc., as is possible without losing entire sight of its original meaning; sometimes merely the chord-relations are preserved. variato (vä-rĭ-ä′-tō), I., varié (vă-rĭ-ā), F. Treated with variation.

varsoviana (ä′-nä), I., varsovienne (vĭ-ĕn), F. "Warsaw dance." Slow Polish dance in 3-4 time with an uptake of a quarter note, and an accented down-beat in every other measure.

vaudeville (vō̤d-vēl), F. 1. A country ballad or roundelay, usually satirical. 2. Operatic or musical comedy.

vc., vcello. Abbr. for violoncello.

veemente (vā-ā-mĕn′-tĕ), I. Vehement. veemenza (mĕn′-tsä). Force.

veiled, velato (vā-lä′-tō), I. Marked by a desirable softening of the metallic quality of a tone; usually acquired by a slight escape of breath.

vellutato (vĕl-loo-tä′-tō), I. Velvety, smooth.

veloce (vĕ-lō′-chĕ), velocemen′te, I. Swift(ly). velocis′simo. With extreme rapidity. velocità (chē-tä′). Rapidity.

veneziana (vĕ-nā-tsĭ-ä′-nä), I. Venetian.

vent′age. A hole in flutes, etc., to be stopped with finger or key.

Ventil (in G. fĕn′-tĭl), ventile (vĕn-tē′-lĕ), I. 1. Valve, hence Ventilhorn or -kornett. 2. Organ-valve.

vêpres (vĕpr), F. Vespers.

venusto (vā-noos′-tō), I. Beautiful, charming.

Veränderungen (fĕr-ĕn′-dĕr-oong-ĕn), G., pl. Variations.

Verbindung (fĕr-bĭn′-doongk) G. Binding, combination. V.-szeichen (tsī-khĕn), G. Tie.

verdeckt (fĕr-dĕkt′), G. Hidden.

verdoppelt (fĕr-dôp′-pĕlt), G. Doubled. Verdop′pelung (oongk). Doubling.

Verengung (fĕr-ĕng′-oongk), G. Diminution of value or interval.

vergellen (fĕr-gĕl′-lĕn), G. To diminish.

vergliedern (fĕr-glē′-dĕrn), G. To articulate.

vergnügt (fĕr-gnükht), G. Cheerful.

Vergrösserung (fĕr-grĕs′-sĕr-oongk), G. Augmentation.

Verhältniss (fĕr-hĕlt′-nĭs), G. Ratio or proportion.

verhallend (fĕr-häl′-lĕnt), G. Dying away.

ver′ilay. Vaudeville.

Verkehrung (fĕr-kā′-roongk), G. Imitation in contrary motion, Verkleinerung (fĕr-klī′-nĕr-oongk), G. Diminution.

Verkürzung (fĕr-kür′-tsoongk), G. Diminution of value.

Verlängerungszeichen (fĕr-lĕng′-ĕr-oongs-tsī′-khĕn), G. Dot of prolongation.

verlöschend (fĕr-lĕsh′-ĕnt), G. Dying away.

vermindert (fĕr-mĭn′-dĕrt), G. Diminished.

Vermittelungssatz (fer-mĭt′-tĕl-oongks-zäts), G. Episode.

verrillon (vĕr-ē-yôṅ), F. Mouth-harmonica.

Verschiebung (fĕr-shē′-boongk), G. "Shift," soft pedal. ohne V. Without soft pedal. mit V. With soft pedal.

verschwindend (fĕr-shvĭn'-dĕnt), G. Dying away.

verse. 1. Portion of an anthem or service to be sung by a soloist to each part, and not by the full chorus; hence Verse-anthem, and Verse-service for solo voices. 2. Line. 3. Stanza.

verset' (in F. vĕr-sā), versetto (vĕr-sĕt'-tō), I., Versette (fĕr-sĕt'-tĕ), G. 1. Short piece for the organ. 2. Versicle. versetzen (fĕr-zĕt'-sĕn), G. To transpose. Verset'zung (zoongk). Transposition. Verset'-zungszeichen (tsī'-khĕn). The sharp, flat, and natural.

ver'sicle, E., Versikel (fĕr'-sĭk-ĕl), G. A short phrase or line, combining with the response to form one sentence.

versila're, L. To sing antiphonally.

verso (vĕr'-sō), I. 1. Verse. 2. Air.

Verspätung (fĕr-shpā'-toongk), G. Retardation.

verstärkt (fĕr-shtĕrkt'), G. Sforzando.

verstimmt (fĕr-shtĭmt'), G. 1. Out of tune. 2. Depressed.

ver'tatur, ver'te, L. Turn over. v. subito. Turn quickly.

ver'tical. Of piano-strings, in one plane; opposed to overstrung.

vertönen (fĕr-tā'-nĕn), G. To die away.

verve (vĕrv), F. Spirit, energy.

verwandt (fĕr-vänt'), G. Related, relative. V.-schaft (shäft). Relationship.

Verwechselung (fĕr-vĕkh'-sĕl-oongk), G. Change, mutation, of key, etc.

verweilend (fĕr-vī'-lĕnt), G. Retarding.

Verwerfung (fĕr-vĕrf'-oongk), G. Transposing.

verzi(e)rt (fĕr-tsērt'), G. Embellished. Verzi(e)rung (tsē'-roongk). Ornament. Verzögerung (fĕr-tsākh'-ĕ-roongk), G. Retardation.

verzweiflungsvoll (fĕr-tsvī'-floongs-fôl), G. Full of despair.

Vesper (fĕs'-pĕr), G., vespero (vĕs'-pĕ-rō), vespro (vĕs'-prō), I., ves'-peræ, L. Vespers. Vide HORÆ.

vesperti'ni psal'mi, I., pl. Evening psalms.

vezzoso (vĕd-zō'-sō), I., vezzosamen'-te, I. Graceful(ly), tender(ly).

vi. Abbr. for violini.

vibrante (vē-brän'-tĕ), I. Vibrating, quivering.

vibrato (vē-brä'-tō), I. 1. Vibrating, resonant. 2. A strongly tremulous tone of distinct vibrations.

vibra'tion (in F. vē-brăs-yôn). The regular oscillation of an elastic body, as a string, sounding-board, etc., contributing rapid periodic changes in the density of the air, which conveys the motion in sound-waves to the ear (without the air the vibrations are not conveyed to the air as sound; in a vacuum, a bell, for example, is not audible). The strength of the tone varies according to the amplitude or breadth of vibrations (travelling-distance of the elastic body back and forth); the pitch of the tone varies directly with the rapidity of the vibrations. The vibration-numbers of sounds vary in inverse ratio with the length of their sound-wave. A single vibration is from the point of rest to one extreme of motion, but is often calculated from one extreme to the opposite. A double vibration is measured from one extreme to the opposite and back again. sympathetic v. is that which is set up in an object (as a string, tuning-fork or even a plate) when the tone to which it vibrates naturally is sounded by some other instrument. Thus press the loud pedal of a piano, to remove the dampers, and sing or play on a violin any note. This note will be heard at once sounding on the piano-string. Furthermore, its partials will be similarly heard.

vic'ar-choral. Lay vicar of a cathedral choir.

vicenda (vē-chĕn'-dä), I. Change. vicendevole (dā'vō-lĕ). Vacillating.

Vic'timæ pas'chali lau'des, L. "Praise the paschal offering." Vide SEQUENCE.

vi'de, vi'di, L. See. vi- is often put at the beginning of a passage to be cut, and -de at the end.

vide (vēd), F. "Empty"; open, of strings, as corde à v. opp. to corde à jouer, a string to be stopped.

Videl (fē'-dĕl), G. Fiddle.

viel (fēl), G. Much, many. v.-chörig (kā-rĭkh). For several choruses. v.-facher (fäkh-ĕr). Polymorphous. v.-stimmig (shtĭm-mĭkh). Polyphonic.

viè(l)e (vĭ-ĕl), F., viella (vĭ-ĕl'-lä), I. 1. Hurdygurdy. 2. Old viol. vielleur (vĭ-ĕl-lŭr), F. Player of the viol.

vier (fēr), G. Four. V.-achteltakt. 4-8 time. v.-doppelt. Quadruple. v.-fach (fĕr'-fäkh). With four ranks of pipes, etc. v.-füssig (fēr'-füs-sĭkh). Four-foot (of pipes). V.-gesang. 4-part song. v.-gestrichene Note. 32d note. v.-gestrichene Oktave. Four-marked. Vide PITCH. v.-händig (hĕn-dĭkh). For four hands. V.-klang (fēr'-kläng). Chord of four tones; a seventh chord. v.-mässig (fĕr-mĕs-sĭkh). Containing four measures. v.-saitig. Four-stringed. v.-stimmig. In four-parts. V.-stück. Quartet. vierte (fēr'-tĕ). Fourth. viertel or viertelnote. Quarter note. Viertelpause. Quarter rest. Viertelton. Quarter note. Vierundsechzigstel (fēr-oont-zĕkhs'-ĭkh-shtĕl). 64th note. Viervierteltakt (fēr-fēr'-tĕl-täkt). 4-4 time. vierzehn (fēr'-tsän). Fourteen. vierzehnte. Fourteenth. Vierzweiteltact (fēr-zvī'-tĕl-täkt). 4-2 time.

vietato (vē-ä-tä'-tō), I. Forbidden.

vif (vēf), F. Brisk, quick.

vigoroso (vē-gō-rō'-sō), vigorosamen'te, I. Bold(ly).

viguela (vē-goo-ā'-lä), vihuela (vē-hoo-ā'-lä), Sp. A primitive guitar.

villageois (vē-lă-zhwä), villageoise (zhwäz), F. Rustic.

villancico (vēl-yän'-thē-kō), villancio (vēl-yän'-thĭ-ō), Sp. 1. A church festival anthem. 2. A beginning and ending with chorus.

villanella (vēl-lä-nĕl'-lä), I., villanelle (vē-yä-nĕl), F. "Village song," 15th cent. Italian folk-song of rustic tone and artless grace.

villanesco (nĕs'-kō), villareccio (vēl-lä-rĕt'-chō), I. Rustic.

villot'to, I. Secular song; cf. VILLANELLA.

vi'na. Ancient fretted 7-stringed Hindu instr. with body of bamboo, and two gourds for resonance.

vinata (vē-nä'-tä), I. A vintage-song. vinet'ta. Little vinata.

vi'ol, viola (vē-ō'-lä), I., viole (in F. vē'-ôl; in G. fē-ō'-lĕ). 1. The viola in modern usage is the tenor or alto violin, a little larger in size than the normal violin, and tuned a fifth lower c–g–d'–a'. It is written on the C clef (except high notes, which are written in the G clef). Its tone is more sombre (very richly melancholy and elegiac indeed), and its harmonics are more limited. 2. The prototype of the violin. A fretted bow-instr. with 6 strings (sometimes 5 to 8); flat and tapering back; belly usually flat; sound-holes circular; bridge low to facilitate chords; tuned in fourths with one midway third. In 4 sizes treble (alta), alto (alt or tenore), bass (bassa), contrabass (violone). The bass-viol still persists in England. v. di bardone (bär-dō'-nĕ), I. A barytone viol, of the size of the 'cello, with 6 or 7 gut strings, and a number of wire resonance strings lying along the belly and tuned diatonically. v. bastarda (bäs-tär'-dä), I. "Bastard viol." Large viol da gamba. v. da braccio (dä brät'-chō). "Arm-viol" as opposed to v. da gamba, "Leg-viol." v. da spalla. "Shoulder-viol," a larger arm-viol. viola d'amore (dä-mō'-rĕ), I., viole d'amour (dä-moōr'), F. 1. Richly beautiful, but obsolete instr., larger than the viola, furnished with frets and more strings, some above, and some below the finger-board. 2. A stop. v. pic'cola or marina (mä-rē'-nä). An instr. resembling the v.

d'amore. v. pomposa (pôm-pō'-sä). A large viol of the compass of the 'cello, but with a fifth string. Inv. by J. S. Bach. viol da gamba (dä gäm'-bä), viol di (dē) gamba. "Leg-viol." A small obsolete violoncello, with frets, and five or six strings. viola alta. An enlarged viola inv. by Hermann Ritter of Wismar, Germany, 1877.

violento (vē-ō-lĕn'-tō), violentemente (lĕn-tĕ-mĕn'-tĕ), I. Violently. violenza (lĕn'-tsä). Fury.

vi'olin', E., Violine (fē-ō-lē'-nĕ), G., violino (vē-ō-lē'-nō), I., violon (vē-ō-lôn), F. 1. "Small viol." A universally popular 4-stringed bow-instr. Developed possibly from the Viol, it has also been traced to the lira da braccio; it passed through many changes from about 1480–1530, when it assumed a shape little varied since. Though the name usually applies to one size, it may also be stretched to include the whole string quartet (which is the harmonic basis of the modern orchestra): the violin (or treble), the tenor violin or viola, the violoncello and the double bass. The violin proper has four gut strings with the accordature, g–d'–a'–e''. Its tone is capable of great variety, sentiment and brilliance, its range extending from g to the highest note in the orchestra, e''''. It is rich in harmonics, but its resources in chords are limited and must be handled with great care for the fingering.

Instrs. of the violin family consist of a curved body, or resonance-box, whose upper surface or belly is joined to a vaulted back by ribs; the body is curved in at the waist, the incurving being accented by bouts, whose corners are braced with triangular blocks; the belly (on which the bridge rests between slits called sound-holes, or from their shape f-holes) is braced with a thin strip (under the G string) called the bass-bar. A round prop or soundpost beneath the treble foot of the bridge connects the back and the belly. The finger-board is on the neck, which terminates in a head ornamented with a scroll and containing a peg-box, in which are four movable pegs from each of which a string passes across a ridge called the nut, along the finger-board and over the bridge to the flat tail-piece which is fastened by a loop of gut to a button in the lower end of the body. 2. A 2, 4, and 8 ft. stop. Violinbogen (fē-ō-lēn'-bō-khĕn), G. A vln.-bow. Violin-clef, Violinschlüssel or -zeichen, G. The G clef. violinier (lĭn-ĭ-ā), violiniste (nēst), F., violinista (nēs'-tä), I., Violinspieler, G. A violin-player. violino alto, I. A small tenor viol. violino picciolo (pĭt'-chō-lō), pic'colo, pochetto (kĕt'-tō), I. A small vln. tuned a fifth higher. v. pompo'so, I. A viola with an additional higher string. violin-principal. A 4, or 8 ft. stop. Violinsaite. Violin-string. Violinsteg (stākh). Violin-bridge. Violinstimme. Violin-part. Violin-tenor. A vln. of low tone. violon de fer (dŭ fĕr). Iron fiddle. violinata. A piece for violin, or in violin style. violinzo'li. 8-ft. stop on the swell.

BEETHOVEN, LUDWIG VON.

Fidelio, oder die eheliche Liebe (fē-dāl'-yō, ō'-dĕr dē ā'-ĕ-lĭkh-ĕ lē'-bĕ). Fidelio, or Conjugal Love.

Two-act opera. Book by Joseph Sonnleithner and Treitschke after Bouilly's romance "Léonore, ou l'Amour Conjugal."

Produced in three acts, Vienna, Nov. 20, 1805, without success. Revised by Breuning and produced as "Leonore" in 2 acts without success. Revised by Treitschke and produced as "Fidelio," Vienna, May 23, 1814, with success. For this work Beethoven composed four overtures. That called "No. 1," was composed third, in 1807. The "Leonore," or "No. 3" was composed second in 1806; the "No. 2" was written first, in 1805; the "No. 4" or "Fidelio," in 1814.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

DON FERNAN'DO,
Minister.....Weinkoff, bar.
DON PIZARRO (dôn pē-tsär'-rō), Governor of a State Prison.....Meier, bar.
FLORESTAN (flôr'-ĕs-tän),
A prisoner.....Demmer, tenor.
ROC'CO,
Chief jailer.....Rothe.
JAQUINO (yäk-wē'-nō), Turnkey.....Cache.
CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD.....Meister.
LEONORE (lā-ô-nō'-rĕ), known as FIDELIO, wife of Florestan.....Frl. Milder.
MARZELLINE (mär-tsĕl-lē'-nĕ), Rocco's daughter.....Frl. Müller.

Act 1.—Scene. Courtyard of the Prison. Marzelline ironing, worried and beset by Jaquino, who makes love to her, with interruptions of someone knocking. Rocco calls him and he goes, jealously mentioning Fidelio, who has entered Rocco's service and whom Marzelline loves, thinking her to be a man. Left alone the girl rejoices in hope that Fidelio will marry her (in an aria "Die Hoff'nung"). Jaquino enters with Rocco, inquiring for Fidelio, who enters in man's garb, laden with provisions and a box of letters. Rocco and Marzelline hint of marriage, and Fidelio secretly expresses her uneasiness. In a famous quartet ("Mir ist so wunderbar"—in canon-form) their varying feelings find vent. Rocco tells of the importance of money to wedded bliss. Fidelio asks to be allowed to help him in his prison duties, and he consents that she shall have admittance to all but the dungeon, where a certain wretch has lain two years. The two women depart on the announcement that Pizarro is coming. He enters with a guard, and Rocco gives him the letters. One of them is a secret warning that Don Fernando is going to make an unannounced inspection of the prison, having heard that there are several prisoners unjustly held. Pizarro plans to put his old rival, Florestan, out of the way. He sends an officer to watch from a tower for Fernando's approach; then orders Rocco to kill Florestan. Rocco refuses, and is ordered by Pizarro to dig the doomed man's grave, while Pizarro himself commits the murder. When they have gone, Fidelio enters; she has overheard the plot, and pours out her horror (in the great aria "Abscheulicher!"). Her rage changes to grief, then to hope in God. When she has gone, Marzelline and Jaquino enter, quarrelling. Rocco appears, rebukes Jaquino for hoping to marry his daughter, and orders him to release the minor prisoners for their breath of air. The prisoners rejoice in the sun, and Rocco tells Fidelio that she may come and help him dig the grave of the mysterious prisoner whom Pizarro is going to kill. Fidelio is overcome with horror at having to dig her husband's grave. Marzelline and Jaquino hurry in, saying that Pizarro is coming in a rage. After them enters Pizarro, storming at Rocco's letting the prisoners out. They are ordered back to their cells.

Act II.—Scene 1. The dungeon. Florestan, chained, bemoans his fate; he sees his wife in a vision, but sinks down exhausted and oblivious of the entrance of Rocco and Fidelio. She cannot see the prisoner's face, but believes it is her husband, and vows to save him in any case. She gives feeble aid to Rocco in digging the grave, and when Florestan, waking, calls for drink, she lifts a pitcher of wine to his lips and gives him a crust of bread. Pizarro enters and orders Fidelio away. She does not obey, but when Pizarro starts to stab Florestan she protects him and declares herself his wife. She draws a pistol and threatens Pizarro. A trumpet is heard. Jaquino enters, announcing the coming of Don Fernando. Pizarro hurries away, and Rocco follows him, after pressing the hands of the reunited lovers, who join in a rapturous duet ("O Namenlose Freude"). Rocco returns, saying that all the prisoners are to have a hearing, and leads them out. Scene 2. The square before the castle. The Minister frees the rejoicing prisoners. Rocco leads in Florestan and Fidelio, for whom he pleads. Pizarro is sent away in disgrace, and all join in praise of the wife's fidelity.

BELLINI, VINCENZO.

Nor'ma.

Two-act lyric tragedy. Book by Romani. Produced in Milan, 1832.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

POLLIO'NE,
A Roman Pro-Consul, Donzelli, tenor.
FLAVIO (flä'-vĭ-ō),
His friend.....tenor.
OROVESO (ôr-o-vā'-so),
Druid Chief.....bass.
NOR'MA,
His daughter, a Druidess.....sopr.
ADALGISA (ä-däl-gē'-zä),
A young priestess.....sopr.
CLOTILDE (klō-tēl'-dĕ), Norma's confidante.....sopr.
Two children of Norma and Pollione.

Act I.—Scene 1. Night in the Sacred Druid Forest in Gaul; in the centre the Oak of Irminsul. The Druids enter in religious procession. Oroveso bids them strike the bell thrice when the moon appears. They wait for Norma to cut the sacred branch, and give the signal for the defeat of the Roman invaders. When they have passed on Pollione and Flavio steal in. Pollione confesses that, though he has loved Norma, who has broken all her vows and borne him two children, he has tired of her, and loves Adalgisa, a priestess vowed to virginity. He tells of a dream ("Meco all' altar di Venere") in which Norma blights his vision of joy with Adalgisa. The sacred shield resounds, calling the Druids back, and the two Romans slip away, Pollione vowing to wipe out their religion. The Druids welcome Norma, who enters with a retinue of priestesses, but in place of calling them to fight the impious Romans, she rebukes their wrath and bids them keep peace ("Sediziose voci"), saying that Rome will perish from its own vices. She cuts the sacred mistletoe, and, kneeling, calls on the moon's "chaste goddess" ("Casta diva") to shed peace upon them. They demand Pollione's life, and she promises them revenge, but aside confesses her love for him ("Ah bello a me ritorno"). When the Druids have left, Adalgisa appears, dreaming of her love for Pollione ("Sgombra è la sacra selva"). In contrition she kneels before the altar she has forgotten. Pollione, appearing, reproaches her for praying to the god ("Va, crudele"), and begs her to go to Rome with him ("Dove è amor"), and she consents. Scene 2. Norma's dwelling. Norma and Clotilde speak of the two children of her secret and forbidden love. Hearing someone approach, she has Clotilde conceal the children. Adalgisa appears and, prostrating herself, confesses her unholy love. Norma grants her forgiveness and then asks her lover's name. Adalgisa points to Pollione, who appears. Norma, in her rage, has no blame for Adalgisa, but covers Pollione with reproaches, and, hearing the temple bell, leaves him. Adalgisa also repulses him.

Act II.—Scene 1. Norma's dwelling. Her children are asleep on a couch. She enters with a dagger to kill her children in revenge on Pollione. But a revulsion of motherly feeling leads her to embrace them. She sends Clotilde to bring Adalgisa, who enters and is asked to take the children to Pollione ("Deh, con te li prendi") and become his wife, while Norma kills herself. Adalgisa pleads with Norma to seek her own happiness ("Mira, O Norma"). Adalgisa and Norma pledge friendship. Scene 2. A solitary place where the Gauls chant of war. Oroveso says that Pollione is to return to Rome and be replaced by a still more cruel pro-consul; he counsels delay, however, before they take up arms. Scene 3. Temple and altar of Irminsul. Norma is hopefully waiting Adalgisa's mission begging Pollione to return to the mother of his children. Clotilde comes to say Pollione has refused, and even vows to take Adalgisa by force from the temple. Norma, in high frenzy, strikes the shield of Irminsul three times, and the Druids and Gallic warriors assemble excitedly. Norma cries for immediate war on the Romans ("Guerra, guerra!"). Clotilde runs in to say that a Roman warrior has been caught in the temple. Pollione is brought in, and Norma is given the sword to kill him for his impiety. Her hand trembles, and she begs all to withdraw while she questions the culprit. Alone with Pollione, she tells him his life is in her power ("In mia mano alfino tu sei"). She says Adalgisa will be burned for breaking her vows. He kneels and prays that she be spared. Norma summons the Druids back and says that one of the priestesses has broken her vows and must be burned alive. The Druids demand her name. Pollione implores mercy, and is dumbfounded when Norma announces herself as the guilty one. In a sudden recrudescence of his old passion he climbs the funeral pyre with her ("Qual cor tradisti"). Her last prayer is that her father protect her children ("Deh, non volerli"). The Druids throw over her the black veil, and she and Pollione look forward to bliss beyond this life.

BELLINI, VINCENZO.

La Sonnambula (lä-sôn-näm'-boo-lä). The Somnambulist.

Two-act opera. Book by Felice Romani, after a vaudeville by Scribe. Milan, March 6, 1831.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

ELVINO (ĕl-vē'-nō),
A rich farmer.....Rubini, tenor.

RODOL'FO,
A young lord incognito, Mariano, bar.

ALES'SIO,
A peasant, in love with Lisa ...bass.
AMINA (ä-mē'-nä),
An orphan, Teresa's ward,
Mme. Pasta, sopr.
LISA (lē'-zä),
An innkeeper...Mme. Toccani, sopr.
TERESA (tā-ra'-sä),
The miller's wife.....m.-sopr.

Act I.—Scene. In front of a mountain inn. The peasants gather, singing a welcome to the bride Amina. Lisa, who loves Elvino, the bridegroom, alone is jealous amidst the joy ("Tutto è gioja"). Her lover, Alessio, cannot quiet her envy, though he speaks of his own approaching marriage with her. After a song of Switzerland ("In Elvezia non v'ha rosa"), Amina enters, grateful for the welcome and her serene future ("Come per me sereno" and "Sovra il sen la man mi posa"). She embraces her foster-mother and the grudging Lisa. The notary comes, and then Elvino, who had stopped to implore the Virgin to send his wife perfect virtue. He gives her the ring ("Prendi, l'annel ti dono") and violets. He invites everybody to be present at the wedding at dawn the next morning. The noise of post-horses is heard, and Rodolfo enters to ask the way to the castle. He recalls the familiar scenes ("Vi ravviso o luoghi ameni"), but he is not recognised by the others. He flatters the bride's bright eyes ("Tu non sai con quei begli occhi"), and Elviño feels a pang of jealousy. The sunset makes it dangerous to proceed up the mountain to the castle, and Rodolfo is warned of the phantom that appears at night ("A fosco cielo"). He decides to stop at Lisa's inn. When he has gone, Elvino jealously rebukes Amina. She tries to calm his jealousy ("Son geloso del zefiro amante"), and they are tenderly reconciled ("Mai più dubbi").

Act II.—Scene 1. A bedroom in the inn. Lisa comes to welcome the Count, whom she has recognised. She slips into a cabinet on hearing someone approach, but leaves her shawl behind her. Amina enters in a nightdress, walking in her sleep. Rodolfo realises her condition, but Lisa, seeing her, hurries away scandalised. Amina lies down and sleeps on Rodolfo's bed, while he leaves by the window. The villagers come tiptoeing in to welcome the Count, who has been away so many years. Lisa leads in Elvino and Teresa, who see Amina and believe her guilty. She wakes and is repulsed by Elvino. Teresa alone believes her innocence. Scene 2. A shaded valley. Peasants pass on their way to the castle to plead with the Count to clear Amina's good name. Amina and Teresa enter, and, later, Elvino, who again covers her with scorn, though he longs for the time of his old trust ("Ah, perchè non posso odiarti").

Act III.—Scene. The village green; a mill in the distance. Alessio is pleading with Lisa not to love Elvino, but she scorns him. Villagers enter to say that Lisa is chosen as bride to Elvino; he comes himself to tell her. Rodolfo appears and explains Amina's presence in his room, but Elvino refuses to hear him. Teresa comes, saying that the distraught Amina has at last fallen asleep. She brings Lisa's shawl, and accuses her of visiting the Count. The Count will not speak of her guilt, but persists in defending Amina, who is seen coming out of the mill. She is again walking in her sleep, and passes across a plank over the very mill-wheel. All watch her in suspense, but she crosses in safety dreaming of Elvino's cruelty. He gives her back the ring he took from her, and she wakes in his arms. She gives voice to her rapture ("Ah non giunge uman pensiero"), and all rejoice with her.

BIZET, GEORGES.

Carmen (kär-mān).

Four-act opera. Book by Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halévy (after Prosper Mérimée's romance).

Produced, Paris Opéra Comique, March 3, 1875, with Mme. Galli-Marié as "Carmen," Mlle. Chapuy as "Michaela."

MICHAELA (mē-kä-ā-lä'),
A peasant girl.....sopr.
FRASQUITA (frä-skē'-tä), MERCEDES (mĕr-thā'-dĕs), Cigarette girls.....m.-sopr.

Act I.—Scene. A crowded square in Seville, in front of a cigarette factory near a bridge. Michaela enters, looking for Don José; she is advised by Morales to wait inside the guard-house. The guard is relieved ("Noi con la guardia"), under command of Zuniga and José. An officer chaffs José about Michaela, and José says none of the cigarette girls can compare with her. The bell rings for the noon-hour and the girls enter smoking and singing of life as all one vanity of smoke ("Seguir l'occhio in aria"). Carmen saunters in, gay and impudent, teasing her loving admirers with an old Spanish Habanera (composed by Pradier and called "El Aveglito") ("Amor, misterioso Angelo"). The bell rings and as the cigarette girls return to work, she tosses a flower at the bewildered José. Michaela appears and timidly tells that his mother has sent him by her a letter, some money, and also—a kiss ("La madre tua con me"). José is moved by memories of his mother ("Mia madre io la rivedo"), and feels that her letter has saved him from the tempter Carmen. He gives Michaela loving messages and the girl goes. A riot is heard in the factory; thither all rush in panic, discussing a fight between Manuelita and Carmen, who is brought out by officers. She mocks their questions and finally strikes one of them. They decide to tie her hands with a rope and leave José to guard her. On him she practises all her wiles, and asks him to meet her at Lillas Pastia's inn near the bastion (a seguidilla, "Pressa il bastion di Siviglia"). He at length unties her hands, but she pretends, when the officer returns, that they are still tied. When José starts to lead her across the bridge, however, she pushes him down and escapes.

Act II.—Scene. Lillas Pastia's inn, two months later. Cigarette girls, gypsies and others including Zuniga, are making merry and Carmen sings and dances with the rest ("Vezzi e anella scintillar"). Frasquita brings word that the inn must close; Zuniga invites Carmen to go, but seeing her sad, tells her that Don José, who has suffered imprisonment and reduction to the ranks for conniving at her escape, is now free. A procession in honour of the toreador Escamillo passes and the famous bull-fighter is invited in. He sings of the delights of the arena ("Toreador, attento"). He flirts with Carmen, she banters him, and Lillas Pastia clears the inn of all except the gypsies and Carmen and closes it up. The two smugglers appear and confess the usefulness of women in their profession (a quintet "Abbiam in vista"). Carmen declines to join them, and they blame it to love. José is heard singing ("Dragon d'Alcalà") and they decide that he would make a good smuggler. Carmen consents to try to win him over, and the others withdraw. José enters and she levels all her witchery on him, dancing and singing ("Voglio danzar per tuo piacer"). He hears the "retreat" sounded at the distant barracks, but her pouting coquetry restrains him; he shows her the flower she gave him at their first meeting ("Il fior che avevi") and she pleads with him to give up the army and lead a gypsy life with her. He recoils at the thought of being a deserter, and is rushing away when Zuniga returns. He reproaches Carmen for preferring a private such as José to himself, an officer; and orders José back to the barracks. José, infuriated, defies him and draws his sword; the gypsies enter, cover Zuniga with their pistols and lead him away. José has no resource but to join the smugglers.

Act III.—Scene. The smugglers' lair in the mountains. They are rejoicing at their luck, but José is restless and thinks of his mother. Carmen tells him he would better go back home. He threatens her with his knife. She turns her back on him and the gypsies fall to telling fortunes with cards ("Mischiam; alziam"). Carmen finds always Death in her cards; she takes the omen jauntily. The smugglers move off followed by José. Michaela enters in great fear ("Io dico no"). She hides when a gun-shot is heard and Escamillo enters with a bullet hole through his hat. José appears and challenges the toreador, who says he comes to find his sweetheart Carmen who is tired of her dragoon lover. The rivals prepare to fight with knives, but Carmen saves Escamillo in the nick of time and he is sent away. Michaela tells José that his mother is dying with grief for him ("Io ti vengo a cercar"), and Carmen advises him to go. He jealously refuses at first to leave Carmen, but finally goes, glaring threateningly at the fickle siren, who hears with joy the distant song of the bull-fighter.

Act IV. Scene. A square in Seville outside the arena. A great crowd seethes about the place. Dancers whirl ("Danziam, danziam!"). The procession of bull-fighters of all classes passes into the arena with ceremony, and Carmen accompanies the idolised Escamillo. Frasquita and Mercedes warn Carmen that José is looking for her, but she pluckily waits for him after the crowd has entered the arena. He begs her to go away with him and threatens her when she refuses ruthlessly. As she taunts him with her weariness of his love, the noise of the spectators roars out from the arena. She wishes to enter but he blocks the way, and when she throws at him the ring he gave her, he stabs her and she dies without a word. The crowd pouring out of the arena find him kneeling lovingly at her side.

BOITO, ARRIGO.

Mefistofele (mā-fē′-stō-fā-lĕ). Mephistopheles.

Grand opera in prolog, four acts and epilog. Book and music by Boito. La Scala, Milan, 1868.

CHARACTERS.

Mefistofele	bass.
Faust, later Henrico (fowst, ĕn-rē′-kō),	tenor.
Wagner (väkh′-nĕr)	tenor.
Nereo (nā′-rā-ō)	tenor.
Margherita	sopr.
Marta, her mother	contr.
Elena, Helen of Troy	sopr.
Pantalis	contr.

In the attempt to cover the scope of Goethe's whole poem "Faust," the opera exchanges continuity for picturesque episodes. It opens with a "Prologue in the Heavens," a cloud-scene in which Satan interrupts the songs of the invisible angel-choirs, and parleys with the unseen Jehovah for the soul of Faust, which he boasts he can win.

Act I.—Scene 1. Holiday street-scene in Frankfort. The Elector passes with retinue. Faust and his friend Wagner stroll about, followed by Mefistofele, disguised as a gray friar, whom Faust dreads, but Wagner ridicules. Scene 2.

Faust's laboratory. The gray friar conceals himself in an alcove ; Faust enters and begins to read his Bible, the dread of which betrays Mefistofele, who declares himself and assumes the form of a knight. He bargains for Faust's soul, offering him all earthly pleasures. Faust accepts, and steps on Mefistofele's cloak to be spirited away.

Act II.—Scene 1. The garden of Margherita, who engages in amorous dalliance and promise with her lover, Faust (Enrico), while her mother, Marta, flirts ludicrously with Mefistofele. Scene 2. The wild gorge of the Brocken, where evil spirits of all sorts hold the variegated orgy appropriate to the witches' Sabbath. Faust, under the guidance of Mefistofele, is shown a vision of the betrayed Margherita's sorrow, and Mefistofele pictures the world in a declamation over a globe of glass.

Act III.—Scene. The prison where Margherita, who has killed the child of her shame, is awaiting her execution. Faust appears and begs her to fly with him. With her dying breath she refuses, and as the day breaks he is haled away by Mefistofele, who declares Margherita doomed. But the angelic chorus (given to the orchestra) declares her to be forgiven and saved.

Act IV.—Scene 1. The moonlit banks of the river Peneus, on "The Night of a Classical Sabbath." Pantalis and the sirens sing of the moon, and Helen of Troy describes the capture and pillage of the old Homeric city. Faust wakens from slumber and appears on his restless pleasure hunt, and, watched by Mefistofele, finds in Helen a quick response to his ardor. Scene 2. Faust's laboratory, in which he muses on his dismal hunt for earthly pleasure, and longs for Heaven. Mefistofele tries to persuade him to continue the hunt, but the heavenly music is heard. Mefistofele invokes seductive sirens to counteract the better influence, but Faust clings to his Bible, and, praying and redeemed, dies in a shower of roses, which scorch and foil Mefistofele.

Place of action : Paris. Time : the present day.

Act 1.—Scene. Room in a tenement.

Louise at the window talking with Julien outside. He urges her to elope, since her parents prevent their marriage. She refuses to grieve them so. She asks how he fell in love with her. He tells. The mother, entering, listens angrily to their mutual confidences, then pulls Louise back and dismisses Julien. A violent scene follows between Louise and her mother, who talks of Julien's alleged bad character. The father enters, holding a letter, and tenderly greets Louise. While he reads the letter, which is from Julien, Louise anxiously scans his face; they embrace without a word (the orchestra, during this pantomime, is notably expressive). The family sup, the father talking contentedly of his lot, the mother making bitter allusions to artists and idlers. After supper, the parents discuss the letter. The father sympathises, the mother fiercely opposes. Then the father reasons with Louise about her inexperience and Julien's bad reputation. He asks whether she has ever spoken with him. Louise says no. The mother ironically mimics the talk she heard between the lovers. The father makes Louise promise to have no more dealings with Julien; says she will soon get over her pain, and sets her to reading aloud the newspaper. She breaks down at the word "Paris."

Act II.—Orchestral Prelude. "Paris awakening." Scene 1. On the Hill of Montmartre. All sorts of workers beginning their day's toil. The Nightwalker enters and talks beguilingly to the girls. He throws off his cloak, appearing garbed as Spring; explains that he represents the Pleasures of Paris, and runs off, knocking over an old ragpicker as he goes. This old man tells, weeping, how his daughter was formerly tempted away by the Nightwalker. An old street-sweeper tells how she once was rich and gay—it was paradise. An urchin asks for the address of her paradise. She points to Paris. Julien enters with Bohemian friends, and describes how he means to abduct Louise. The young men sing gaily of love and a free life. Julien, left alone, sings passionately of his love and wonders whence help will come. As he pauses, the street-cries of Paris are heard. He listens with growing emotion; then breaks out in praise of city life. Work-girls pass chattering. Julien hides. Louise and her mother appear and separate for the day's work. Julien waylays Louise and entreats her to go with him, but she refuses. He sorrowfully departs. Street-cries resound on all sides. Scene 2. Interior of dressmaker's shop. Girls sewing, and quarrelling. Louise sits among them, pensive. The others note her sadness and talk among themselves, telling how severely her parents treat her, even striking her. Then they teasingly accuse her of being in love. Gertrude, an old maid, talks sentimentally (hurdygurdy in the distance). Camille moralises on the strong attraction of men for girls. Irma describes enthusiastically the charms of city life. Sounds of street-music are heard. The girls flock to the window and recognise Julien singing to his guitar. Each girl, thinking the serenade is for her, is loud in praise, till Julien, missing Louise, breaks his strings impatiently and sings in sadder vein; then the girls feign boredom. The pathos of the singer moves Louise's heart. She rises to go, pleading illness. As the girls watch from the window, they see Louise walking away with Julien.

Act III.—Scene 1. Julien and Louise in the garden of a little house on the summit of Montmartre. Panorama of Paris in the background. Twilight, Louise rejoices that her happiest dream has come true. She regrets nothing—at home, her father treated her as a child, her mother with blows. Julien calls them Mother Routine and Father Prejudice. Louise tells how they wished her to be guided by their experience instead of by her heart. Julien declaims against experience. He asserts that everyone has a right to freedom and love. Louise asks whether anyone has the right to break another's heart. He answers that her parents' selfishness must be met with selfishness. He says her character has been developed by city life. They join in a rhapsody over Paris. The city begins to light up. The lovers exult in a pæan of liberty, echoed by voices from the city. Then they sing ecstatically of love and life. Scene 2. A crowd of their Bohemian friends arrive, and with dancing and ceremonies crown Louise "Muse of Montmartre." The mother suddenly appears. At her sad aspect, the revellers scatter in dismay. She comes humbly to tell of the Father's illness, and beg Louise to return home. The old ragpicker passes by, alluding to his lost daughter. Julien, touched, lets Louise go on the promise of her return.

Act IV.—Scene same as Act I. A summer evening. The father seated, broken down and sombre, gradually rouses to talk bitterly of the injustice of Fate; of rearing children only to suffer from their ingratitude. Louise at the window merely looks out into the night. Her Mother calls her to help in the kitchen and argues with her, while the Father eagerly listens, hoping she will be convinced. Louise recalls their promise that she should be free. The Mother refuses to let her return to a life of sin. Louise bids her father goodnight coldly. He draws her passionately to him and rocks her on his knee like a child, in forced gaiety singing a lullaby, promising that if the child will be good, she shall have whatever she wants. Louise answers that if they want her to be happy they must let her go to her lover, and repeats Julien's words of the individual's right to freedom of choice. Joyous voices heard from the town increase her longing. She declares Paris calls her. The Father becoming infuriated chases her from the house; then immediately repents and calls her back—in vain. He shakes his fist at the city, ejaculating bitterly "O Paris!"

DÉLIBES, LÉO.

Lakmé (lăk-mā).

Three-act opera. Book by E. Gondinet and Ph. Gille.

Produced, Opéra Comique, April 14, 1883.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

GÉRALD (zhā-răl),
English officer engaged to Ellen.....M. Talazac, tenor.
FRÉDÉRIC (frā-dā-rēk),
English officer.....M. Barré, bar.
NILAKANTHA (nē-lä-kän-tä),
A devout Brahman,
M. Cobalet, bass.
HADJI (äd-zhē),
A servant.....Chennevière, 2d tenor.
LAKMÉ (lăk-mā),

ELLEN.....contr.
ROSE.....Mlle. Rémy, sopr.
MISTRESS BENTSON..Mlle. Molé, 2d sopr.
MALLIKA,
A servant...Mlle. Frandin, m. sopr.

Act I.—Scene. A garden in India at dawn. A chorus in morning homage to Brahma. Nilakantha appears and invokes maledictions on the English conquerors, Lakmé joins the prayers. Her father tells her he must go to another temple for the day, and leaves Lakmé in charge of Mallika and Hadji. Lakmé lays her jewels on a table, sings of the beauty of the stream, and sets forth with Mallika in a little boat. The English enter laughing and chattering. They talk of the Hindus and of Lakmé's beauty, and force their way through the hedge. Frédéric explains that in trespassing on the garden of a Brahman they commit sacrilege, and are liable to a deadly revenge. The women hurry away, leaving Gérald to copy the design of Lakmé's jewels. He hides as Lakmé returns. She muses on love and seeing Gérald gives a cry. The servants enter hastily but she says it was nothing and sends them away. She upbraids Gérald when they have gone, but he wins her love by his flattery. Seeing her father return, she makes him steal away unseen. Her father finds the hedge broken, however, and vows revenge on the trespassers.

Act II.—Scene. A market-place full of people. The English enter, much bothered by the merchants. The bell for closing sounds; and soldiers clear the market-place. A fête begins, and bayadères dance. Nilakantha and Lakmé pass, he clothed as a penitent. Frédéric tells Gérald that their regiment moves at dawn to put down an uprising. The English leave, and Nilakantha explains to Lakmé that he is disguised searching for revenge. A crowd gathers and Lakmé sings to them a legend of Vishnu and a Hindu maid. The English officers return. Nilakantha recognises them and orders Lakmé to sing the legend again. Gérald recognises her, but she pretends not to know him. The English soldiers pass and the officers go. Nilakantha plots with the other Hindus, leaving Lakmé with Hadji. Gérald returns. They exchange vows of love. The crowd returns for the Brahmin rites, but soon withdraws again. Nilakantha stabs Gérald and disappears. Lakmé bends over him and seeing that he is not mortally wounded calls the faithful Hadji to her aid.

Act III.—Scene. The heart of a forest. Gérald asleep, watched by Lakmé. Songs of lovers are heard in the distance, Lakmé goes to bring him sacred water. Frédéric appears; he has followed Gérald by the drops of blood. He reminds him of his betrothal to Ellen and makes him promise to return to her. He leaves, and when Lakmé returns with the consecrated water in a cup she notes a change in Gérald's manner. He hears the soldiers singing in the distance, and she eats the leaf of a poison plant. Nilakantha returning finds them embracing. Lakmé tells her father that Gérald, having drunk of the sacred water, is consecrated. She offers herself as a sacrifice in his place and dies.

DONIZETTI, GAETANO.

La Favorita (lä fä-vō-rē'-tä). The Favourite.

Four-act opera. Book by Royer and Waëtz (based on the play "Le Comte de Commingues").

Produced, Paris, Dec. 2, 1840.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

Alfon'so, King of Castile.....bar.
Baldassare (säl'-rĕ).....Baroelhst, bass.
Fernan'do.....Duprez, tenor.
Don Gaspare (gäs-pä'-rĕ) Leonora (lā-ō-nō'-rä), Mme. Stolz, sopr.
Ines (ē'-nĕs).....contr.

Act I.—Scene 1. Interior of a monastery. Chorus of monks passing. Fernando, in distraction, tells Baldassare that he has fallen in love with a maiden, an angel of heaven ("Una vergine, un angel di dio"). Baldassare is horrified and bids him begone ("Deh, vanne!"). Scene 2. A flowery island. Ines and other women gathering flowers. A boat arrives with Fernando, blindfolded. His bandage is removed, but his questions are not answered. At length Leonora enters, and the lovers have a rapturous reunion. She shows him a parchment which will lead him to glory provided he gives her up. He refuses passionately. Ines enters to say that the King Alfonso has arrived. Leonora, in agitation, gives Fernando the parchment and hurries away. Ines warns him to be cautious. Left alone, he finds the parchment to be a commission with a title, and he welcomes his chance for military fame ("Si, che un tuo solo accento").

Act II.—Scene. The Palace of the Alcazar. The King is rejoicing with Don Gaspare in the victory over the Moors, giving the credit to the brave Fernando, whom he is now waiting to load with honours. An attendant announces a message from the chief churchman, and Gaspare retires. The King broods over the plots of his courtiers, but swears they shall never separate him from Leonora, his favourite ("Vien, Leonora, a' piedi tuoi"). Don Gaspare returns, and is sent to invite the court to the fête. Leonora enters with Ines, who is sent away. The King pours out his love ("Ah, l'alto ardor"), but Leonora reproaches him with betraying her and decoying her from home on false promises. He tries vainly to console her with her rich surroundings. The court gathers. Don Gaspare, in much agitation, gives the King an intercepted love-letter to Leonora. The King demands the lover's name, which Leonora withholds. Baldassare is led in. He bears a mandate from the Pope, ordering Alfonso to put away Leonora and return to his queen. The King refuses fiercely, but Baldassare's threats of excommunication terrify him, and Leonora flees.

Act III.—Scene. A room in the palace. Fernando, dreaming only of Leonora, sees the King and Don Gaspare enter. The King has decided to yield to the Pope, and sends for Leonora. He welcomes Fernando and offers him whatever he may ask. He asks for Leonora. Leonora enters, and the King reproaches her ("A tanto amor"), but demands that she marry Fernando at once. Leonora, left alone, is enraptured, and cannot believe the truth ("Fia dunque vero?") that she is to possess her lover ("O mio Fernando"), but she thinks it dishonourable for her, disgraced as she is, to wed him, and decides to die. She leaves Ines to tell him the whole truth. When she is gone, Ines is arrested and led away. The courtiers gather. The King gives Fernando a title and the hand of Leonora, who, thinking Ines has told Fernando of her past, consents and is led to the altar. The courtiers, overcome with the shame of making the unknown Fernando a nobleman, and then marrying him off to the King's discarded mistress, treat him with contempt on his return from the altar. He is infuriated, and challenges Gaspare. Baldassare enters to make peace, and Fernando embraces him. Baldassare tells Fernando the truth, and he, in wild rage, rebukes the King, who returns with Leonora. Baldassare declares the marriage null, and Fernando refuses to keep his title and decorations. The King orders him into exile, and Leonora learns that Ines is under restraint.

Act IV.—Scene (composed in four hours). Convent cloisters. Monks digging their graves and chanting ("Scaviam l'asilo"). Fernando, in dejection returns to the monastery. Baldassare welcomes him, then leaves to console a youth who, he says, has just come as a novice. Fernando, alone, bewails his trust in hope, the gentle zephyr ("Spirto gentil"). He is led into the chapel. Leonora, clad as a monk, appears when he has gone, and scans the faces of the other monks. She has come to implore Fernando's forgiveness. Inside the church he is heard taking his vows. She sinks before the cross, and he, returning, finds her and bids her leave ("Ah, va, t'invola"). She tells him the truth and begs his forgiveness ("Clemente al par di Dio"). He takes her in his arms ("Vieni, ah, vieni") and offers to fly the cloisters once more with her. She dreads such a step, and dies beseeching him to be faithful to his vows. The monks, entering, are bidden to pray for the dead young novice.

La Figlia del Reggimento (lä fēl′-yä dĕl rĕd-jĭ-mĕn′-tō), I., La fille du Régiment, F., Marie, die Tochter des Regiments, G. The Daughter of the Regiment.

Two-act opera. Book by Bayard and St. Georges.

Produced, Paris, February 11, 1840.

CHARACTERS.

MARIA, created by Mme. Anna Thillon.....sopr.

MARCHESA DI BIRKENFELD (or Maggiorivoglio).....m.-sopr.
TO'NIO,
A young Swiss.....tenor.
ORTEN'SIO,
Steward to the Marchesa.....bar.
CAPORALE.....bass.
SULPIZIO (sool-pe'-tsĭ-ō),
A sergeant.....bass.
PESA'NO.

Act I.—Scene. The Tyrolese mountains during the French occupation. Peasants gather for war; women pray to the Virgin. The Marchioness and Ortensio are anxiously waiting news. Peasants enter to say the enemy are retreating. All withdraw. Sulpizio, a French sergeant, enters, followed by Maria, the "daughter" of the Regiment and its vivandière. She rejoices in having first seen the light of day on a battle-field ("Apparvi alla luce sul campo guerrier"). Sulpizio proudly claims credit for finding her on the battle-field and adopting her. He speaks of the letter he found with her; she speaks of the young Swiss who saved her life and whom she has learned to love. This very Swiss now enters as a captive. The French are about to kill him, but she saves him and he joins in a toast. Maria sings the song of the Regiment, which has no equal as "everybody says and knows" ("Ciascun lo dice; ciascun lo sà"). A drum calling to roll-call is heard and the soldiers hurry away, taking Tonio under guard. He returns, however, having eluded the others. Maria and he are on cordial terms, she welcoming his ardent vows ("A voti cosi ardente"). They stroll away together and Sulpizio and the Marchioness appear. She is reading the letter found with Maria many years before. It is addressed to her by the child's father, and she recognises Maria as her daughter by an early secret marriage with Captain Roberto. But she tells Sulpizio that Maria is her niece. The soldiers return and Tonio enters, having decided to enlist with the French for Maria's sake. He asks the Regimental fathers for her hand, and they grant it. But Sulpizio tells them that her aunt has appeared to claim her. Maria bids her friends a fond farewell ("Convien partir"), to the disgust of the Marchioness.

Act II.—Scene. A salon. Sulpizio wounded. Maria dressed as becomes her new station, is mutinous against her training. The Marchioness makes her sing a romance by Caffariello ("Sorgeva il di") but Sulpizio prefers the regimental rataplan, in which Maria joins; the Marchioness leaves angrily. Ortensio calls Sulpizio away to see a soldier who has come. Maria hears the familiar music and the Regiment reappears, Maria welcoming all, particularly Tonio, now an officer. The soldiers are sent to broach a cask of wine, and the Marchioness finds Maria with Tonio and says the girl is engaged to the Duke of Krakenthorp. Tonio goes, vowing he will have Maria, who withdraws weeping. The Marchioness reads to Sulpizio a confession of her own secret marriage and begs him to aid her in marrying Maria to the Duke without telling the truth to the world. The mother of the Duke appears, he being unable to appear, and the contract is about to be signed when Tonio leads the Regiment in to protest against the bartering of its daughter ("Ti rincora amata figlia"). Maria avows her gratitude to the soldier who saved her from death ("Quando il destino"). The Marchioness relents and gives Maria to Tonio, to the joy of the Regiment.

Lucia di Lam'mermoor (loo-chē'-ä dē). Lucy, The Bride of Lammermoor.

Three-act opera. Book, from Sir Walter Scott's novel, by Cammarano.

Produced, Naples, 1835, with Persiani as "Lucia" and Duprez as "Edgardo."

CHARACTERS.

ENRICO (ĕn-rē′-kō).....bar.
Lord Henry Ashton of Lammermoor.

EDGARD′O.....tenor.
Sir Edgar Ravenswood.

RAIMONDO (rä-e-môn′-dō).....bass.
Raymond Bide-the-Bent, Tutor.

ARTURO (är-too′-rō).....tenor.
Lord Arthur Bucklaw.

NORMAN′NO.....tenor.
Warrior-chief of Ravenswood.

LUCIA.....sopr.
Lucy, Ashton's sister.

ALISA (ä-lē′-sä).....sopr.
Alice, her maid.

Time, Scotland, about 1670.

Act I.—Scene 1. A vestibule. Norman and others are searching the tower. Henry enters brooding and tells Norman that he has lost his fortune and that his sister Lucy who can by marrying Arthur restore the Lammermoor prestige, refuses and spends her time mourning her dead mother. Meanwhile his enemy Edgar triumphs. Norman tells Henry that Lucy is in love; he tells how she was saved from a furious bull by a shot fired by Edgar, whom she now loves. At this Henry is insane with rage ("Cruda funesta smania"). A chorus of hunters enter and tell ("Come vinti da stanchezza") how they had seen a mysterious horseman stealing from the tower. It was Edgar. Henry threatens revenge ("La pietade in suo favore"). Scene 2. A Park. Lucy and Alice. Lucy is longingly awaiting Edgar ("Regnava nel silenzio"). Edgar enters to say he is ordered to France as an ambassador. He tells how Henry has killed his father and robbed him of his heritage; he had sworn revenge on his father's tomb ("Sulla tomba che rinserra"), but Lucy's love has changed his ideal. The act ends in a love-duet.

Act II.—Scene. A room in the castle. Henry and Norman are waiting for Lucy. They speak of intercepting Edgar's letters and poisoning Lucy's mind against him. Henry asks Norman for the forged letter and bids him summon Arthur. As Norman goes, Lucy enters. Reproached for her gloom, she accuses him of cruelty; he shows her the letter and she believes Edgar false; he begs her to marry Arthur, who is even now coming with nuptial splendour. They quarrel in a duet ("Se tradirmi tu portrai") and he threatens to kill Edgar if she persists. She prays for death. She leaves as Arthur enters with a great crowd, but is led back by Henry; intimidated by threats he utters under his breath, she signs the marriage contract. Suddenly Edgar appears and there are mutual reproaches in a powerful sextet ("Chi mi frena"). Raymond pleads that there be no bloodshed. Edgar, seizing the marriage contract, furiously upbraids Lucy for her faithlessness and will not listen to her explanation.

Act III.—Scene 1. A room in the Castle on Wolf's Crag. Edgar alone rejoices in the storm. Henry enters and the men confront each other; they agree to fight at dawn, and pray for the sun to rise (in a duet "O sole, più rapido"). Scene 2. The chorus sings a song of jubilant victory ("D'immenso giubilo"). Raymond bids them cease their mirth, he tells how he had heard a groan from the bridal-chamber ("Dalle stanze ove Lucia") and entering had found Arthur dead and Lucy with his bloody sword in her hand; she had gone insane. The mad girl now appears, thinking she is about to wed Edgar. She sings the famous mad-song ("O gioja che si senti"). Henry enters and sees her frenzy with bitter remorse. Scene 3. Outside the castle at night. Edgar alone before the tomb of his ancestors begs for speedy death from his sorrows ("Tombe degli avi miei"). People enter to say that Lucy has gone mad: he determines to see her; Raymond enters with the news that she is dead, and Edgar stabs himself.

GLUCK, CHRISTOPH VON.

Orfeo e Euridice (ôr′-fā-ō ā ā′-oo-rē-dē′-chĕ), I., Orphéus et Eurydice, F. Orph′eus and Euryd′ice.

Three-act opera. Book by Calzabigi.

Produced, Vienna, October 5, 1762, in two acts. Revised and extended. Paris Académie, August 2, 1774 (with the rôle of Orfeo transposed for the tenor Legros. In 1859 restored by Berlioz for the alto Viardot-Garcia).

CHARACTERS.

ORFEO (Orpheus).....alto.
L'OMBRA FELICE (The Happy Shade) (lôm′brä fā-lē′chĕ).....sopr.
L'AMORE (lä-mō′-rĕ). The God of Love.....sopr.
EURIDICE.....sopr.

Act I.—Scene 1. A lonely wood with the tomb of Eurydice and a statue of Hymen. Rustics and nymphs dance about, calling on Eurydice to come back to life and her inconsolable husband, Orpheus. Orpheus, lost in sorrow, bids them leave him to his grief ("Chiamo il mio ben così"). He muses on his great loss ("Euridice! ombra cara"). At length the God of Love enters and offers his aid. Even Jupiter has been moved to grant Orpheus the privilege of descending into the abode of the dead to bring back his wife, provided he promises not to look back at her till he has safely led her to the upper world. The god bids Orpheus restrain his ardour ("Gli sguardi trattieni") and all will be well. The god vanishes and Orpheus sets forth boldly on his quest.

Act II.—Scene 1. The gates of Inferno. Demons and furies gather and the sound of Orpheus' lyre sets them to dancing and crying out with wrathful amazement at the hardy wanderer in Erebus ("Chi mai dell' Erebo"). The barking of the three-headed hound Cerberus is hinted in the orchestra. Orpheus begs them to be calm; he tells them of the thousand pangs that rend his heart ("Mille pene"); and the furies melt before him. They order the gates to open and the minstrel enters. Scene 2. Elysium and the blessed shades, who wreathe a blissful dance under the leadership of one of them. As they withdraw Orpheus enters rejoicing in the pure sky and peace of the region ("Che puro ciel!"). When he cries out for Eurydice, the happy shades tell him she is there, and bid him come to the realm of repose ("Vieni ai regni del reposo"). They lead in Eurydice, veiled.

Act III.—Scene. A cavernous egress from Inferno. Orpheus enters leading Eurydice. She rejoices at the reunion, but is distressed at his anxiety and his refusal to look at her. She is angered at his mysteriousness, and deeply grieves ("Che fiero momento"). At length he turns and looks at her. She falls down lifeless, and Orpheus in despair at the thought of losing her, cries "What can I do without Eurydice!" ("Che farò senza Euridice"). He determines to kill himself that he may join her eternally. The God of Love entering stays his hand and restores Eurydice to life. The two embrace amidst a chorus of rejoicing at Love's triumph ("Trionfi amore").

GOUNOD, CHAS. FRANÇOIS.

Faust (fowst; in F. fōst), in Germany this opera is called Margarete (märgä-rā′-tĕ), in Italy, Faust e Margherita (ā mär-gā-rē′-tä).

Five-act opera. Book from Goethe's poem, Part I, by Jules Barbier and Michel Carré.

Produced, Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, March 19, 1859.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

FAUST, An old scholar....Barbot, tenor.
MÉFISTOFÈLE (mā-fē-stō-fĕl), MEPHISTOPHELES, The Evil Spirit.....Balanqué, bass.
VALENTIN (văl-ăn-tăñ), Valentine, Brother of Marguerite..Regnal, bar.

WAGNER (văg-năr),
[in the German version, BRANDER].....tenor.
SIEBEL (sĭ-ĕb-ĕl),
A youth in love with Marguerite, Mlle. Faivre, m. sopr.
MARGUERITE (măr-gŭ-rēt),
A village beauty,
Mme. Miolan-Carvalho, sopr.
MARTHA (mär-tä)...Mme. Duclos, alto.

Act I.—Scene I. The study of the decrepit scholar Faust, who soliloquises on the vanity of research ("Interrogo invano"); he decides to kill himself and pours out poison. Bursts of song heard from peasant girls and men passing by, embitter his reflections on old age, and in his rage he calls on Satan, who to his amazement, appears and bargains for his soul, Faust asking for youth and pleasure ("Io voglio il piacer"). When Faust has signed, Mephistopheles shows him in a vision Marguerite at her spinning-wheel. Faust drinks to her, and is transformed to a richly dressed youth, who hurries away with the Evil One.

Act II.—Scene. A Fair, or Kermesse. Students, soldiers, etc., sing of wine, old men sing of peace, and young girls of love. Valentine enters wearing a medallion ("O santa medaglia") given by his sister; he is about to go to the wars and commends Marguerite to the charge of Siebel. As Wagner is singing a ballad of an old rat, Mephistopheles appears and joins the fun with a song of the calf of gold ("Dio del' or"). He tells fortunes, saying that Wagner will fall in battle, and that every flower Siebel touches will wither; he draws wine from the sign of the inn and as the goblet flares up, he drinks to Marguerite. Valentine indignantly knocks down the glass, and they draw swords. Mephisto draws a circle about him and Valentine's blade is shattered. When, however, the soldiers hold up their sword-hilts as crosses ("Tu puoi la spada frangere") the Evil One cowers while they pass. Faust arrives and asks to see Marguerite; a bevy of students and girls waltz in ("Come la brezza") and Marguerite appears. Siebel moves toward her but is kept away by Mephisto, while Faust offers her his arm; she declines it with meekness and passes on. Faust and Mephisto follow her.

Act III.—Scene. The garden of Marguerite. Siebel is plucking a bouquet for his beloved Marguerite ("La parlate d'amor"); each flower withers at his touch till he dips his fingers in holy water; as he passes on in his search, Faust and Mephisto look in and see him place the flowers at Marguerite's window. When he has gone, Faust apostrophises the pure and lowly dwelling of his love ("Salve! dimora casta e pura," or "Salut, demeure!"). Mephisto reappears with a casket of jewels which he places on the steps, then draws Faust back into the shrubbery. Marguerite enters alone; she is humming a folk-song ("C'era un re di Thule"—"Es war ein König im Thule" in Goethe's Faust) which she intermits with memories of Faust. She spins awhile, then rises wearily and sees Siebel's nosegay, but drops it in ecstasy over the jewels, in which she decks herself ("Ah, è strano poter"). Martha, an old neighbour, enters and tells her they were doubtless left by a suitor. Mephisto and Faust appear and Mephisto by flirting desperately with the giddy crone leaves Faust a chance to woo Marguerite, who tells of her loneliness, the absence of her brother ("Al campo è il fratel"), and the death of her little sister. Siebel appears and Martha drives him away and goes home. Mephisto watches the crescent passion of the lovers ("Sempre amar"). As night falls Marguerite begs Faust to be gone, and enters her home. Mephisto drives Faust back, and when she opens her window to tell her love to the night-wind ("Ei m'ama"), Faust takes her in his arms, while Mephisto chuckles in the shadow.

Act IV.—Scene I (often omitted). A room in Marguerite's house. The betrayed and deserted girl, taunted by passers-by, reflects that her shame is due to love alone ("Nascose eran"), but when Siebel tries to console her with promise of revenge ("Quando a te lieta") she determines to go to the church and pray for her false lover and for her unborn child. Scene 2. The square before the cathedral. The soldiers returned from war chant of victory and peace ("Deponiam il brando"). Valentine greets Siebel cordially, but is met only with embarrassment and evasion, and at last a plea that he forgive Marguerite. The soldiers pass on and Valentine gloomily enters his house. Faust appears full of remorse; Mephisto tries sardonically to win her forth with a burlesque serenade to "Catterina" ("Tu che fai l'addormentata"). Valentine comes out and demands the cause of the serenade, sends Mephisto's mandolin flying with his sword, and falls to fighting with the reluctant Faust. Valentine throws away disdainfully his sister's medallion and Faust with Mephisto's aid wounds him mortally and flies. The citizens gather excitedly and finally Marguerite, on whom the dying Valentine invokes maledictions ("Stammi adascoltar"). When his body is borne away she prays for heavenly mercy, but Mephisto taunts her with despair and claims her while a chorus of monks combat with a chorus of demons.

Act v.—Scene 1 (often omitted). The Walpurgis revel in the Brocken, with a vision of Marguerite shown. Scene 2. A prison, Marguerite lying asleep in a heap of straw. Faust and Mephisto enter and Mephisto, who has procured the keys, urges Faust to waken the girl and make her fly with him. Faust is torn with repentance and blames himself for Marguerite's fall and for the madness in which she killed her newborn child ("Penetrato è il mio cor"). She wakes and greets him as her rescuer ("Pur fra il riso beffardo"). Her mind wanders and she lives over their first meetings. Mephisto tries to drag Faust away before the dawn betrays his presence, and Faust tries to lead Marguerite with him, but seeing the Evil One, she falls on her knees and prays ("O del ciel angeli"). She repulses Faust with her dying breath and a chorus of angels welcomes her redeemed soul to heaven. A tableau (often omitted) shows her in Paradise; Faust, seeing her, prays and Mephisto falls beneath an Archangelic sword.

Roméo et Juliette (rôm-ā-ō ā zhül-yĕt′), F., Romeo e Giulietta (rō′-mā-ō ā jool-yĕt′-tä), I. Romeo and Juliet.

Five-act grand opera. Book by Barbier and Carré, after Shakespeare.

Produced, Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, April 27, 1867.

Characters as in Shakespeare with the addition of Stephano, Romeo's page (played by a mezzo-soprano), and Gregorio, a watchman.

Act I.—Scene. The masked ball at Capulet's palace. Romeo disguised as a pilgrim meets and makes love to the young Juliet, who later confides her ecstasy in a famous waltz-song to her nurse. Her cousin Tybalt recognising the presence of his family enemy Romeo, is only restrained from interrupting the festivity by Capulet himself.

Act II.—Scene. Juliet's balcony, where Romeo finds her, and though interrupted by the impatience of the nurse and the tour of Gregorio and his watchmen, plights his troth.

Act III.—Scene 1. The cell of Friar Laurence (or Lorenzo) who marries the young runaways. Scene 2. Street before Capulet's palace. Stephano in a flippant serenade, provokes a street brawl between the retainers of the rival families, in which Tybalt kills Romeo's cousin Mercutio. Romeo coming from the church wishes to avoid a duel with Tybalt, now his kinsman, but taunted into a fight, kills him. Capulet appearing cries for "justice" from the Duke, who enters. Romeo, to his wild grief, is banished, but determines to see Juliet.

Act IV.—Scene 1. Juliet's chamber at daybreak. Her husband Romeo is bidding her farewell. When he has stolen away, her father Capulet enters with Friar Laurence and declares that Juliet must marry Paris at once. The Friar secretly gives her a potion to keep her as one dead till Romeo can be summoned to spirit her away. Scene 2 (usually omitted). The wedding celebration, in the midst of which Juliet swoons and is thought to have died.

Act V.—Scene. The tomb of the Capulets, where Juliet lies in state. Romeo, ignorant of the plot, has come to die at her side and takes poison. She wakens to see him perish in helpless regret and kills herself with his dagger.

SANDMÆNNCHEN (zänt'-mĕn-khĕn),
The sandman, or sleep-fairy...sopr.
TAUSENDMÆNNCHEN (tow'-zĕnt-mĕn-khĕn), The dew man, or dawn-fairy.....sopr.

Based on one of Grimm's stories, this graceful opera imports Wagnerian ideas into the nursery.

Act I.—Scene. The home of Peter. His hungry children left alone bewail their poverty, then fall to frolic. Their mother finding them idle, in her eagerness to punish them knocks over the only jug of milk in the house. She sends them to the woods to pick berries for supper and falls asleep. Her husband returns slightly tipsy but burdened with provisions. On learning of the errand of the children he is terrified lest they fall into the clutches of the Witch who lives on the Ilsenstein in a honey-cake house and bakes into gingerbread all the children she can capture. Peter and Gertrud rush out to rescue their children.

Act II.—Scene 1. The depths of a fir-forest near the Ilsenstein. The children, at first delighting in the woods and their liberty, suddenly realise as it grows dark that they are lost. At length they fall asleep under the spell of the Sandman after they have said their prayers invoking the fourteen angels, who appear coming down a Jacob's ladder to guard the children.

Act III.—Scene. The Witch's House. The angels and the forest have vanished, and the Dew-fairy appearing wakens Gretel by sprinkling her with dew from a bluebell. She wakens Hänsel by tickling him. They discover the Witch's House with its oven and cage, and a fence of gingerbread. They are nibbling bits of this when the Witch appears, takes the children captive and gallops about on her broomstick weaving incantations. She prepares the oven and tells Gretel to crawl in and see if the cakes are ready. The shrewd Gretel, however, has already used the Witch's wand to release Hänsel from the spell, and now pretending stupidity, begs the Witch to show her the way. The Witch bends over the oven and the children pop her into it and close the door on her. The fire roars within at such a rate as the children dance with glee, that finally the oven falls to pieces. The gingerbread figures now lose their honey-crust and prove to be children whom Hänsel restores to life with the wand. The jubilation is increased by the entrance of Peter and Gertrud, and finds its climax in the discovery that the Witch has been turned into a huge gingerbread-cake. A hymn of gratitude ends the quaint masterpiece.

Strolling Players :

CANIO (kä'-nĭ-ō) .....tenor.
TO'NIO .....bar.
BEP'PE .....tenor.
NED'DA, Canio's wife.....sopr.
SIL'VIO, A villager.....bar.

The scene is in Calabria on the Feast of the Assumption, about 1865. It develops a play within a play, a tragedy within a farce, and concerns the domestic crisis of a group of strolling players, presenting the venerable story of Harlequin, Columbine & Co., to the peasants of Italy.

After a brief orchestral flourish, Tonio, a hunchback, the clown of the troupe, sticks his head through the curtain and begs permission to revive the old Greek prologue. He steps forward as Prologue and explains that the play is a draught from real life, and shows that actors have their genuine, as well as their mimic tragedies. The purport of this famous number may be expressed in an inversion of Shakespeare's lines : "All the stage is a world, and all the players merely men and women."

Act I.—At Tonio's signal the curtain opens disclosing a cross-roads with a rude portable theatre. The distant sounds of a cracked trumpet and a belaboured drum call the peasants together and they greet with joy the familiar characters in whose costumes Canio, Nedda and Beppe enter in a donkey-cart. Silencing the crowd with his drum, Canio announces the play for the evening. Canio descends and boxes the ears of Tonio who loves Nedda and has hastened to assist her. The crowd laugh at Tonio who wanders off angrily. Beppe leads the donkey out and a villager invites the players to drink. Beppe throws down his whip and goes to change his clothes. Tonio says he must stay to clean the donkey. The villager hints that Tonio lingers to flirt with Nedda. Canio takes it as a joke. He says it is his place to play the hoodwinked husband on the stage, but off the stage—the end of the joke would be different ("Un tal gioca"). He loves his wife. After kissing Nedda, he goes with the men. The other peasants stroll away to Mass on hearing the church-bell.

Nedda left alone broods over the fierce look Canio gave her. She wonders if he suspects her. The sunlight thrills her with a vague ecstasy, and she revels in the song and sport of the birds ("Ballatella"). At the end of her rhapsody she finds that the hideous Tonio is listening. He makes ardent love ("So ben che difforme"—"I know I'm deformed"). She laughs him to scorn and advises him to save his love-making for the stage. He pursues her, however, and she, picking up Beppe's whip, slashes him across the face with it. He curses her, swears revenge, and stumbles away. Now her secret lover, Silvio, a villager, steals in over the wall. In an ardent love-scene he pleads with her to leave her hateful life, and join him. She begs him not to tempt her ("Non mi tentar"), but promises to meet him that night after the play is over. Tonio, having seen them, hurries away and returns with Canio. Silvio escapes, however, unrecognised in the thicket, while Tonio taunts Nedda. Canio returns and demands the lover's name. He threatens to kill Nedda, but she will not speak. Beppe rushes in and disarming Canio implores him to dress for the play as the people are even now approaching. Tonio hints that the lover may appear at the play. Left alone, Canio bewails his bitter fate sardonically, "On with the motley! ("Vesti la giubba") the people pay and want to laugh. If Harlequin steal your Columbine—laugh, Punchinello, and everyone will applaud. Laugh at your own frenzied love! laugh at the woe that is rending your heart." In wild grief Canio gropes his way into the theatre.

Act II.—Same scene in the evening, Beppe and Tonio beat the drum and blow the horn, and the people crowd into their places. Nedda collects the money and whispers a word of warning and promise to Silvio. The crowd grows impatient and at length the curtain of the theatre opens showing a crude little room. Nedda (as Columbine) is restlessly waiting. The servant Taddeo is away at market. She hears someone tuning a guitar outside and the voice of Beppe (as Harlequin) is heard outside in a serenade ("O Columbina, il tenero fido arlecchin"). As Columbine flutters with delight, the loutish Taddeo (played by Tonio) enters with a market-basket and makes ludicrous love. Harlequin entering the window kicks him. Taddeo finding a rival generously surrenders Columbine and promises to act as sentinel. Columbine and Harlequin feast gaily on the bird and wine fetched by Taddeo. He gives her a sleeping potion to mix with her husband's (Punchinello's) drink. Taddeo enters to warn the lovers, and Harlequin steals out of the window. Punchinello (played by Canio) enters the door just in time to hear Columbine promise to meet Harlequin at midnight. Canio's self-possession is shattered by the similarity of these words with those he had heard in real life a few hours before. He goes on with increasing difficulty. Columbine vows that no one has been with her, and Taddeo substantiates her story. Tonio lays such an ironic stress on the praise of Nedda's virtue that Canio again forgets himself and frantic with jealous rage demands the name of her lover. Nedda tauntingly calls him Punchinello, but he declares that he is a man again, not a puppet; and tells how he had taken her up as a starving orphan and loved her. He breaks down and the audience is much affected by the realism of the acting. Canio bursts out again in furious denunciation of Nedda's infidelity. The crowd applauds. Nedda volunteers to leave, but Canio says she shall not get to her lover so easily, and again demands the man's name. Nedda tries to resume the play with a flippant air ("Suvvia, così terribile"). Canio shrieks with rage at her manner and once more demands her lover's name, which she solemnly swears on her mother's soul that she will not tell. Tonio appears at the back of the stage restraining Beppe. Nedda, determined to escape, dashes toward the audience, but Canio seizing her stabs her. As she dies, she cries Silvio's name, and he rushing forward is also stabbed to death. Canio gasps to the horrified crowd, "The comedy is finished."

A peasant girl,
Gemma Bellinconi, sopr.
Lucia (loo-chē′-ä), Turiddu's mother.....contr.
Lo′la, Alfio's wife.....m.-sopr.

Scene.—A village-square in Sicily on Easter Day. Before the curtain rises, Turiddu is heard carolling a Siciliana to Lola whom he loves. At rise of the curtain peasant men, women, and children enter the church. There is a chorus of May and love. The deserted Santuzza enters and going to Lucia's cottage asks where Turiddu is. Lucia says he has gone to Francofonte, but Santuzza says he was seen in the village. She cannot enter Lucia's house, being excommunicated. The whip and bells of the carrier are heard and Alfio appears singing of the joys of the road ("Il cavallo scalpita"), and also of the fidelity of his wife. He asks Lucia for wine. She says Turiddu has gone to the next town to fetch it. Alfio says he had seen him that very morning near his own cottage. Lucia is curious but Santuzza signs her to be silent. The Easter hymn is sung and all enter the church but Santuzza and Lucia. Lucia asks why Santuzza warned her to keep silent. Santuzza tells her, "Well, you know, mother" ("Voi lo sapete, O mamma"), how Turiddu, going to war had plighted troth with Lola, returning to find her wedded. He then won the heart and the honour of Santuzza, only to be reconciled with Lola, leaving Santuzza to despair. Lucia goes into the church sadly. Turiddu comes and when asked, says he has been to Francofonte. Santuzza gives him the lie, she had seen him at dawn leaving Lola's house. He denies that he loves her, but scorns Santuzza. Lola is heard singing a light flower-ballad ("Fior di giaggolo"). Lola comes and finding the two together, scornfully enters the church. Turiddu reviles Santuzza for awaking Lola's jealousy. She pleads with him frantically but vainly ("No, no, Turiddu"). He casts her off and enters the church. In her fury she tells Alfio, who enters, that Turiddu has betrayed him. Alfio swears revenge.

After an instrumental Intermezzo, the same scene. An Easter chorus of people returning from church. Turiddu speaks to Lola, but she is hurrying home expecting her husband. Turiddu invites all to join him in wine ("Viva il vino spumeggiante"). Alfio comes. Turiddu invites him to drink with them. He says it would be poison to him. The women in alarm lead Lola away. Turiddu offers Alfio satisfaction and the men embrace, Turiddu according to custom biting Alfio's ear as a challenge. Turiddu begs Alfio not to blame Lola and thinks sadly of the lorn Santuzza. Alfio moves on to await Turiddu, who calls his mother and asks her blessing and her care for Santuzza if he does not return. He hurries away leaving her mystified and anxious. Santuzza and others appear. Confused voices are heard, then a woman screaming, "Turiddu is killed!" Santuzza and Lucia swoon.

Act I.—Scene I. Hall in the Comte de Gormas's palace. The Count and his friends hear a trumpet fanfare summoning them to be present at the knighting of the young Rodrigo. The friends say flatteringly that while honours are in the air, it were fitting the Count were appointed tutor to the King's son. The Count says how much he should value the honour. Chimène cannot contain her joy at the rejoicings in honour of Rodrigo. Her father smilingly accuses her of a tender interest in the hero of the day, and applauds her choice. Chimène, left alone, rejoices in being able to love openly. The Infanta, coming to visit her, reveals her own love for Rodrigo; but seeing Chimène's consternation, bids her love on untroubled, as a princess has not the right of loving whom she will. Scene 2. Gallery leading from Palace to Cathedral. Priests and people intone a psalm of thanksgiving for deliverance from the Moors. The King announces his intention to knight Rodrigo, though his valour is yet unproved, in compliment to Don Diègue. Rodrigo enters, his noble bearing admired by the assemblage. The King administers the oath of knighthood and presents the sword. Rodrigo apostrophises his sword, and invokes the aid of his patron St. James, and, gazing at Chimène, of his guardian angel. Chimène rejoices in this sign of his love for her. The King dismisses Rodrigo to the cathedral. As a further proof of his regard for Don Diègue, appoints him tutor to the Infanta. The friends of De Gormas express dissatisfaction. The King rebukes them, and goes. Diègue returns to ask the hand of Chimène for his son. The jealous Count repulses him, and ends by striking him. The old man, drawing his sword to avenge the insult, is easily disarmed by the Count, and is taunted by the others. Left alone, he bewails his age and dishonour. Hearing the voice of Rodrigo taking the oaths in the cathedral, he remembers that he has a champion in his son. When Rodrigo appears, he is told of the insult, which he angrily swears to avenge, and demands the offender's name. He is horrified to hear the name of Chimène's father. She appears from the church at that moment. His struggle between love and filial duty is fierce, but duty triumphs. He joins with his father in swearing vengeance.

Act II.—Scene 1. Moonlight street in Burgos with the Count's palace. Rodrigo enters, bemoaning his cruel fate, and meditating suicide; but overcomes his weakness, meets the Count, and challenges him. The Count disdains so untried a foe, but Rodrigo forces him to fight, and kills him. Diègue enters with friends and commends his son, who, however, is distracted with grief. Diègue sympathises with his distress. Chimène enters and wildly inquires her father's murderer, going from one to another, till she sees by Rodrigo's face that he is the guilty one. She swoons. A Requiem is heard chanted within. Scene 2. Square in Burgos. Scene of popular rejoicing. The Infanta goes from group to group, distributing alms. The King enters and is received with acclamation, to his daughter's joy. Suddenly Chimène rushes in and calls excitedly for justice; followed by Don Diègue and his friends who give their explanation of the Count's death. All, in chorus, express varied emotions; interrupted by a Moorish envoy, who brings a defiant message from the returning enemy. He is answered proudly by the King and withdraws. Then the King reproaches Rodrigo for having deprived him of his best general in this extremity. Diègue boldly suggests that Rodrigo take the place of leader, and is seconded by the crowd and Rodrigo himself, who begs a chance of proving his valour before he dies. The King consents.

Act III.—Scene 1. Chimène alone in her chamber at night, mourning her dead father and her lost lover ("Pleurez, pleurez, mes yeux!"). To her surprise, Rodrigo enters. They sing sadly of the bygone days of their happiness. Rodrigo, enraptured to find that Chimène still loves him, bids farewell before he goes to die. Chimène, reproaching him for thinking of death, urges him to return victorious, so that his past may be forgiven; then shocked with herself at this disloyalty to her father, tries to take it back, and flees, ashamed. But Rodrigo, glorying in her love, feels that no enemy can be too strong for him. Scene 2. Rodrigo's camp. Soldiers amusing themselves. Rodrigo entering reproaches them for frivolity in the face of death, and announces that an overwhelming army is upon them. Some counsel flight; it is indignantly repudiated by Rodrigo, who, however, lets the cowards go. He thanks the brave few who remain. Scene 3. Rodrigo praying in his tent. St. James appears and promises him victory. Scene 4. The battle-field at sunrise. Rodrigo assures his soldiers of victory.

Act IV.—Scene 1. Hall in the palace at Grenada. The runaway soldiers tell that Rodrigo has been overpowered and slain and they alone escaped. Diègue accuses them of cowardice, and says he had rather see his son dead than living as they. The ladies, entering, hear the bad news and cry out in grief. The Infanta tenderly consoles the old father, Chimène mourns her twice-broken heart, then publicly proclaims that she still loves Rodrigo, and is glad he knew it before he died. The King entering inquires the meaning of their distress when the town is joyful. Sounds of acclamation are heard, and Chimène understands at once that Rodrigo is alive, and a conqueror. Scene 2. Court of the palace. The King, etc., enter and take their places, while the crowd sings praises of the Cid. Procession of soldiers, captives, etc., lastly Rodrigo He proffers his sword to the King, who tells him to keep it and name his reward. Rodrigo sadly answers that the only reward he craves is not in the King's power to grant. The King, understanding, bids Chimène answer, and is echoed by the people. Chimène complains that she should be asked to reward her father's murderer, and the people fear she means to sentence him to death; but she can neither condemn nor forgive. Rodrigo, to relieve her, prepares to kill himself, but Chimène just in time prevents him, and confesses her love. General rejoicing.

Begun in 1838 the opera was not finished till 1863, nor produced till two years after Meyerbeer's death.

Act I.—Scene. Royal Council chamber. Inez and Anna appear; Inez, who loves the absent Vasco, has been summoned by her father, who comes to tell her that she is to marry Don Pedro. He tells her that Vasco is lost at sea, and she hurries away. The council assembles to discuss further explorations. Vasco appears. He has escaped alone from the shipwreck at the Cape of Storms, but begs a new ship to try the passage again, explaining that he has bought in Africa two slaves, members of a race not conquered by the Spaniards. Selika and Nelusko are brought in. Questioned as to their country, they refuse to tell. Vasco, persisting in his request for a ship, is arrested, and is condemned for impiety.

Act II.—Scene. The prison of the Inquisition at Lisbon. Vasco asleep. Selika declares her love for him, but hides as Nelusko enters to kill him as a Christian and enemy. She intervenes and pleads for him, but is forced to wake him, whereupon Nelusko conceals his dagger and leaves. Vasco studies his map and she warns him against dangerous capes. He expresses his gratitude, just as Don Pedro and Inez enter with his pardon. Inez suspects that Vasco loves Selika; to allay her suspicions he presents Selika to her as a slave. Don Pedro announces that he has won the royal commission to make the exploration Vasco planned. He also announces that he is to wed Inez, who has consented in order to secure Vasco's freedom. The treacherous Nelusko is to go as Pedro's pilot. Vasco is left alone in despair.

Act III.—Scene. The "between-decks" of a ship. Sailors' chorus and prayer. Inez, now Pedro's wife, is with him. Nelusko appears and gives commands. Accused of treachery, he denies it, but gleefully sings of Adamastor, the god of the typhoon, whom he trusts to destroy the Portuguese. A strange ship is sighted and a boat puts out. Vasco comes aboard and tells Pedro that he is drifting into the same trap he himself fell into; that the ship will fall prey to the storm and to a horde of savages from the shore. Pedro scornfully orders him to be tied to a mast and shot. Selika threatens to stab Inez if Vasco is not released. She is hoodwinked, overpowered and ordered to be scourged. But now the hurricane dashes on them, and in the panic, the ship is invaded by savages who overpower the crew.

Act IV.—Scene. Space between an Indian temple and a palace. The coronation ceremony of Selika. All the Portuguese have been condemned to death except Vasco, who had been found in chains. When all have departed, Vasco enters, guarded. He is overcome with the beauty of the place, an earthly Paradise. The Brahmans and soldiers are about to kill him, when Selika appears and rescues him, declaring that she has been plighted to wed him. Nelusko is overcome with grief at losing his beloved Selika. Vasco, in loving gratitude, consents gladly to the marriage, and the rites begin, when the mournful wails of Inez and her women are heard in the distance. He attempts to rush to her rescue, but the bridesmaids surround him and hale him to the altar.

Act V.—Scene 1. The queen's gardens. Inez, under guard, is upbraided by the enraged Selika, because Vasco has found his way to her. Inez confesses that she and Vasco are lovers still, and begs to be killed; but Selika's anger subsides into anguish, and when Nelusko enters with soldiers, she orders Inez and Vasco to be put on board a ship and sent home. Scene 2. A promontory on which is a large tree—the manchineel, whose perfume produces an ecstasy ending in death. The lone Selika appears and, inhaling the odour, breaks into a rapturous delirium of love for Vasco, as she falls asleep. The sound of a distant cannon awakens her. Nelusko enters joyfully announcing that Vasco has sailed. With a despairing cry her soul departs, and Nelusko dies of grief at her feet.

MERU (mŭ-rü).

Act I.—Scene 1. A feast at the castle of De Nevers. The revellers persuade Raoul to tell of a beautiful stranger he had once rescued from a crowd of boisterous students, and had since loved though he does not know her name. His servant, a stern old Protestant soldier, appears and is persuaded to sing an anti-Popery song, which the Catholic noblemen take good-naturedly. A servant, followed by Valentine, heavily veiled, whispers to De Nevers, who leaves with the veiled woman. Raoul recognises her as his mysterious love. De Nevers returns. The page Urbain appears and with much flourish delivers to Raoul a letter, which he passes about; though not signed, it is recognised as Marguerite's writing and is an invitation to come blindfolded to Court. The noblemen shower the puzzled Raoul with congratulations. Scene 2. The château and gardens of Marguerite. Surrounded by her attendants, she is rhapsodising over love, "A questa voce sola." Valentine enters. She has become a favourite of Marguerite and at her request has asked De Nevers to absolve her from the promise of marriage arranged by her father. Urbain laughingly announces that a cavalier with eyes blindfolded is waiting. Raoul is led in. Marguerite bids him remove the veil, and he is overcome by her beauty. She exacts of him a promise to do as she bids. The Gentlemen of the Court, including Valentine's father, St. Bris and De Nevers enter. She makes them all take an oath of peace and friendship. Marguerite, who is eager to reconcile the Catholics and Protestants, who are already drifting toward the St. Bartholomew massacre, announces that Raoul is to wed a lady of her choice. St. Bris brings in his daughter, and Raoul recognising her as the veiled woman who had called on De Nevers, suspects her honesty, and firmly declines to wed her. De Nevers and St. Bris swear revenge, and Valentine is overcome with humiliation.

Act II.—Scene. Two inns and a chapel on the bank of the Seine. Catholic students at one tavern and Huguenot soldiers at the other are making holiday. A bridal procession appears, leading De Nevers and Valentine, and St. Bris and Maurevert. Valentine remains at the chapel to pray. De Nevers leaves. Marcel enters and delivers a letter to St. Bris, who finds in it a challenge. He plots with Maurevert to assassinate Raoul, and is overheard by Valentine, who warns Marcel and leaves. St. Bris and Raoul arrive and prepare for the duel, when Marcel seeing Maurevert appear with soldiers, summons the Huguenot soldiers from the inn. The Catholics hasten from theirs and a riot is brewing. Marguerite and Urbain appear, and the combatants begin recrimination. Valentine appears and Marguerite explains to Raoul the purpose of Valentine's visit to De Nevers. He learns with grief that she has now become the wife of De Nevers, who appears in a barge and takes her away.

Act III.—Scene. The château of De Nevers. Valentine, alone, bemoans her lot; wedded to De Nevers, loving Raoul. Raoul appears. She conceals him behind a curtain just before the entry of St. Bris, De Nevers and others, who have met to plan the annihilation of all the Huguenots. There is an impressive scene, "The Blessing of the Poignards." De Nevers refuses to stoop to assassination; he breaks his sword and is led away. St. Bris bids them await the signal of the bell for the general massacre. Monks enter with a basket of white scarves. They bless the swords. When all have gone, Raoul steps out, eager to warn his friends and slay the conspirators. Valentine pleads with him not to go lest her father and her husband perish. She clings to him lovingly and he echoes her passion till the distant bell announces the slaughter; they look out into the street and see the St. Bartholomew massacre in full course. She faints with terror for him and he leaves by the window. [The performance usually ends here.]

Act IV.—Scene. A cemetery and church. Within the church are Huguenot women and children preparing to die for the faith. Raoul meets Marcel, who falls wounded. Little remains to them but to die bravely. De Nevers has been killed for interceding. Valentine appears, dishevelled and breathless. She begs Raoul not to die but to live for her. Her husband is dead. Marcel will join them in marriage. The religious hymns from the church are interrupted by sounds of musketry and the fury of the assassins. After a silence the three begin to sing Protestant hymns. The Catholics appear, St. Bris leading a company of soldiers. Though Valentine tries to restrain him, Raoul declares that he is a Huguenot. Valentine and Marcel cry, "And we also." St. Bris gives the command to fire, not seeing his daughter. She dies declaring that she will intercede for her father in heaven.

[In some versions there is a scene in which Raoul makes wild but vain appeals to Marguerite to put a stop to the massacre.]

GIO'NA, MA'THISEN, ZACCA'NA, Three Anabaptist Leaders of the Revolt.
FIDÈS (fē-dĕs),
Mother of Jean.....alto.
BERTA,
His betrothed.....sopr.

Note.—The hero of the opera is John of Leyden, an historical personage, who led a religious revolt that succeeded for a time in Holland, 1534.

Act I.—Scene. Dordrecht. Peasants and millers are at breakfast. Berta and Fidès meet. Berta, a poor orphan, is to be wed to Jean; the bridegroom even now waits her. Berta says she cannot wed without the consent of Oberthal, the lord of the domain. They start to ask this, but meet with three Anabaptists, who enter, and by talk of liberty arouse the peasants to attack the Castle. Oberthal appears at the gates and scornfully reviles Giona as his late thievish cellar-keeper. This cools the mob's fury. Berta and Fidès interrupt to ask Oberthal's consent to the girl's marriage, but he, smitten with her beauty, refuses it, and has her and Fidès dragged into the Castle. In the distance the hymn of the Anabaptists is heard.

Act II.—Scene. Jean's inn at Leyden. A soldier and peasants drinking. Jean serves them, but dreams of Berta's return. The three Anabaptists enter. They are struck by Jean's likeness to the image of the patron saint of the city of Münster. They learn from a peasant that he is also brave and versed in the Scriptures. Left alone with Jean, they question him. He tells them of dreams that have disturbed him by showing the people kneeling and hailing him king, while he reads in blazing letters a warning against drawing the sword; then a sea of blood envelops him and as he tries to climb to the throne it is swept away; demon-voices roar round him, but give way to a soft voice whispering "Mercy." They hail him as their leader, but he prefers Berta and lowly peace, and they leave him. A sound of horses is heard and Berta rushes in in terror, hiding, just before Oberthal and soldiers hasten after her. Oberthal demands the delivery of Berta, and vows otherwise to take the life of Fidès, who is dragged in and threatened with a soldier's axe. Jean turns toward Berta, who comes from concealment, but cannot see his mother killed, and in despair surrenders Berta to Oberthal, who drags her away swooning. Fidès pours out her gratitude (in a famous air "Ah, mon fils" or "O figlio mio") and leaves him to his misery. The Anabaptists enter and offer him the crown and sword. He accepts with fire, but when they tell him he must give up all his family ties and depart without seeing his mother again, he wavers; at length, however he follows them.

Act III.—Scene 1. The Anabaptist Camp, near a frozen lake in Westphalia. A battle is heard in the distance, and Anabaptist soldiers drag in a monk and other prisoners whom they and their women taunt. A band of skaters arrive with food, for which the soldiers barter spoils. Zaccana sends the visitors away and sends the soldiers to sleep. Scene 2. Zaccana's tent. He and Mathisen meet. They decide to assault Münster at once before Oberthal's father can bring up reinforcements. Oberthal is brought in as a prisoner. He is not recognised in the dark and offers to join them, swearing to help destroy the abbeys and the nobility. They declare that he must help destroy his father, and he consents. Giona strikes a light gaily and they all recognise Oberthal. They order him at once to the gallows, as Jean enters. He is determined to see his mother, and Zaccana says she will be killed if he attempts it. Oberthal is led past, but Jean demands his safety and, left alone with him, learns that Berta had leaped into the river to save her honour, and had escaped to Münster. A mutiny is threatened now by the soldiers chafing at Jean's inaction, till he, after prayers and exhortation and the seeing of a heavenly vision, sets forth with them to the assault.

Act IV.—Scene 1. A square in Münster. The citizens are paying tribute of gold to the victorious Anabaptists and secretly cursing the impostor Prophet, who is to be proclaimed Emperor of Germany. Fidès enters, disguised as a beggar. The citizens give her alms and depart; Berta enters as a Pilgrim. Recognising Fidès by her voice, she tells of her flight from Oberthal, her rescue by a shepherd, her return to the inn, where she learned Jean and Fidès had gone to Münster. Fidès says that Jean is dead; she had found blood-stained clothes of his and she believed the mysterious Prophet had killed him. Berta vows to kill the Prophet in revenge. Scene 2. Interior of the Cathedral. The coronation procession of Jean passes across. Fidès kneeling, has not seen him and prays for his destruction, unwitting who he is. Jean re-enters as all kneel, and takes the crown. Fidès and he recognise each other. Mathisen tells him that if he acknowledges her, she dies, and he disavows her. When she proclaims herself his mother, he says she is insane. She is about to be killed, but he intervenes, saying she has lost her reason. He then declares that if she still calls him her son, his followers must kill him. Faced by this crisis, Fidès denies him, and he is hailed as a miracle-worker for restoring the reason of Fidès, who is made prisoner.

Act V.—Scene 1. Prison in Münster Palace. The three Anabaptists meet; and learning that the true Emperor is marching on the town to recapture it, discuss a paper sent offering them clemency if they surrender Jean. Soldiers lead in Fidès, who, left alone, broods bitterly over her son's faithlessness to her. Jean enters, and she makes him kneel to implore her pardon. She demands that he renounce his power and repent. He consents. An officer enters to announce that the city is betrayed to the Emperor, and that a frantic woman was found trying to set fire to the palace. Berta is dragged in. Learning Jean's identity, she is revolted by his bloody ambition, and cursing him, stabs herself. Jean sends his mother away to safety, and determines to revenge himself on the traitors. The scene changes to 2. The Banquet Hall. Jean after sending two officers secretly to close the gates as soon as the Emperor's forces enter, joins wildly in the revel. The three Anabaptists now rush in, leading the hostile troops. They claim Jean as their prisoner. He cries that they are his. A great explosion rends the wall and all perish in the flames. Fidès rushes in to forgive her son, and dies with him.

Duke of Normandy, Nourrit, tenor.
BERTRAM (băr-trăṅ),
His friend.....Levasseur, bass.
RAIMBAUT (răṅ-bō),
A Norman peasant...Lafont, tenor.
ALBERT,
A knight.....bar.
ISABELLE,
Princess of Sicily,
Mme. Cinti-Damoreau, sopr.
ALICE,
A Norman peasant, Mlle. Dorus, sopr.
THE ABBESS.....Signora Taglioni.

[Next to Die Zauberflöte, probably the worst libretto in existence.]

Act 1.—Scene. A tented space near the port of Palermo. The Sicilian knights are drinking. Robert introduces himself and joins the chorus. A Norman minstrel (Raimbaut) appears and being asked to sing, tells the history of Robert the young duke ("Regnava un tempo"). According to this the Princess Bertha was won and wedded by a fiend in human disguise; their son was Robert called "the fiend." Robert in rage, declares himself the subject of the song, and orders his servants to hang the minstrel; he spares the man's life, however, when he learns that Raimbaut's betrothed has a message for him. Alice is shown in, Robert's heart softens toward her and he orders the boisterous knights away. Alice, his foster-sister, tells him his mother is dead, and dying had told her to go to her son ("Vanne, disse, al figlio mio") and beg him to reform his ways, and, on the day he felt worthy, to read the scroll which Alice shows: Robert feels unworthy to read. He tells Alice he has fallen in love with the Princess Isabelle, and in attempting to carry her off, was set upon by the knights of the court, and only saved by Bertram. Alice advises him to write to the Princess, whom he has not since seen. He dictates a letter and gives it to Alice to deliver, promising to consent to her marriage with Raimbaut. As she goes, she meets Bertram, who terrifies her by his resemblance to a picture of Satan she had seen. Robert confesses to Bertram he thinks his influence evil, but is persuaded to join the gambling knights, singing a Sicilian luck-song ("Sorte amica"). He loses everything he possesses in the game and receives only jeers from the others.

Act II.—Scene. Alone the Princess muses on her ill-fated love ("Dell' umana grandezza"). Alice and others enter with petitions, and Alice gives the Princess Robert's letter, which she receives with delight ("Ah, vieni"). She leaves just as Robert and Bertram enter. Robert has challenged the Prince to a bout at arms. A herald announces that the Prince desires the combat to be mortal; he leads Robert away to the forest. Isabelle and the King, Bertram, Alice, Raimbaut, and others assemble. After dances and song, the herald announces to Isabelle that the Prince wishes her to arm him. She gives his squires the arms, but secretly wishes Robert success. Bertram aside gloats over the fact that Robert is lost in the woods and will not come. The others wait anxiously for him, but he does not appear, and the procession moves away.

Act III.—Scene 1. A gloomy place with a ruined temple, a cavern and a cross. Raimbaut has come to meet Alice here, but Bertram appears and giving him gold advises him not to be hasty about marrying Alice. The minstrel goes away in doubt. Bertram alone gloats demon-like over the approaching doom of Robert, who is actually his son. The chorus of fiends is heard ("Demoni fatali," the "Valse Infernale") and Bertram enters their fiery cave. Alice comes down the mountain dreaming of Normandy ("Nel lasciar la Normandia"). She is terrified by the sounds from the cavern, but hearing Robert's name called she stops, embraces the cross and swoons. Bertram enters in confusion; the demons have warned him that if he does not win Robert's soul before midnight, he loses him forever. Seeing Alice, he threatens her and her betrothed and all her friends with death if she discloses what she has heard. Robert comes gloomily and Bertram orders her away. She goes reluctantly, and Bertram tells Robert she is agitated with jealousy of Raimbaut; he tells Robert that the Prince has used sorcery and must be met with it. Scene 2. Mysterious vaults. Bertram entering calls statues of nuns to life and bids them entice Robert when he comes, and make him pluck the branch of magic power. When he withdraws, the nuns dance a wild Bacchanale and surround Robert, who enters, but in terror seeks to fly. After the ballets of "Intoxication," and "Gaming," and "Love," he seizes the branch.

Act IV.—Scene. Isabelle is in her apartments surrounded by bridesmaids; she is to marry the Prince. As he enters, Robert appears and with his magic branch puts all to sleep, then awakens Isabelle. She rebukes him for not being present at the combat, and pleads with him to throw off the infernal influence ("Roberto, o tu che adoro," or "Robert, toi que j'aime"). He consents, breaks the branch, and kneels at her feet. The court awakens from its sleep and Robert is seized and dragged away. Alice prays for him and the Princess swoons.

Act V.—Scene. Cloisters. A chorus of monks. Robert enters, dragging in the reluctant Bertram. Bertram promises him success after all if he will sign a scroll. As he is about to do so, he hears a hymn sung in the chapel, and his childhood faith wakes in him. Bertram tries to win him away to despair, and at last declares himself Robert's father. Alice enters and struggles for Robert with the fiend-father; as he finally produces a parchment and a stiletto, Alice presents the mother's will; in it Robert reads a warning not to trust the counsels of the fiend. As he still hesitates, the clock strikes twelve. Bertram vanishes in despair and a chorus of angels and men sing a hymn of joy.

Il Dissolu'to Puni'to; ossia il Don Giovanni (dôn jō-vän'-nē), I., Don Juan (dôn hwän in Sp., in F. dôn-zhwäṅ, in E. dän joo'-än).

Two-act opera buffa. Book by Lorenzo da Ponte (from Tirso de Molina's story, "El combidado de piedra"). Composed in great haste and produced, Prague, October 29, 1787.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

DON OTTA'VIO.....Baglioni, tenor.
DON GIOVANNI.....Luigi Bassi, bar.
LEPOREL'LO, His servant...Felice Ponziani, bass.
DON PEDRO (pā'-drō), Il Commendatore (in German, Der Komthur), the Commandant of Seville. } Loli, bass.
MASET'TO, A peasant. } DONNA ANNA, Daughter of Don Pedro, Signora Teresa Saporitti, sopr.
DONNA ELVIRA (ĕl-vē'-rä)..Micelli, sopr.
ZERLINA (tsĕr-lē'-nä).....Bondini, sopr.

Act I.—Scene 1. Seville Square before the Commendatore's palace at night. Leporello complains of working for his master night and day ("Notto e giorno faticar"). Don Giovanni now enters; he has attempted outrage upon Donna Anna, and being frustrated is taking flight; she clings to him to discover who he is and calls for help. Her father, the Commendatore, hurrying to her rescue, is killed by Don Giovanni, who slinks away undiscovered, followed by his disgusted and terrified servant. Ottavio, Anna's fiancé, enters with servants and torches. He and Donna Anna swear revenge against the murderer ("Fuggi crudele"; Schwur-Duett). Scene 2. A street. Don Giovanni enters hastily. Leporello protests against his master's mode of life, but is threatened and cajoled, and told of a new amour. Donna Elvira is seen coming and the men withdraw to one side, while she bewails her lost honour and Don Giovanni's perfidy ("Ah chi mi dice"). Not recognising her, the Don comes forward flirtatiously, only to be bitterly rebuked. The Don referring her to Leporello, steals away. Leporello tells her that she is only one of a long list of victims to the Don's gallantry; he unrolls a catalogue of them ("Madamina, il Catalogo"; Register-Arie), a thousand or more of all countries, ages and conditions. When he has gone, she breaks out into a prayer for revenge ("Mi tradi quell' alma ingrata"). Scene 3. The country near the Don's palace. Zerlina and Masetto, about to be married, make merry with the other peasants ("Giovenette, che fate"). The Don and his servant appear, and the Don questions Zerlina and orders the others to his palace for refreshment. Masetto, in spite of his jealous dread, is dragged away by Leporello. The Don promises the terrified girl that he will marry her, and after some fluttering she accepts the decoy (in a duet, "La ci darem"). They are confronted by Donna Elvira, who leads the girl away from danger. Ottavio and Anna in deep mourning enter. The Don now attempts to play the gallant to Anna, and pretends he does not know the cause of her mourning. Elvira returns and denounces him ("Non ti fider, O misera"), whereupon he declares that she is insane. Ottavio and Anna are deceived for the moment, but when, after inviting them to his palace, he follows Elvira away, Anna tells Ottavio that she believes Don Giovanni to be the mysterious man who had entered her room at night, and in his flight had killed her father. She describes the scene in detail and declaring to Ottavio "Now you know the villain" ("Or sai che l'indegno"), she bids him revenge her. When they have gone, Leporello enters, deciding to quit his distasteful service, and when Don Giovanni enters, he tells him how he has filled Masetto and the others with food and drink only to have Zerlina return with Elvira, who had told the company of the Don's misdeeds. Leporello tells how he finally got her out of the house, and the Don decides that a carousal with the peasants will please him ("Finchè dal vino"). Scene 4. A garden. Zerlina is trying to console the indignant Masetto, finally crying, "Beat me, beat me" ("Batti, batti"). Just as he is won over, the Don's voice is heard; Masetto and she hide and the Don enters with the peasants; they pass on and the Don discovers Zerlina; as he pleads with her, he also descries Masetto and with presence of mind invites him to join them at the feast. When they have gone Ottavio enters with Anna and Elvira, all three in dominoes and masks. In the "Mask-Trio" they disclose their plan to learn the true character of the Don who with Leporello appears and invites them in. Scene 5. A great ball-room. The peasants are revelling in the hospitality of the Don, and the attentiveness of his servant. Both master and man flirt outrageously, and Masetto is in torment, as the Don drags Zerlina away. Her voice is heard crying for help, and the three masked people entering realise the Don's blackness of heart. Zerlina escapes and throws herself on their protection. The Don tries to throw the blame on Leporello, but the three remove their masks and denounce his crimes. Thunder is heard foreboding his doom, but the Don laughs at fate.

Act II.—Scene 1. A street at evening. Leporello is trying to get away from his master, who finally bribes him with money to carry out his plot. He exchanges cloaks and hats with the reluctant servant, and when the love-lorn Elvira appears at a window, the Don from concealment implores her to forgive him and come down. She is overwhelmed with joy at his return and descends. Leporello imitates his master's voice, and makes such love to her that when the Don makes a noise as if killing someone, she flees hastily with Leporello. The coast is now clear for the Don's plot against Zerlina, and he sings a serenade to bring her to the window ("Deh vieni alla finestra"). But Masetto enters with his friends armed with cudgels and guns. Thinking the Don to be the servant, he tells his plan to kill the libertine; the Don sends the villagers on a wild-goose chase, beats the stupid Masetto and gets safely away. Zerlina entering tries to appease her distracted and aching lover by her tenderness ("Vedrai carino"). Scene 2. Portico of Donna Anna's palace. Leporello and Elvira enter, he wondering how to get rid of the tenacious servants and torches. Ottavio is trying to comfort Anna. Leporello in eluding Elvira comes upon Masetto and Zerlina, but after pleading for pardon escapes by running. Ottavio declares himself convinced of the Don's guilt, and promises to console Anna "his treasure" ("Il mio tesoro") with speedy revenge. Scene 3. A square with a statue of the Commendatore. The Don and Leporello groping along, meet in the dark. The Don laughingly tells of an amorous encounter he had with some strange woman who thought him to be Leporello. The statue speaks warningly. Leporello is terrified, but the Don only mystified; he has Leporello read the inscription "On the impious wretch who caused my death, here I wait revenge." He laughs and says: "Tell the old buffoon, that I expect him to dinner to-morrow evening"; he is greatly amused at Leporello's terror, and asks the statue itself, "Will you come to dinner?" The statue answers "Yes," and the Don, amazed, drags the trembling Leporello home. Scene 4. A garden. Ottavio is trying to pacify Donna Anna with hopes of speedy revenge, but when he talks of love she bids him wait ("Non mi dir"). Scene 5. Banquet-hall in Don Giovanni's palace. Musicians play while the Don eats, served by Leporello, who steals many mouthfuls meanwhile. (In this scene Mozart alludes to and parodies an aria from his rival Martin's opera, "La Cosa Rara," and later parodies his own "Non più andrai" from "Le Nozze di Figaro.") Elvira enters to plead with him to repent, the last proof of her love ("L'ultima prova"), but he ridicules her and she leaves him. As she goes, she gives a scream of terror. The Don sends Leporello to learn the cause. He cries out and fastens the door. The musicians take flight, and Leporello explains as he shivers, that the statue has come. Its knock is now heard, and the Don goes to the door while Leporello crawls under the table. The Don ushers in the statue and orders Leporello to bring him food, but the statue says he does not feed on mortal food; he has come to invite the Don to sup with him. In spite of Leporello's pleading, the Don jauntily accepts. The statue takes his hand, and in this chill clutch the Don learns fear for the first time. He refuses the statue's pleading that he repent, however, and is enveloped in flames and haled by demons down to eternal punishment.

[The story is really a sequel to that in Rossini's "Barber of Seville."]

Act I.—Scene. A half-furnished room in the Count's castle near Seville. Figaro and Susanna talk of their coming marriage. He thinks the room very convenient; "ding-ding!" he can soon answer his master's bell; "dong-dong!" she can soon answer that of her mistress. Susanna suggests that the bell may send him three miles away while the Count comes in his place. She tells the jealous Figaro of the Count's attention to herself. She is called away and he fumes and threatens to lead the Count a dance he will not like. When he has gone, Bartolo and Marcellina enter, she with a document, Figaro's former agreement to marry her. She is planning to break up the match between Susanna and Figaro, so that she can marry him herself; Bartolo, in love with Susanna, seeks revenge ("La Vendetta") on his successful rival. He goes and Susanna enters. The two women cast aspersions on each other ironically, and Marcellina leaves. Cherubino the page enters, and says the Count has threatened to discharge him for flirting with Barbarina; he is really in love with the Countess, and the Count is jealous of him. He says that he is a madman over love, and has written a poem (he sings "Non so più cosa son"). The Count is heard coming and he has just time to hide behind a great chair. Basilio is next heard and Susanna just manages to conceal the Count behind the chair and Cherubino in it. Basilio retails a deal of gossip about the page and the Countess till the Count rises angrily. Susanna pretends to swoon, and the two men support her with great solicitude. The Count tells how he discovered the page hiding under the table at Barbarina's. In illustration he lifts the cloth Susanna had thrown over Cherubino, and again discovers the page. The Count is first consternated, then angry. Peasants come in to deck the bridal-chamber, and the Count declares that he will send Cherubino to the war with a commission as Captain. Figaro gloats over the terrified boy, "No more you'll flit, amorous butterfly," etc. ("Non più andrai").

Act II.—Scene. The Countess's chamber. She is alone and sings a sad love-wail ("Porgi, amor"). Susanna enters, then Figaro, who tells a plan to torment the Count with jealousy by sending him a warning letter. He leaves and Cherubino appears. He shows his commission; they make him sing his poem, "You who know what love is" ("Voi che sapete"). They then dress him in women's clothes, Susanna bidding him kneel ("Venite inginocchiatevi"). Suddenly the Count is heard outside. Cherubino flies to the closet. The Count is suspicious and shows his letter; he hears the page in the closet, but his wife will not unlock the door. He makes her go with him while he hunts a crowbar. While they are gone Cherubino steals forth and jumps out of the window and Susanna takes his place in the closet. As the Count is about to break the door in, the Countess confesses that Cherubino is there and is overcome with grief. Susanna walks out to the astonishment of all. The Countess taunts the apologetic Count, and tells him Figaro wrote the letter. Figaro enters and is accused of the letter, but denies it. The gardener, half-drunk, enters complaining that some man had jumped out of the window and ruined his flowers, then run away. Figaro says it was he, in terror of the Count. The gardener says that he dropped some papers, among them Cherubino's commission. This is recognised and the Count is frenzied. To complete Figaro's discomfiture, Marcellina enters with his document promising to marry her. Bartolo and Basilio are witnesses. All ends in confusion.

Act III.—Scene 1. A large room decorated for a wedding. The Count, alone, plans to compel Figaro to marry Marcellina. Susanna, overhearing, pretends to have come for the Countess's smelling-salts; she says she has overheard the Count's scheme, but consents to meet him in the garden at night. He starts to go, and she tells Figaro, who enters, that he has won his cause. They hurry out; the Count, who has overheard her, ponders suspiciously; he miserably asks "Shall I behold, while I sorrow, my servant happy?" ("Vedro, mentr' io sospiro"). Don Curzio enters with Figaro, Marcellina, and Bartolo. He says that Figaro must marry Marcellina or pay her a forfeit. Figaro proves that he is of good birth, and shows a mark on his arm by which Marcellina recognises him as her own son by Dr. Bartolo. They are all embracing when Susanna enters with the money to buy Figaro's liberty. Her indignation is soon assuaged and all leave. Scene 2. The Countess enters alone, musing over the plan to disguise herself as Susanna and meet the Count in the garden; she bewails the lost devotion of her husband who had wooed her so ardently (see Rossini's opera "The Barber of Seville"). She moans "Where now are those blessed moments" ("Dove sono i bei momenti"). Susanna enters and the Countess dictates to her a letter (in a duet "The Zephyr"), telling the Count to meet her where the zephyr breathes in the pines. Cherubino enters in girl's clothes, and a chorus of country girls present the Countess with flowers. Antonio and the Count enter and recognise Cherubino. Figaro tries to calm the Count, the Wedding March is heard; Figaro sings ("Ecco la Marcia") and all leave except the Count and Countess, who remain and wait coldly till the double wedding-procession returns with Figaro and Susanna and Bartolo and Marcellina. Susanna (observed by Figaro) slips the note to the Count, who bids all make merry.

Act IV.—Scene. The garden. Basilio and Bartolo ponder the Count's duplicity and the folly of love. Basilio tells how "in those years when inexperienced" ("In quegli anni"), love had made him mad, till finally age and experience protected him with the skin of an old ass. They withdraw and Figaro entering grieves over Susanna's treachery and woman's frailty ("Ah, che il fidarsi a donna"). He hides, but is observed by Susanna, who enters with the Countess and Marcellina. To torment Figaro Susanna sings "Come, love, do not delay" ("Deh, vieni non tardar"), and leaves; Cherubino enters in regimentals looking for Barbarina; he sees the Countess in Susanna's garb and thinking her to be actually Susanna tries to flirt with her. He escapes into the pavilion on the left as the Count enters. Seeing Figaro, the Count whispers the supposed Susanna to hide with him in a pavilion on the right. Susanna enters in the Countess's gown and explains herself to the delighted Figaro. The Count reappears and seeing Figaro kneeling before the supposed Countess is infuriated and calls the servants. Figaro and Susanna escape into a pavilion on the left. Basilio and others enter with torches. The Count entering the pavilion on the left unearths Cherubino and Barbarina, Marcellina and Bartolo, and Susanna, who, pretending still to be the Countess, hiding her face, pleads for pardon, which the Count will not grant. The Countess herself now appears and the Count kneeling begs her forgiveness. She grants it and a chorus of general contentment ("Ah, tutti contenti") cuts the Gordian knot of complications.

THREE FAIRIES,
Disguised as women and guides.

NOTE.—The opera is sadly complicated by the vanity and gaucherie of the librettist and his desire to drag in certain allusions to Freemasonry, in which he and Mozart were enthusiasts.

Act I.—Tableau 1. A rocky path past a fairy cavern. Tamino in the toils of a serpent (or in some versions Gnomes) calls for help just as he falls asleep under the spell. The Fairies rescue him and discuss how he, a fisher, played his sweetheart such sweet tunes that the Queen of Night herself loved him. As her love is fatal, they plan to save him by getting him into the Temple of Isis. They retire as Papageno runs in; he meets Papagena and tells her who he is ("Der Vogelfänger bin ich ja," or "Sono un gaio uccellator"); she tells him she is in the power of Monostatos. Tamino wakes as from a dream and asks the way to the Temple; he tells of his beloved Pamina and shows a miniature of her ("Dies Bildniss ist bezäubernd schön"—"O cara immagine"). Papagena tells him that Monostatos has just bought Pamina as a slave. They decide to hunt for her, but cannot find the path; as they look for it, the Queen of Night appears to Tamino and sings to him a love-song, "Oh, fear not, dear youth" ("O zittre nicht, mein lieber Sohn"—"Giovane amato, non temer"). She pledges him to rescue her daughter Pamina and vanishes. The three Fairies offer to show the lost ones the path; but the price must be the power of speech or that of memory. Papagena loses memory and Papageno is rendered dumb, but later restored on swearing never to lie again, and given a magic bell, while Tamino is given a flute of magic power. They are then shown the path, after a quintet known as the "Padlock." Tableau 2. The Harem of Monostatos. Bamboloda drags Papagena in; in her absence Pamina has escaped. Monostatos enters and the recaptured Pamina is brought in and chained. Papageno appears and frightens Monostatos away. They sing a duet of love's power ("Bei Männern, welche Liebe füllen"—"Del cor gli affanni"); he shakes his bell, the gates open and they escape. Tableau 3. An Avenue. The Fairies tell that Pamina has fallen in Sarastro's power; appearing to Tamino disguised as Guides, they point him a path and leave him. He is warned by voices and by Manes, who tells him that he is moved by desire for revenge on Sarastro, and refuses to tell him where Pamina is. Tamino plays on his flute and sirens gather round; he wanders sadly away, searching. Papageno enters with Pamina and answers Tamino's distant flute with his own; encountering Monostatos and slaves, he compels them to dance away to his magic bell. Sarastro enters with retinue, and welcomes the two to his Temple. Monostatos drags in Tamino, who embraces Pamina. Sarastro orders Monostatos to be flogged and Tamino and Papageno to be veiled and led in.

Act II.—Tableau 4. The Hall of Initiations. Sarastro and the Priests invoke Isis and Osiris ("O Isis und Osiris!"—"Possenti Numi"). Tamino and Papageno are brought in and asked if they will undergo the rites; they are advised by two priests to avoid false beauty and they are left alone and find that their flute and bell have been taken. The three Fairies appear and warn them not to undergo the rites, but they resist the blandishments of the women, whose presence in the sanctuary causes the fall of the altar. Tableau 5. A Tent in a garden. Monostatos steals in, guided by Bamboloda. He is furious at being beaten, but dreams of the beloved Pamina ("Alles fühlt der Liebe Freuden"—"Regna amor"). Pamina is discovered in the tent; he tries to take her away, and she escapes only to be confronted by the Queen of Night, her mother, who hates her for her devotion to the noble Sarastro, who is trying to save the girl's soul. The Queen curses her in tremendous fury ("Der Hölle Rache kocht"—"Gli angui d'inferno"). Sarastro enters and declares that only peace and love rule in these sacred precincts ("In diesen heil'gen Hallen"—"Qui sdegno"). He leads the girl away and the Queen and Monostatos plot the death of Pamina. When they have gone, the three Fairies enter; they have overheard the plot but decline to aid it. Tamino and Papageno enter; the Fairies appear as the Guides and restore the magic talismans in a trio. Papageno shakes his bell and calls for Papagena, only to see her flirting with Bamboloda. He shakes the bell again and summons Pamina; she enters and embraces Tamino, but he is under pledge and does not answer her. She sings sadly that no joy is for her ("Ach! ich fühl's es ist verschwunden"—"Ah, lo so"). Sarastro enters and removing the pledge reunites the lovers; he bids Tamino hasten across the sacred forest to complete his rites. There is a trio of farewell and Tamino leaves. Tableau 6. The Sacred Forest. Papageno alone sings a love-song ("Ein Mädchen oder Weibchen"—"Colomba o tortorella"). Papagena enters, she does not remember him, and he reproaches her. She flees, and the three Fairies tell him of Tamino's ordeal. He leaves, and Pamina enters with a dagger; she would kill herself, but the Fairies prevent her. Tableau 7. The Crypt of the Temple. Tamino is taking his final vows; Pamina is brought in, and the two undergo the ordeal of fire and water, the evil spirits being chased by Tamino's flute. He is hailed by the Priests as a victor. Tableau 8. The Portal of the Temple. Papageno in despair for Papagena is about to hang himself; the Fairies advise him to summon her with his bell. She appears and they have a joyful duet ("Pa-pa-pa-pa-geno"). When they have gone, the Queen of Night and Monostatos steal in to murder Sarastro before her power vanishes with dawn. The gates of the Temple open, revealing the votaries kneeling, and the lovers united before Isis. The Queen vanishes in helpless rage before the dawn and the chorus of reverent joy.

PADEREWSKI, IGNACE JAN.

Manru.

Three-act opera. Book by Dr. Alfred Nossig. Produced, Court Theatre, Dresden, May 29, 1901.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

MAN'RU,
A gipsy.....Anthes, tenor.
UROK (oo'-rôk),
A dwarf.....Scheidemantel, bar.
JAGU (yä'-goo),
A gipsy fiddler.....Rains, bass.
O'ROS,
A gipsy chief.....Hopfl, bass.
ULANA (oo-lä'-nä),
A Galician girl....Frl. Krull, sopr.
HEDWIG (hät'-vĭkh),
Her mother,
Frl. von Chavanne, m. sopr.
ASA (ä'-zä),
A gipsy girl....Frau Kammer, sopr.

The opera begins and ends with a single voice. It has no overture at all, and only seventeen measures of prelude.

The scene is the Tatra Mountains between Galicia and Hungary.

Act 1.—The widow Hedwig sits before her hut and bemoans in a folk-song the fate of the dove that took no heed of the hawk's approach till she felt his sharp claws. The dove is Hedwig's daughter, Ulana; the hawk, the heathen gipsy who carried her off. As she sings maidens dance about, adorning the village green for the festival. The dwarf, Urok, appears. The maidens call him "dragon's-egg, an adder, monster, wood-dwarf, tadpole, and horn-owl." Urok takes these as a great joke. Then he asks Hedwig of her daughter. "She is dead to me," says Hedwig. Urok tells of meeting the "dead" Ulana. The maidens greet her name with jeers; the mother, with a vow never to receive her until she gives up her gipsy. Hedwig returns to her hut; Urok rebukes the maidens, and they mock him as a rejected lover of Ulana. Ulana herself now appears in great dejection and the villagers rail at her. She says she still loves her gipsy, and he her. But they taunt her with a proverb:

"Ere the full moon starts to wane
Every gipsy goes insane,
Leaves his child and leaves his wife And scoots for his dear life."

This jingle reappears all through the opera. The maidens leave Ulana to her grief. Against Urok's advice, she knocks at her mother's door. Hedwig comes. After some reproach she offers to take Ulana and her child back if she will give up Manru. Urok and Hedwig insist that Manru will leave her, anyway, when the gipsies come again. But Ulana refuses. Hedwig shuts her door on her. Urok prophesies Manru's perfidy and proffers his own love. But she prevails on him to brew her a philter to bring back Manru's wavering fancy. The village men and maidens gather and dance. They surround Ulana. Manru appears and demands that they let her go, but they scout him as a heathen. Hedwig comes out of her hut and a hush falls on the mob. She bitterly denounces the pair as lepers, and the people fall back from them.

Act II.—Scene. The curtain rises at once on Manru's home in the mountains, where the gipsy, turned blacksmith, is fighting a losing battle against his Wanderlust. Ulana is singing a lullaby to her baby in the hut. Manru admires, but cannot imitate, her steadfastness. In a frenzy he belabours the anvil with his sledge. Ulana hurries out to calm his fury, but whispers uneasily:

"Ere the full moon starts to wane Every gipsy goes insane."

This brings down on her own head all his violence, and he is about to strike her when Urok appears and stays his hand. Both Manru and Ulana accuse him of being a sorcerer, but he claims only a knowledge of the human heart and a few herbs. He admits that he can evoke a spell to carry Manru away. Listen! In the distance a Romany fiddler is heard. Manru breaks away and flies toward the siren music. Ulana would run after him, but Urok holds her back, gives her a potion for Manru, and keeps her in hiding while Manru returns with an old gipsy fiddler, Jagu. Jagu offers Manru the leadership of the tribe. He refuses. Jagu mentions the fair Asa, who longs for Manru but must soon wed Oros, his old rival. Manru, about to go, sees Ulana, and refuses, ordering the tempter away. Left alone, Manru and Ulana marvel at the travel-frenzy that spurs him. With a noble effort to return to his duty he takes up his sledge. But Urok teases him with a vivid picture of Asa. Manru drives him away and Ulana brings him a potion, which he drains. This rouses him to an ecstasy of love in which she joins.

Act III. has a long prelude. The rise of the curtain reveals a summer landscape of storm and night. Manru is alone and stifling with restlessness. "All is dark," he cries, "but I feel the moon which sweeps past behind the clouds." Voices of gipsies are heard in the distance and he sinks down asleep. There follows an orchestral nocturne. Now and then the full moon breaks from the clouds and Manru grows restless in his sleep, till it is veiled again. Gipsies troop in, among them Asa. They discover Manru and sprinkle his face with water. When he wakes, it is Asa that first welcomes him. Oros protests angrily that Manru should be an outcast as he is a renegade. He quarrels with Asa; but Manru insists that he cannot follow them. Asa pleads with him. The people fall to dancing and Asa joins them to allure

Manru. Oros protests wrathfully and the tribe are won to his wrath. Then Jagu enters and turns the tide for Manru, who is hailed as a repentant kinsman. Oros, in a rage, throws down his staff of office and goes. The revel begins anew, but Manru refuses the chieftainship. Then the musicians under Jagu try their skill, and Manru's last scruple melts in an outburst of joy. Urok appears and gleefully reviles Manru's treason to his wife and child. He is driven away by the crowd. Manru's conscience gnaws him again, but is smothered by Romany-rapture. He embraces Asa, and the tribe marches away (the stage remaining empty during most of a barbaric march-tune). Ulana follows, crying for her husband, and Urok tells her of his perfidy. She cries to Manru to come back. She sends Urok up into the hills to find him. He answers that he has gone past recall. With a last shriek she leaps into the lake. Later, upon a cliff, Asa and Manru reappear in each other's arms. Oros rushes upon Manru and crying, "You rob me of Asa; you'd replace me as chief!" hurls him into the gorge. Asa screams. Urok laughs fiendishly. Oros roars "The place is mine!" [In a later version it is Urok who hurls Manru over the cliff.]

ALCINDOR (ăl-săn-dôr).....bass.
SERGEANT AT TOLL-HOUSE.....bass.
MIMI (mē-mē).....sopr.
MUSETTE (mü-zĕt).....sopr.

Place of action, Paris. Time, about 1830.

Act I.—Scene. A bare and cold garret. Marcel and Rudolphe at their work. Rudolphe brings a MS. tragedy of his to burn in the stove for warmth. Colline enters and assists. Then Schaunard comes to the rescue with food and wine and fuel, which they enjoy. The landlord enters to demand rent. They make him drink and chaff him about his flirtations; then, in simulated righteous indignation, eject him. The young men go pleasure-seeking, leaving Rudolphe to finish his writing. Mimi, an embroiderer and fellow-lodger, enters to ask for a light. As the door opens to let her out again, a gust of air extinguishes all the lights. She drops her key and they both grope for it in the dark. Rudolphe finds it, but promptly pockets it and continues groping till he catches Mimi's hand. He engages her in talk, tells her he is a poet, and she tells about herself and her work. The others call impatiently from below, where they wait. Rudolphe opens the window to answer. The moonlight streaming in irradiates Mimi's beauty. Rudolphe and Mimi confess their mutual love.

Act II.—Scene. Christmas Eve in the Latin Quarter. A throng of holiday-makers, in front of the Café Momus, buying, eating, etc. Rudolphe, Mimi wearing a becoming pink hood, Marcel, Schaunard, and Colline mix with the crowd. A waiter brings out a table for the young men. Rudolphe introduces Mimi and they sit down together. Their orders to the waiter mingle with the outcry caused by the entry of Parpignol, surrounded by eager children, whose mothers try to lead them away. Musette, richly dressed, enters with the elderly and infatuated Alcindor. They sit at an adjacent table. She is indignant that Marcel, her former lover, takes no notice of her, and talks loudly for his benefit, while Alcindor vainly tries to quiet her, thinking her talk is meant for himself. Musette, seeing that she has at last moved Marcel, pretends her shoe hurts and sends Alcindor to buy a new pair. Then she and Marcel embrace and are reconciled. The bill is presented, but none of the party has money. Musette bids the waiter add it to her bill and leaves it for Alcindor to pay. A military procession marches across the scene. The friends fall in line behind and exeunt; Musette having only one shoe, is carried by Marcel and Colline, followed by the rest keeping step. Alcindor returning, is shown the bill and sinks horrified into a chair.

Act III.—Scene. The Barrière d'Enfer. Market-women, etc., paying toll. Mimi enters, coughing, and asks for Marcel at the inn where he lives with Musette. He comes out and she tells him Rudolphe threatens to leave her, and asks in despair what to do. As Rudolphe just then comes out of the inn, she hides behind a tree. Rudolphe tells Marcel he means to leave Mimi. At first he pretends it is on account of jealousy; finally he confesses it is because he sees she is dying of consumption and, though he still loves her, he has no money to keep her in comfort. Marcel tries to lead Rudolphe out of earshot, but Mimi, lamenting, hears her death-sentence. A fit of coughing betrays her hiding-place. Rudolphe, startled, soothes and caresses her. Musette is heard within, laughing and flirting. Marcel, jealous, rushes inside. Mimi bids Rudolphe farewell, telling him to keep her pink hood as a keepsake. Marcel and Musette emerge quarrelling, and the four voices mingle in contrasting colloquies. The disputing lovers go in again, leaving the others to end their pathetic farewell.

Act IV.—Scene. Same as Act I. Marcel and Rudolphe at their work tell how each has seen the beloved of the other riding in a carriage, well-dressed, etc. Both express contentment, but are inwardly jealous and cannot work. Marcel takes out a ribbon Musette gave him, and Rudolphe presses Mimi's hood to his heart, each concealing his emotion from the other. Schaunard and Colline enter with frugal provisions. They try to forget their woes in merrymaking. Suddenly Musette enters, saying that Mimi is close behind, and explains that Mimi has left her Count and returned to Rudolphe to die. Mimi enters in the last stage of consumption. She says how much better she feels to be back there, but that her hands are cold and she would like a muff. Rudolphe tries to warm them in his. The others are overcome with compassion. Musette gives her jewels to Marcel to sell to get a doctor, etc., for Mimi; then declares she must also get her a muff, and goes with him. Colline bids farewell to his faithful old coat and carries it to pawn, taking Schaunard with him that the lovers may be alone. Mimi, who had apparently been asleep, now rouses, and the two renew memories of their happy past. Mimi, rejoiced to see her hood, makes Rudolphe put it on her. The others return and Mimi delights in the muff. Soon she falls asleep and dies. Rudolphe in despair throws himself on her corpse.

NOTE.—This opera is taken from the same source as an opera by Paesiello, and Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro," to which it is precedaneous in action. It was originally called "Almaviva, ossio l'inutile precauzione," "The Useless Precaution."

Act I. — Scene 1. Dawn in a Seville street. Fiorello leads along several musicians for a serenade. The Count enters and sings a serenade or aubade under Rosina's window ("Ecco ridente il cielo"). He pays the musicians liberally and drives them away, vexed at their profuse thanks. Figaro bustles gaily by to his work (singing "Largo al factotum"), rejoicing in his importance as the general factotum and go-between of the town. The Count stops him, tells him he has fallen in love with the ward of Dr. Bartolo, and is flirting with her desperately under the name of Lindoro. Rosina appears on the balcony to drop the Count a note, but, Bartolo appearing, she pretends it is a paper that has slipped out of her hand, and asks him to go down and get it. While he disappears in the house, the Count gets the note and lets Figaro read it. It reveals a Juliet-like desire to know more of the stranger. Bartolo comes out, then stops to call back instructions that none is to be admitted to the house save Basilio; he says he himself will marry Rosina that very day. The Count offers Figaro a reward if he can help him to win Rosina, and Figaro, always prolific in schemes, bids him disguise as a tipsy soldier. He tells the Count how to find his shop ("La bottega") and after a duet on love ("A che d'amore") Figaro enters Bartolo's house and the Count hurries away. Scene 2. A room in Bartolo's house. Rosina ponders how to get a letter past her lynx-eyed guardians (in the brilliant air "A voice has made my heart resound," "Una voce poco fa"). Figaro enters, but seeing Bartolo coming, postpones his message, and they leave in opposite directions. Bartolo and Basilio come in. Basilio tells the anxious Bartolo that Rosina's unknown lover is the Count Almaviva. They decide to efface him with calumny ("La calunnia"), whose growth from a whisper to a tempest Basilio pictures vividly. They depart and Figaro steals in, soon meeting Rosina, who questions him about the Count, and persuades him to bear a note to him. She has it already written; he takes it and goes, after a duet ("E il maestro io faccio"). Bartolo comes in and cross-questions her as to the note she dropped from the balcony and the one he suspects she has given Figaro. She blames the ink on her finger to a design she was drawing. They go their ways and Berta, hearing loud knocking, enters. The Count disguised as a soldier bursts in, pretending to be drunk, but anxiously looking for Rosina while he embraces and worries Bartolo. Rosina entering, the two steal a few words surreptitiously; he bids her drop her handkerchief, while Bartolo angrily hunts a paper giving him exemption from soldierly visits. The Count lets fall a note, Rosina drops her handkerchief on it, but Bartolo observes the ruse and snatches the note, only to find it a mere list of names. He apologises, but the Count jostles him about and also Basilio and Berta, who enter. Figaro appears with a basin and is amazed at the noise, which finally brings the police. The Count shows his order of nobility and avoids arrest.

Act II.—Scene. Bartolo is alone in a room, and bitterly reflects that he is not safe in his own house. The Count enters disguised as a music-teacher. He annoys Bartolo with over-effusive greetings and says Basilio was too ill to come, and sent him. He lets slip a word about Rosina's note, and to cover the slip tells Bartolo that he has happened on a note written to the Count by Rosina, and he suggests that if he can talk with Rosina he might convince her that the Count is only a faithless rake. Bartolo gladly brings in Rosina, who recognises the alleged teacher and sings for him. (The music written for this place by Rossini was lost, and the prima donna is at liberty to introduce any song she prefers.) Figaro arrives to shave Bartolo, who resists, but finally sends Figaro to his room to get the cloth, giving him the keys, one of which Rosina whispers him is the key to the balcony. Now Basilio enters, to the exquisite confusion of the Count, who tries to make Basilio think he is ill and to send him home. A purse opens Basilio's eyes to the plot and he goes. As the Count and Rosina pretend to study music and really plot an elopement, Bartolo overhears in spite of Figaro's efforts to keep him engaged. He disperses the group. Berta enters alone complaining of the noisy house always in uproar, and the old dotard's love ("Il vechietto cerca moglie"—based on a Russian air, and called the "Aria di Sorbetto," because the audiences chose it as a good time to eat sherbets). She leaves, and Bartolo brings on Basilio, who tells him that the music-teacher was the Count and there is to be a marriage that night at Figaro's house. When he has gone, Bartolo plans a bold coup, and calls Rosina, whom he tells that the Count is unfaithful to her; showing her the note she had written him as proof. Rosina, infuriated, consents to marry Bartolo at once, confessing to him her plan to elope. Bartolo hurries away to find the police to arrest the Count when he comes. The Count and Figaro steal in from the balcony as soon as he has gone, and Rosina is soon convinced of his love. He reveals himself as the Count Almaviva. They decide to elope, and tip-toe stealthily with a "Hush, hush" ("Zitti, zitti"). They find the ladder gone and see persons coming with a lantern. They conceal themselves and Basilio enters with a notary. The Count, by softly threatening Basilio with death, gets himself married to Rosina. Bartolo enters with soldiers, but too late. He gives the two their blessing and all ends happily.

AR′NOLD,
His son.....Nourrit, bar.

LEUTHOLD (loit′-hôlt),
A peasant.....Prévôt, bar.

A FISHER.....tenor.

Act I.—Scene. Switzerland, thirteenth century. Shore of a mountain-lake. Peasants enjoying a wedding festival are joined by Tell, who bemoans the tyranny oppressing his country. Arnold, who has loved Gessler's daughter since he saved her life, promises nevertheless to aid Tell in freeing Switzerland. The peasant Leuthold appears. He has killed an Austrian soldier who tried to abduct his daughter, and is now pursued by the soldiers. He begs to be rowed across the lake, but the rising storm dismays the fishermen. Tell takes the oars and puts out into the storm just before the soldiers enter, led by Rudolf, who, finding no one who will reveal the identity of Leuthold's rescuer, seizes old Melchthal as an inciter of rebellion.

Act II.—Scene. A forest. Huntsmen and shepherds meet and disperse. Princess Mathilde passes, returning from a hunt. She meets Arnold and reciprocates his love. She leaves him when Tell comes up with Walther Fürst, who tells Arnold that his father has been killed by the Austrian. Arnold, putting aside his thoughts of love, joins the other two men in an oath of dire revenge. The deputies of three cantons appear successively and Tell persuades them to join the oath and free Switzerland.

Act III.—Scene 1. A love-duet between Mathilde and Arnold. Scene 2. The market-place of Altdorp. Gessler has set his hat up on a pole and the indignant citizens are compelled to salute it. Tell and his son enter and scorn such humility. They are seized and the father ordered to prove his vaunted archery by shooting an apple from his son's head. After an anxious prayer, he accomplishes this. Gessler seeing that he has another arrow, asks what it is for. Tell declares that if he had missed the apple and hurt his son, his second arrow would have been shot at Gessler. For this defiance he is fettered, despite Mathilde's plea. Scene 3. The Swiss revolutionists meet in a storm, Mathilde asks to be admitted to the band, and gives her hand to Arnold. Success follows the battles of the Swiss, and Tell enters; he has escaped from prison and slain Gessler; the country has now won liberty, which is celebrated in a hymn of freedom.

Cicillo (chē-chĭl'-lō),
A government spy.....bar.
Pasquale (päs-kwä'-lĕ),
An innkeeper.....bass.
Picillo (pē-chĭl'-lō).....tenor.

Act I. — Scene. An open market-place near the lower harbor of Naples; time 1860. Maria and Sesella are wearily at work on one side, on the other in front of a tavern Luigino is gambling away their hard earnings. Maria pleads with him but ends by paying his gambling debts. Cicillo appears. He is posing as the leader of the Cammoristi, an anarchistic society, but is really spying on them and trying to foist on another member the treachery that has been betraying them. Luigino hates Cicillo but Sesella loves him; and he is plotting to seduce her; he takes an opportunity to ask her to elope with him since the Cammoristi hate him. Luigino sees her kiss him and tries to stab him, but Maria intervenes and sends her children away. She and Cicillo have a bitter interview, in which it transpires that, years before, Cicillo had betrayed Maria and deserted her for another woman, against whom Maria had conspired, securing the arrest of both. The girl had been put to death, though Cicillo had escaped to vow vengeance against Maria, who meantime had married. Though she is now a widow, he still plots to bring her son to the gutter and her daughter Sesella to the streets. Maria pleads and threatens for an end to the feud, but Cicillo mocks her. The Cammoristi rush in in excitement; another member has been arrested and they swear to hunt out and kill the traitor. Cicillo's momentary uneasiness is seen by Maria.

Act II.—Scene. A low tavern filled with hilarious smugglers, girls, etc. Luigino sings a gay song. Cicillo enters and strikes him across the face. He explains that he believes Luigino to be the traitor. He is to meet Sesella and will try to wring the truth from her. They leave him alone and his remorseful soliloquy is interrupted by Sesella's entrance. He poisons her mind against her mother, and she consents to elope with him at midnight. When he has gone, Maria enters, and pleads with her daughter, finally confessing her own past and proclaiming Cicillo a spy. Sesella is won back and determines to betray Cicillo. She calls in the landlord and the others and accuses the absent Cicillo. Luigino, however, is brought to trial by the Cammoristi, but Maria saves him by swearing that she has seen Cicillo take government pay. Cicillo is condemned to die, and Luigino chosen to assassinate him, in spite of Maria's frantic appeals.

Act III.—Same scene as Act I. Night. Maria, alone, prays heaven to save her children. Cicillo enters and she warns him that she alone can save him from the Cammoristi and begs him to give up his plot to ruin her children. He laughs at her and says that in a moment he will have the soldiers all about the place. Singing and mandolin-playing in the distance indicate the signal to kill him, but he will not accept her offer, and brushes past her to call the soldiers, whereupon she stabs him, to save her son from the blood-guilt. The Cammoristi rush in as he dies.

Mignon (mēn-yôṅ).

Three-act opera. Book by Barbier & Carré (based on Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister").

Produced, Opéra Comique, Paris, November 17, 1866.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

GUGLIELMO (gool-yĕl'-mō), in German, WILHELM MEISTER, Achard, tenor.
LOTARIO (lō-tä'-rĭ-ō).....Bataille, bar.
FEDERICO (fā-dĕ-rē'-kō).....tenor.
LAERTE (lä-ĕr'tĕ).....Conders, bar.
GIARNO (jär'-nō).....bass.
ANTO'NIO,
MIGNON....Mme. Galli-Marié, m. sopr.
FILINA (fē-lē'-nä)....Mme. Cabel, sopr.

Act I.—Scene. Courtyard of a German inn. Townsfolk seated drinking. The old minstrel Lotario enters almost distracted with grief at the loss of his child, who has disappeared, and whom seeking he wanders disconsolately. A band of gipsies appear, and dance for pennies, watched from a balcony by two actors, Filina and Laerte. The savage chief Giarno orders the child Mignon to dance. When she proudly rebels, he threatens her with a cudgel, and the old minstrel tries to protect her. He is pushed aside, but Guglielmo entering cows the gipsy. Mignon gives flowers to both of her rescuers. When the others withdraw, Filina admiringly sends Laerte to scrape acquaintance with Guglielmo. She follows soon, and begins to flirt with great sophistication. Guglielmo gives her the flowers Mignon gave him. Filina and Laerte leave, and Mignon, seeing that Giarno is asleep, steals forward to pour out her gratitude. She tells Guglielmo that her childhood is a mystery. She remembers being stolen. When he asks her the name of her country she can only ask, "Knowest thou the land where the citrons bloom" (in Goethe's words, "Kennst du das Land wo die Citronen blüh'n"). He judges from her other phrases that her land must be Italy. Giarno reappearing, offers to sell Mignon for what he paid for her. Guglielmo enters the inn to close the bargain. Mignon tells the old minstrel of her new freedom, and when he says he must follow the swallows northward, she sings a swallow-song ("Leggiadre rondinelle"). They withdraw and Filina appears, teasing Federico, her lover. Guglielmo returns, having bought Mignon. Filina introduces him to Federico. A letter comes ordering the troupe of players to appear at the castle of Federico's uncle; and Guglielmo is invited to go as poet. Mignon seizes an opportunity to ask what is to become of her, and begs to follow Guglielmo in disguise as a page; though the old minstrel pleads for her, Guglielmo consents to take her. She notes with a pang that he has given her flowers to Filina. The troupe set out for the castle.

Act II.—Scene 1. The boudoir of Filina, who is gaily preparing her charms for further conquest ("A maraviglia!"). Laerte, and later Guglielmo, enter. Laerte, about to leave, finds Mignon jealously waiting; Guglielmo treats her with kindly impatience, and she seems to fall asleep before the fire. Guglielmo makes love to Filina. They leave; and Mignon, after brooding morosely, looks about with interest and falls to powdering and rougeing her face, hoping to captivate Guglielmo by her beauty ("Son io che mi specchio?" or "Ist das Mignon wohl?"). She disappears just as Federico enters at the window singing a Rondo-Gavotte. Guglielmo, coming back to seek Mignon, falls to altercation with Federico. They draw swords, but Mignon rushes between. She is garbed in one of Filina's gowns, and Federico retires laughing. Guglielmo sadly tells Mignon she must leave him ("Addio, Mignon"). Filina entering, Mignon fiercely tears off the gown and rushes away. Laerte announces that the play is about to begin and they leave, Mignon and Federico jealously watching Guglielmo's devotion to Filina. Scene 2. The park of the castle. Mignon alone in her grief is about to throw herself into the lake, when she hears the harp of the minstrel. He appears and tries to console her. She frantically wishes that the fires of heaven would consume the hated castle, and hurries away. The half-insane minstrel ponders her wish and disappears. The guests flock out from the play, "The Midsummer Night's Dream," and Filina rejoices in her success as Titania ("Io son Titania bionda"). Guglielmo searches for Mignon. She appears, and the minstrel tells her that he has set fire to the castle. She represses her horror, and when Filina asks her to get a bouquet which Guglielmo had given her, and which she had left in the castle, Mignon goes. The flames break forth, while the old minstrel chants to his harp. Guglielmo rushes into the castle and rescues Mignon against her will.

Act III.—Scene. Gallery of a manor-house. A chorus of sailors is heard in the distance. The minstrel appears; later Guglielmo, and Antonio who explains that all the other houses of the region are illuminated in honour of the festival, but this house alone remains dark since, ten years ago, the daughter of the count who owned it was drowned. The count has since been a wanderer, and Antonio offers to sell the house to Guglielmo, who plans to buy it. He tells the minstrel, who, hearing the name, seems to recall a forgotten past, and enters a long-sealed door. Guglielmo, alone, muses on the discovery he has made that Mignon secretly loves him ("Ah, non credea l'afflito"). A note comes telling that Filina is following him. He is not interested. Mignon appears, very pale and feeble; she seems to remember her surroundings vaguely. Guglielmo tells her he has learned to love her. Filina's voice is heard, and she is terrified again. Now the minstrel enters richly garbed. He has returned to his right mind. He welcomes them to the house as his own. He brings out a casket of jewels belonging to his lost child. In it is a Prayer Book. Mignon reads a few lines and, letting the book fall, recites the rest of the child's prayer by heart. The Count recognises her as his child. She faints with delight, but recovers and sings with joy the last of the "Mignon's Song" of Goethe, "Kennst du das Land."

VERDI, GIUSEPPI.

Aïda (ä-ē′-dä).

Four-act opera. Book by A. Ghizlandoni, from de Locle's version of an old Egyptian tradition. The opera was composed on a commission from the Khedive and first produced at Cairo, December 27, 1871.

CHARACTERS.

AÏDA,
An Ethiopian princess in slavery, sopr.

AMNERIS (äm-nā′-rēs),
Princess of Egypt, in love with RADAMES.....contr.

RADAMES (rä′-dä-mās),
Egyptian Captain in love with AÏDA.....tenor.

AMONAS′RO,
Ethiopian King, father of AÏDA, bar.

RAMFIS (räm′-fēs),
High Priest of Isis.....bass.

KING OF EGYPT.

MESSENGER.

Act I.—Scene 1. Hall in the Palace. Ramfis speaks to Radames of the hostile movements of the Ethiopian king; he hints that Radames will lead the Egyptian force. When he has gone, Radames rejoices in the hope of winning glory, all for the sake of Aïda ("Céleste Aïda"). Princess Amneris, entering, notes his joy and hopes it is for her. Aïda enters and the Princess greets her kindly but suspects her of being Radames' sweetheart. Aïda weeps for the woes of her country. The King and retinue appear and Ramfis and other Priests; a messenger follows to speak of the Ethiopian incursion led by Amonasro. The Priest declares Radames the leader chosen of Isis, and after a chorus all leave except Aïda, who is torn between love for her father and for Radames ("Retorna vincitor"), ending in a prayer ("Numi, pieta"). Scene 2. The Temple of Phthah at Memphis. Priests and Priestesses chant and dance before the altar. Radames enters and is veiled and armed by Ramfis (two actual Egyptian themes are employed in the harp music and the dance).

Act II.—Scene 1. Amneris' apartments. Her slaves sing while she broods on love. Aïda enters and the slaves retire. Amneris wrings from Aïda the secret of her love by saying that Radames is dead. She upbraids the girl with high fury. The army is heard returning in pomp (duet "Alla pompa"). Scene 2. An open place. The victorious army returns loaded with trophies and is welcomed with all ceremony. Aïda, cowering at Amneris' feet, sees Radames triumphant; among his captives she sees her father, who whispers her not to tell his rank; but he decides to announce it himself, appealing for mercy ("Questa assisa"). The Priests and people demand his death but Radames wins clemency from the King, who releases the other prisoners but retains Amonasro. The act ends with a paean ("Gloria all' Egitto").

Act III.—Scene. Shore of the Nile, before a Temple of Isis, wherein the worshippers are heard singing. Ramfis enters the Temple; Amneris follows to pray Isis for Radames' love. Aïda steals in, veiled, to meet Radames; she muses on the beauty of the sky and on her far-off home ("O cieli azzurri"). Amonasro appears; he tells Aïda he has discovered her passion for Radames; he tells her she can see her home again and have her lover too ("Rivedro le foreste"). She must win Radames to treachery, or at least learn from him the name of the pass by which his troops will march. When she protests, he paints a wild picture of the havoc the Egyptians have wrought in Ethiopia and threatens her with his curse. At the height of her terror, Radames appears, Amonasro hiding near by. Radames tells Aïda that the Ethiopians have risen again, he intends to defeat them again and then claim Aïda's hand from the King. Aïda says Amneris would seek vengeance, that only one course is open to their love, and that is, flight ("Fuggiam gli ardori"). He is horrified, but she mentions Amneris and says that she and her father will be put to death. In an access of love he consents to fly. She asks him the name of the pass; he tells her, and is overheard by Amonasro, who is discovered by Radames. Amneris, who has overheard, charges Radames with being a traitor. Amonasro is about to stab her, but is prevented by Radames, who surrenders to Ramfis, while Aïda and Amonasro escape.

Act IV.—Scene 1. A hall in the palace. Amneris alone broods over Aïda's escape and Radames' trial for treachery; she wishes to save him. Radames is led in; she pleads with him to love her and be saved, but he is faithful to Aïda, though he learns that her father has been killed. He will not renounce her though Amneris demands it ("Chi ti salva"). He is led away and Amneris gives way to despair ("Ohimè, morir mi sento"). She sees the Priests descending into the subterranean hall, then hears their voices as they pray for divine guidance; she hears Ramfis calling on Radames to speak, but he will make no defence, and they condemn him to be buried alive under the altar. As the priests return, Amneris assails them insanely. Scene 2. Same as Act 1, Scene 2, save that the vault below the altar is also shown. Radames is in the crypt, dreaming of Aïda. Suddenly she appears, saying that she foresaw his doom and stole into the crypt unobserved to die with him. They bid farewell to life ("O terra addio"), while the chant of the Priests and the dance of the Priestesses goes on over them. Amneris, in black, enters the Temple to pray Heaven to accept Radames into bliss.

Otel'lo. Othello.

Four-act lyric drama. Book from Shakspère's play by Arrigo Boïto.

Produced at Milan, La Scala, February 5, 1887.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

OTELLO,
A Moorish general in the Venetian army.....Tamagno, tenor.
IAGO,
His ensign.....Maurel, bar.
CASSIO, Otello's lieutenant.
RODERIGO (rō-dĕ-rē'-gō),
A Venetian gentleman in love with Desdemona.
LODOVICO (lō-dō-vē'-kō), Venetian ambassador.
MONTA'NA,
Otello's predecessor as Governor of Cyprus.
A HERALD.
DESDEMO'NA, Otello's wife,
Signorina Pantaleoni, sopr.
EMIL'IA, Iago's wife.

Act 1.—Scene. A stormy quay. All the men except Otello are present and watching a storm-tossed ship. It is Otello's. Women enter, and pray for the ship's safety. The ship reaches the harbour at length; Otello lands with news of a great victory, and passes into the Castle. A bonfire is built, and Iago talks to Roderigo of Desdemona, saying she will soon weary of the Moor; he says he hates him for promoting Cassio over him. The soldiers rejoice in the fire ("Fuoco di gioia") and in wine. Iago plies Cassio with wine and talks of Desdemona, bidding Roderigo beware of Cassio as a rival. Iago sings a wine-song, and Cassio grows drunk.

He is easily provoked to a fight by Roderigo, and sets on Montana who tries to be a peacemaker. At Iago's advice Roderigo steals away and rings the alarm, bringing the people and Otello, later Desdemona. Otello reduces Cassio to the ranks, and all disperse save Otello and Desdemona; they have a love-scene and she praises him as a great warrior ("Mio superbo guerrier"). He exclaims that death were welcome in such bliss ("Venga la morte").

Act II.—Scene. Hall in the Castle; garden at the back. Iago is promising the despondent Cassio restoration, advising him to appeal to Desdemona; left alone, Iago soliloquises over his cynical creed of cruelty and deceit ("Credo in un Dio crudel"). Later Cassio finds Desdemona in the garden and they talk together. Otello enters and Iago slyly provokes his jealousy. Sailors, children, and others appear to load Desdemona with flowers and gifts; she dismisses them graciously, and comes forward to plead for Cassio. Otello blames his uneasiness to headache; Desdemona is about to bind his head with her handkerchief; he throws it away; Emilia unobserved picks it up, and Iago snatches it from her, while Otello broods. When the women have gone, Otello upbraids Iago for instilling suspicion in him, and finally throttles him, then demands proof. Iago whispers that he heard Cassio talking in his sleep of trysts with Desdemona; he mentions the handkerchief, and says he saw it in Cassio's possession. Otello vows a terrible revenge.

Act III.—Scene. A large hall with portico. The Herald announces the arrival of ambassadors from Cyprus, and goes. Iago advises Otello to watch Cassio's gestures when later Iago talks to him. He goes, and Desdemona enters; Otello asks for her handkerchief; she says it is mislaid; he warns her that it has a strange significance, but she impatiently persists in pleading for Cassio. He makes her swear she is faithful, then drives her from him. Left alone he muses on his grief ("Dio, mi potevi scagliar"). Iago enters to say Cassio has come, and Otello hides. Iago then talks softly to Cassio of Bianca, and he is moved to laughter; he speaks of finding a strangely broidered handkerchief mysteriously left at his lodgings and produces that of Desdemona. Trumpets and a gun announce the arrival of the ambassadors and Cassio hastens away. The ambassadors enter to deliver official praises to Otello. Desdemona appears and Otello sends for Cassio, bidding Iago watch how Desdemona looks when he comes. He announces that Cassio is to stay in Cyprus as its Governor, while Otello is recalled to Venice. He mistakes Desdemona's distress at her husband's manner, for grief at the loss of Cassio, and hurls her to the ground, where she cowers. Iago tells Otello that he will kill Cassio; he then whispers Roderigo to kill Cassio so as to keep Otello at Cyprus longer, when Roderigo may still hope for Desdemona's favour. Otello rising in supreme wrath orders everyone away, curses his wife, and swoons with rage. As the cries of "Long live Otello" resound outside, Iago gloats over the prostrate "lion."

Act IV.—Scene. A bedroom. Desdemona and Emilia. Desdemona in deep sorrow as she undresses sings a sad ballad ("Willow"), of a girl, Barbara, whose lover had gone mad. When Emilia is gone, she kneels and prays to the Virgin, then lies down on the bed and sleeps. Otello enters with a scimitar. He puts out the candle, and gazing at Desdemona kisses her; she wakes and he orders her to pray. He accuses her of unfaith with Cassio, saying that he has been killed; when she weeps, he thinks his suspicions verified and smothers her. Knocking is heard. Emilia enters to say Cassio has killed Roderigo, and lives. Desdemona with her dying breath says she has killed herself. Emilia calls for help, and the others enter. The truth of the handkerchief is explained. Iago escapes. Otello tries to kill himself with his scimitar, but Lodovico prevents him. Gazing on Desdemona he draws a dagger and kills himself.

Rigoletto (rē-gō-lĕt'-tō).

Three-act opera. Book by F. M. Piave. (Based on Victor Hugo's "Le roi s'amuse.") Produced, Venice, March 11, 1851.

Act I.—Scene 1. A fête in the Duke's palace. The Duke tells Borsa of his infatuation for an unknown maiden whom he has seen at church, and traced to her home where an unknown man visits her nightly. He sings of the fickleness of his heart for this or that woman ("Questa o quella"). The Countess Ceprano appears and though watched by her jealous husband permits the Duke to lead her away. Rigoletto, the Duke's favourite and the go-between of his intrigues, laughs at the Duke's flirtations, and Marullo says he learns that even the hunchbacked Rigoletto has a sweetheart. The Duke reappears and Rigoletto advises him to elope with Ceprano's wife. He taunts Ceprano, who plots with other courtiers to put the hunchback out of the way. The Count Monterone forces his way in and denounces the Duke's crimes. Rigoletto mocks him because he makes such ado over the loss of his daughter's honour; but Monterone frightens the hunchback by a father's curse before he is led away. Scene 2. A dark, secluded street at night. Rigoletto, stealing in, is accosted by Sparafucile, who offers to put any rival out of the way, either by a single thrust in the street, or by decoying the victim into his house with the aid of his sister. Rigoletto declines the man's service with thanks, and in a soliloquy compares the bravo's sword to his own wit as a weapon. He enters the walled yard of his house, out of which Gilda comes and embraces her father. He keeps her in this seclusion from the corruptions of court life, and she does not even know his name. She asks to know who her mother was. He begs her not to ask ("Deh non parlare"). Gilda assures him she has never left the house except for church, and her nurse Giovanna corroborates her. Father and daughter sing a loving duet ("Veglia o donna"). The Duke in disguise appears outside. Rigoletto goes out to see who is there, and the Duke manages to steal inside unobserved and throw a purse to the nurse. Rigoletto returning warns Gilda to let no one in on any account, and, not seeing the Duke, locks the gate from the outside and goes away. The Duke appears, motions the nurse to retire, and kneeling before Gilda, declares his love for her ("E il sol dell' anima"), pretending he is a poor student named Gualtier Maldé. She promises him her love and he goes away.

Left alone Gilda muses on his dear name ("Caro nome") and enters the house. Outside appear three courtiers to steal Rigoletto's supposed mistress. Rigoletto appears and is told they are going to steal Ceprano's wife. His fears for his own daughter thus set at rest, he enters the plot with zest, and is given a mask, which blindfolds him, and is set to hold a ladder by which the courtiers ascend his own wall to steal Gilda. Though she manages to scream, he does not recognise her voice. Tearing off the bandaging mask, he discovers too late that he has aided in the violation of his own home, and remembering Count Monterone's malediction, he swoons.

Act II. — Scene. The Duke's palace. He is brooding over the abduction of Gilda whom he truly loves ("Parmi veder"). The courtiers enter to tell him of stealing Rigoletto's mistress ("Scorrendo uniti remota"). The Duke recognises from their story that it is Gilda whom they have stolen, and exclaiming that the voice of love calls him ("Possente amor"), hurries away. Rigoletto enters, trying to conceal his anxiety from the taunting courtiers. The Duchess's page enters, asking for the Duke. They try uneasily to explain his absence. Rigoletto suspects that Gilda is with the Duke and confessing that she is his daughter tries vainly to force his way through the courtiers. He curses them bitterly ("Cortigiani, vil razza dannata"), and breaks down weeping. Gilda appears and rushes to her father. The courtiers withdraw, and Gilda tells of her humble lover and her abduction. Rigoletto weeps with her ("Piange, fanciulla"). The Count Monterone passes in chains, confessing that his cursing of the Duke has been vain, but Rigoletto fiercely vows to administer the curse, though Gilda pleads against his frenzy ("No, vecchio, t'inganni").

Act III.—Scene. An old weather-worn house on the bank of the Mincio. Inside, Sparafucile cleaning his belt. Outside Gilda pleads with her father who has plotted the death of the Duke. She persists that the Duke is faithful to her. The Duke, dressed as a soldier, now appears inside the house, and calls for wine. He sings recklessly of "fickle woman" ("La donna è mobile"), and when Maddalena, Sparafucile's sister, appears, makes violent love to her, not knowing that Gilda and her father are watching through crevices in the walls. The varying emotions are combined in the famous quartet ("Bella figlia dell' amore"). Sparafucile steps out and bargains with Rigoletto, who wants him to kill the Duke and put the body in a sack which Rigoletto will throw into the river at midnight. He pays half the sum agreed and promises more. He has sent Gilda on ahead to don boy's clothes to aid their flight, and now follows her out. A storm rises, and the Duke decides to spend the night where he is. He goes up to a room, and Maddalena pleads with Sparafucile not to kill him. Gilda, who has stolen back in boy's clothes, overhears the plea. The assassin says he will spare the Duke if he can get someone else to put in the sack. Gilda, to save her faithless lover, knocks at the door and asks lodging. As she is admitted, the lights are put out. Rigoletto appears; the clock strikes twelve. Sparafucile comes out with a heavy sack, receives the money, and goes. As Rigoletto is dragging the sack toward the river, he hears the Duke pass in the distance singing "La donna è mobile." In amazement he tears open the sack and finds his daughter. She asserts with dying breath her devotion to the Duke, and promises to pray for her father in heaven ("Lassu in cielo"). She dies, leaving him in frantic grief and loneliness, confessing the fulfilment of Monterone's malediction.

La Traviata (lä trä-vĭ-ä'-tä). The Erring One.

Three-act opera. Book by Piave, after Dumas fils' "La Dame aux Camélias" or "Camille" (with names of characters changed, and time placed back in 1700).

First produced disastrously, Venice, March 6, 1853, the failure being largely due to the embonpoint of the soprano, whose wasting away was not convincing.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

VIOLETTA VALERE (vä-lā′-rĕ), Mme. Donatelli, sopr.
FLORA BERVOIX (bĕr-vwä),
Her friend.....sopr.
GEORGIO GERMONT (jĕr′-mônt),

MARQUIS D'OBIGNY (dō-bēn′-yē) ...bass.

Act I.—Scene. The rich apartments of Violetta, a demi-mondaine doomed to die of consumption. She is giving a dinner-party. Gastone introduces Alfredo, who has conceived a deep passion for her. He is prevailed on to sing a wine-song, but shows deep sympathy when, the dinner finished, she faints on the way to the ball-room. She gives him a flower and he departs, followed soon after by the other guests. Left alone she thinks that she has at last found a sincere lover, and falls into ecstatic revery ("Ah, fors è lui"), "Perchance 'tis he that my fancy has been painting in its loneliness."

Act II.—Scene I. A country house near Paris. Alfredo enters, rejoicing in the blissful seclusion in which he is living with Violetta. Her maid returns from Paris, and betrays the fact that Violetta has been pawning her resources to keep up the country place. He is overcome with the humiliation of his position, and leaves for Paris to secure funds. Violetta enters, and receiving a letter from Flora inviting her back to the old gaiety, laughs at the thought. An elderly man is shown in. He announces himself to be Alfredo's father. He has come to plead with her to give up Alfredo as otherwise the lover of Alfredo's sister will break off the match because of the scandal. After a bitter struggle, she consents, and he embraces her and goes into the garden. She writes a letter and Alfredo surprises her. She leaves him, in great agitation. Soon a messenger appears with a letter, and he learns that Violetta has fled. In his grief, his father appears and endeavours to console him, reminding him of his home in sunny Provence; but Alfredo reading Flora's letter determines to follow Violetta and revenge himself. Scene 2. Flora's mansion. Some of her guests are gambling, others pass in masquerade as gipsies. Gastone leads a group of bull-fighters, and recites the romance of the Matador Piguillo. Flora and her devoted but quarrelsome Marquis have various disagreements. Alfredo appears, and dejectedly joins the card-players. Violetta enters upon the arm of the Baron. Alfredo as he plays makes slighting references to the fickleness of the broken-hearted Violetta. Dinner is announced, and all leave the room save Violetta, who calls Alfredo. She warns him of the Baron's fury. He says he will go if she will go with him, but she refuses, and he summons all the guests and furiously denounces Violetta as a mercenary wretch; to pay his debt to her he flings a purse at her. She faints in the arms of her Doctor. Alfredo's father enters and leads him away.

Act III.—Scene. Violetta's bedroom. She is asleep and her maid Annina sleeps near the fireplace. The Doctor arrives and tells Annina that Violetta has only a few hours to live. When he has gone, Violetta sends Annina to give ten of her remaining twenty louis to the poor, who are making holiday outside. Left alone she reads an old letter from Alfredo's father, who has been moved by her suffering to send for his son to return from the foreign country. She fears that he will be too late. Annina enters hastily, trying to prepare her for the coming of Alfredo. They have a rapturous reunion and decide to flee from "dear Paris" ("Parigi caro"). But weakness overcomes her, and she accepts her fate. The Doctor and Alfredo's father enter, but can be of no help. She gives a medallion of herself to Alfredo as a memorial, and dies.

Il Trovatore (ēl trō-vä-tō′-rĕ). The Troubadour.

Four-act opera. Book by S. Commarano, from a drama by Garcia de la Vega. Produced, Rome, January 19, 1853.

CHARACTERS.

Il Conte di Luna.....bar.
Manrico (män-rē′-kō).....tenor.
Ferran′do.....bass.
Ruiz (roo′-ēts).....tenor.
An Old Zingaro (Gipsy).....bass.
Un Messo.....tenor.
Leono′ra.....sopr.
Azucena (ä-tsoo-chā′-nä).....m.-sopr.
Ines (ē′-nĕs).....sopr.

Act I.—Scene 1. Vestibule to the apartments of the Count. Ferrando tries to keep awake the other servants by telling them the story of the Count's younger brother, who had been bewitched in his cradle by a gipsy. For this the gipsy had been burned. Her daughter, and the Count's baby brother then simultaneously disappeared. It was believed that he had been burned. Ferrando hopes some day to meet this younger gipsy. Scene 2. The gardens of the Queen's palace. Leonora, her maid of honour, tells her friend Ines how she fell in love with a cavalier at a tournament. He appeared again one placid night ("Tacea la notte placida"), and sang to her as a Troubadour. She confesses her love for him ("Di tale amor che dirsi"). The two women withdraw, and the Count di Luna appears, breathing love for Leonora. Outside he hears the voice of a Troubadour singing. Leonora rushes out and mistaking the Count for the singer, embraces him. The Troubadour appearing upbraids Leonora's faithlessness, but she explains her mistake. The Count challenges Manrico to combat, and the men withdraw, Leonora fainting with terror.

Act II.—Scene 1. A ruined house at dawn. Azucena, a gipsy, near a large fire; near her Manrico. Gipsies gathered about. The men working with their hammers sing the famous "Anvil chorus" ("Vedi le fosche"). Azucena sings a fierce song of burning a woman at the stake ("Stride la vampa!"). The others disperse to their tasks, leaving Azucena and Manrico together. She tells him the dismal story of her mother's death for sorcery, and how she, mad for revenge, had seized the Count's younger brother, as she thought, and burned him to death, only to find that she had burned her own child. Manrico exclaims, "Then I am not your son." But Azucena denies her own words and says she was raving. Manrico tells her that he has once more met his old enemy the Count, this time not in battle but in duel; he had defeated him, but had spared his life. Azucena commands him never again to spare the Count. A messenger appears and summons Manrico to the command of the troops. He bids Azucena farewell and goes. Scene 2. Convent cloisters at night. The Count with his followers has come to kidnap Leonora, whose beauty he cannot resist ("Il balen del suo sorriso"). A chorus of nuns is heard. Leonora and Ines appear, and Leonora declares her intention to take the veil. The Count seizes her, but Manrico appears and later some of his followers. Leonora consents to go with Manrico.

Act III.—Scene 1. Camp of Count di Luna, outside a besieged castle.

Ferrando and chorus sing a martial song ("Squilli, eccheggi la tromba guerriera"). The Count appears and is told that a spying gipsy has been captured. Azucena is brought in. She says her home is Biscay and the Count says his younger brother was stolen there. Ferrando recognises her, she is seized, and calls on Manrico her son to save her. The Count rejoices at this double revenge. Scene 2. A room near a chapel in the castle. Leonora and Manrico together. He rejoices in her love as an aid in battle ("Ah, se ben mio"). They are about to be married in the chapel when Manrico's friend Ruiz brings news that Azucena is taken, and is to be burned. Manrico in horror ("Di quella pirra") rushes to rescue her.

Act IV.—Scene 1. Outside a palace tower at night. Leonora and Ruiz enter. Manrico has been captured; she sends him hope and comfort "on love's rosy wings" ("D'amor sull' ali rose"). A death-knell is tolled and voices are heard chanting a "Miserere." She hears Manrico bewailing his fate ("Ah, che la morte ognora"), and she vows to save him at all costs ("Tu vedrai che amore in terra"). She withdraws as the Count enters, then accosts him and begs for Manrico's life with bitter tears ("Mira, di acerbe lagrime"). She finally offers herself as payment for Manrico's life. The Count gives the order to release Manrico, and Leonora takes poison from a ring, then follows the Count. Scene 2. A prison; Azucena and Manrico. Azucena sees in terrible vision her own mother's death at the stake. She falls asleep watched by Manrico. The Count and Leonora enter. She offers him freedom and begs him to fly. He curses her; but she dies before him and he understands her fidelity. The Count, thus foiled, orders Manrico out to death. He awakes Azucena and drags her to the window, and shows her Manrico's dead body. She exclaims, "He was your brother! Thus thou art avenged, O mother mine!"

WAGNER, WILHELM RICHARD.

[Who wrote all of his own librettos.]

Der Fliegende Holländer (dĕr flē′-gĕn-dĕ hôl′-lĕnt-ĕr). The Flying Dutchman. In French as "Le Vaisseau Fantôme" (le vĕs-sō fän-tōm). In Italian, first as "L'Ollando'se danna'to" then as "Il Vascello Fantas'ma" (ēl vä-shĕl′-lō) or "The Phantom Ship."

Three-act opera, book and music by Wagner. Conceived during a very stormy three-weeks sea-voyage in 1839. Begun, 1841. Produced, Dresden, January 2, 1843.

MARY (mä′-rē).....m.-sopr.

Act I.—A rocky shore. Under a heavy storm a Norwegian ship has cast anchor close to shore. The sailors are heard singing as they furl the sails. Daland on the rocks grumbles at being driven inshore so near his port, so near home and his dear old child Senta. The storm subsides and Daland (with grand opera license) is able to step aboard as easily as he stepped ashore. He orders the sailors below to rest and leaves the pilot to take the watch. Left alone, the pilot sings a love-song of his sweetheart ("Mein Mädel") and the southwind that brings him home. He gradually falls asleep. The storm wakens and a ship with blood-red sails and black masts appears and drops anchor with a crash; then the uncanny crew furl the sails without noise, and go below. The captain landing, exclaims that the seven-year terror is past and he may come ashore a little while. He bewails his lot, cursed to sail on forever till the Day of Judgment unless some woman perchance may love him unchangingly. He feels the futility of such hope and cries to heaven to destroy him. On Daland's ship there is a scene of excitement. Daland, coming on deck, finds his pilot asleep and a strange ship near; he goes ashore and meets the newcomer, who tells him of his sad lot and begs a home for a time; he has a chest brought from his ship and offers the pearls it contains for a night's hospitality, and still greater wealth for the hand of the daughter Daland mentions. The canny Daland accepts, and the two captains going aboard cheerfully make sail for Daland's port.

Act II.—Scene. Interior of Daland's home. Among charts, pictures, etc., on the wall is a portrait of a pale, black-bearded man in Spanish garb. The room is filled with girls at spinning wheels. Senta and Mary are among them. Senta alone of all is sad, and the merry spinning chorus ("Summ' und brumm'") does not enliven her. Mary rebukes Senta for gazing at the portrait. They finally persuade her to sing the ballad of the "Flying Dutchman," whose portrait it is. She sings of the ship with blood-red sails and black mast and her sleepless spectral captain, who must sail on and on forever because in trying to round a cape in the teeth of a gale he swore, "I will keep on trying to all eternity." Satan heard him and condemned him to sail eternally till some maiden should love him faithfully. He may land once in seven years to hunt for such a wife. At the end of the ballad Senta excitedly cries out that she herself would be that faithful woman. Her lover Erik enters, and, hearing the words, is deeply hurt at her resolve. When the spinners finish the task and leave, he pleads for her love; but she puts him off, eager to welcome her father, whose ship has been sighted. Erik is jealous of the picture and tells her that he has dreamed of seeing her father coming home and bringing the Flying Dutchman; in the dream Senta embraced the stranger and sailed away with him. On hearing this dream, Senta exclaims that she feels the Flying Dutchman to be her destiny. Erik rushes away in horror. Senta, remaining gazing at the picture, suddenly sees her father enter with—the Dutchman himself! Her father, amazed at her stupor, tells her that the stranger has come to find a home and a wife. Commending each to each, he goes away, leaving them together. The Dutchman muses on her beauty and she on his sorrow. He asks her to be his wife and she vows to follow him through all. Daland returning is rejoiced at the outcome.

Act III.—Scene. A bay at night; on shore, Daland's house; in the bay Daland's and the Dutchman's ships at anchor. Daland's sailors are making merry on deck singing "Pilot, leave the watch" ("Steuermann, lass die Wacht"). Girls come from the house with food and drink for the sailors. They are surprised at the unnatural gloom and silence on the Dutch ship. They can get no response to their taunts. At length a strange blue flame appears on the Dutch ship, and gradually a storm rocks the weird craft, leaving the bay and the other ship calm. The Dutch sailors now bestir themselves and chant a sardonic song of the vanity of the Dutchman's hopes. The Norwegian sailors and women are frightened and try to drown the uncanny song with their own, but vainly, and finally go below in terror, and silence takes the Dutch ship again. Erik and Senta come from the house, he pleading with her frantically and imploring her to remember the day of their young love ("Willst jenes Tag's"). The Dutchman entering hears his plea and, thinking Senta false, cries out in despair, and orders his crew to set sail, weigh anchor and away. Senta pleads with him, in spite of Erik's prayer, but the Dutchman mocks her. He proclaims his identity and, going aboard his ship, puts to sea. Senta is restrained from following him by her father and others who rush out. But she breaks away, and with a last cry, "Here am I, faithful unto death!" leaps into the sea. The Dutch ship sinks, and in the sunset glow Senta and the Hollander are seen rising, transfigured in each other's arms.

A NIGHT WATCHMAN.

NOTE.—This semi-historical opera concerning the guild of Mastersingers is a comic companion-piece to Tannhäuser (q. v., Note a), but without supernatural personages. It is also a satirical answer to Wagner's academical critics. Hans Sachs is an actual figure in early German literature.

Act I.—Scene. Interior of St. Katherine's church. A service is just closing. Walter gazes at Eva, who flirts with him, and when, as the congregation disperses, he speaks to her, she gains time by sending her nurse back for a scarf-pin, then her prayer-book. The anxious nurse tells the ardent lover that Eva must marry the victor in the next day's song-tourney. David enters and busies himself drawing curtains to shut off the nave. Eva, comparing Walter to the painter Dürer's picture of the Biblical David, is misunderstood by Magdalene to refer to the awkward apprentice. David and other apprentices are preparing the room for the Mastersingers; they are about to undergo the examination that will admit them to the guild. Walter decides to try the examination. David, with his shoemaking companions, tells him how a song must be cut, soled and heeled to fit the rigid requirements of the guild. With many interruptions from the skylarking apprentices, David tells Walter of the various steps; first the thirty-six musical tones and modes must be learned, they make a long list most arbitrarily named as "short, long, crimson, luscious, nightingale, secret, glutton, pelican, etc." Once these are known, they must be sung with proper voice production and correct embellishment. Having thus become "a scholar" and "a singer," one must pass the examination as "Poet," manipulating rimes adroitly but strictly within limits of the rules. To become a "Mastersinger" one must sing both poetry and music of his own composing, and do all three feats without breach of the thirty-three canons. A blackboard is brought in. On this one of the judges, called the "Marker," chalks down each mistake —seven are allowed; if more are made the candidate is declared "outsung and outcast." Pogner and Beckmesser enter, the latter, a grotesque old pedant, begging Pogner to plead with his daughter on his behalf, Pogner having declared that though Eva is to be the prize, she must add her consent before she will be made to marry the victor. Walter announces himself as a candidate for Mastership. Beckmesser is jealous, but the rest welcome the young nobleman. The roll is called, Pogner announces the prize he offers for the next song contest—his daughter, who must add her verdict to that of the judges. Hans Sachs suggests that the public also be given a voice in the decision. He defends their right to be considered, lest art grow too severe and hidebound. He enrages Beckmesser by hinting that only the young bachelors be allowed to vie for the girl's hand. Walter is brought forward, and asked who has been his teacher. He says the books of the old Minnesinger Walter von der Vogelweide (vide Tannhäuser) have taught him poetry; he has learned music of the birds in the woods. His tuition is received with scepticism save by Sachs, and he prepares for the trial. Beckmesser goes to the Marker's box. Kothner summarises to him the rules, and Walter begins a joyous song of spring and love. Beckmesser is heard scratching down the marks, and at the end shows the blackboard quite covered. The other masters ridicule the formless composition, and Walter is allowed to sing his second stanza only when Sachs has outwrangled Beckmesser, who insults him as a poor cobbler. The spontaneous lilt of the second attempt Beckmesser finds guilty of breaking every rule, and despite Sachs' plea for genius unfettered, a vote throws Walter out, and the meeting disperses in confusion.

Act II.—Scene. A Street, on one side Hans Sachs' Shop; on the other Pogner's residence, in front of it a lime-tree and shrubs. It is evening and the apprentices are putting up the shutters, and thinking of the next day's festival. Magdalene enters with a basket of sweets for David; on learning of Walter's rejection, she snatches it away, and hurries into the house. The apprentices mock him, and Sachs, on his way to his shop, stops an impending brawl. Pogner and Eva enter; he says she must wed none but a master, and enters the house. Eva and Magdalene, after deciding to consult Hans Sachs, follow Pogner. Sachs appears and sits down at his bench to make shoes for Beckmesser; he falls to musing on the strange, lawless charm of Walter's song. Eva steals across to him, but being timid of direct questioning, gets nothing from him but vexation and banter and reproval of the aristocrat, who would not study the rules. He withdraws to his shop, leaving his door slightly ajar. Magdalene tells Eva to prepare for a serenade from Beckmesser, who hopes so to soften her heart to him. Walter appears and tells Eva of his humiliation. The watchman passes, ordering all lights out. Eva slips into the house, and Walter hides behind the lime-tree. Hans Sachs has overheard, and, fearing an elopement, turns a bright light across the street. Eva slips out in Magdalene's cloak, but she fears to cross the light. Beckmesser is now seen approaching, and the lovers hide behind the shrubbery. Sachs, resuming his work, sings lustily a song of Eve driven barefoot out of Paradise, and needing the aid of a cobbler. The cunning allusion to Eva's own plan to become an exile is not lost on the girl hidden with her lover behind the shrubbery. Beckmesser, seeing Magdalene at an upper window, sings to her his idea of an artistic serenade, pretending to Sachs, whom he cannot get rid of, that he is singing merely to get Sachs' opinion. The cobbler now plays Marker, noting each mistake with a thwack of his hammer on the shoe. Beckmesser lays the stress on the wrong syllables, adds tawdry flourishes, etc. Sachs finds so many mistakes that the shoe is finished before the song. The neighbours now begin to complain. David appears and cudgels Beckmesser. The whole town falls into a riot, and Walter decides to clear a way through. He and Eva make a dash, but Sachs seizes Walter, and Pogner appearing drags Eva inside the house. Sachs drives David in, and forces Walter also into his house. And the watchman appearing disperses the crowd.

Act III.—Scene 1. Interior of Sachs' workshop. Sachs is reading. David enters with a basket full of ribbons and edibles, which he hides from his master. He tells Sachs that he and 'Lena have made up, but Sachs does not hear him. At length he closes his book, and has David rehearse his trial-song. David begins with Beckmesser's tune, but corrects himself. Sachs dismisses the apprentice more gently than usual, and falls into reverie on the troublesome little things of life. Walter appears, having slept ill. Sachs counsels him that his passionate spring song was all very well, but that life and wedlock demand more serious art and science. In a long scene he now writes down and corrects and guides the composition of a song as Walter improvises it. Two sections or "bars" being shaped, Sachs says Walter can fashion the third later, and goes with him to dress for the festival. Beckmesser limps in and, finding Sachs' manuscript of Walter's song, slips it in his pocket. Sachs re-enters only to be reviled as a rival and conspirator against Beckmesser. In proof he shows the song. Sachs says he may keep it, and use it. Beckmesser is overcome with delight at having a poem by the gifted Sachs, and hurries away to compose his music. Eva enters, pretending to be troubled by a tight shoe; but she cannot tell where it pinches. She is evidently scheming to see Walter, who soon appears. Sachs draws off her shoe and pretends to be busy with it, while Walter sings to Eva the third bar of his prize-song. As Sachs sighs ironically of the miseries of his trade, Eva tells him that she could have loved him had not Walter appeared. But Hans Sachs alludes to the fate of the old husband, who intervened between Tristan and Isolde (the love-motive of that opera being quoted in the music). Magdalene and David enter. Sachs says a new mode of art has been created by Walter, and with a box on the ear he raises David to a journeyman. The five unite in a song of hope for Walter's success—this glorious quintet is well known. Eva and Magdalene go home, and the scene changes to 2. The banks of the river Pegnitz; a stage has been erected for the contest, and the "Corporations" arrive in the following order: Shoemakers, Instrument makers, Tailors and Bakers. The apprentices gather. David waltzes with a girl till someone mentions Magdalene. The Masters gather, and Pogner leads in Eva. Sachs steps forward, but the affectionate people break out into one of his own songs. Sachs then tells of the unusual prize of the contest. Beckmesser is the first to sing, and is received with laughter. He sings Walter's verses to his old serenade tune. The words fit it so ill, that he becomes confused, mixes his metaphors and words and sings arrant nonsense. He at length breaks down and, accusing Sachs of the fault, rushes away. Sachs says the song is not his, and only needs good music. To prove it, he asks Walter to sing it; Walter takes his place and wins the enthusiasm of the throng by his art. The people at last vote him the prize. Pogner welcomes him as a Master. Sachs gives him counsel in the glory of German poetry and song, and places the golden chain about his neck. Eva takes the Master's wreath from Walter's head and places it on that of Sachs. Walter and she embrace the cobbler, whom all hail with affectionate homage.

Lohengrin (lō′-ĕn-grēn).

Three-act opera. Begun in 1845. Produced, Weimar, August 28, 1850 (Goethe's birthday).

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

LOHENGRIN.....Beck, tenor.

HEINRICH DER VOGLER (hīn′-rĭkh dĕr fōkh′-lĕr) ("Henry the Fowler"), Emperor.....Hofer, bass.

FRIEDRICH VON TELRAMUND (frēt′-rĭkh fōn tĕl′-rä-moont).....Millde, bar.

THE HERALD of the King.....bass.

ELSA VON BRABANT (ĕl′-zä fōn brä′-bänt), Frau Agathe, sopr.

ORTRUD (ôr′-troot), Wife of Count Telramund, Frl. Fastlinger, alto.

Act I.—Scene. The banks of the Scheldt in Brabant near Antwerp, Tenth Century. After the Herald's message the Emperor Henry announces that he has come to Brabant to gather forces to repel the Hungarians; he learns that the people are in discord. He calls on Telramund to explain, and is told by him that the late Duke had died, leaving two children in Telramund's charge. The son and heir has disappeared and he accuses the sister Elsa of putting him out of the way. He therefore claims the Duchy as next kinsman. The accused is summoned to trial, and she enters, answering the King's questions by telling a dream she had of an angelic knight and defender. Telramund offers to undergo the ordeal of battle (which was then the procedure of the courts) and Elsa says she will have no champion save the one she dreamed of. Four trumpeters sound North, South, East, and West, but no one appears to champion her. She kneels in prayer; from the distance comes a knight in a boat drawn by a swan. All are amazed except Ortrud, who is terror-stricken. The knight (who is Parsifal's son Lohengrin, one of the semi-deified Knights of the Holy Grail period of King Arthur) bids farewell to the swan, which departs. He announces himself Elsa's champion, but makes one stipulation: that she shall ask no questions of who or what he is, or whence come. She promises and is embraced as his betrothed. The ground is now prepared for the fight and with due ceremony the contest begins. Telramund is soon beaten down, but his life is spared, and he and his wife are crushed with shame, while the Knight is hailed with joy by the others.

Act II.—Scene. Night outside the palace. On the steps of the Minster opposite, cower Telramund and his wife. Under the ban of confiscation and exile they linger in rags. He reviles her as the cause of his disgrace, the lying accuser of Elsa and the source of the whole plot. She promises in one day to ruin Elsa by making her ask Lohengrin the forbidden question. She relies on witchcraft for success. Elsa appears on the balcony in blissful reverie. Ortrud with mock meekness addresses her, craving pity, which Elsa bestows. She comes down to take into shelter the outcast noblewoman, promising to add Lohengrin's forgiveness to her own. She invites her to attend the wedding, and Ortrud, pretending gratitude, says she would save Elsa from impending ill, and hints that Lohengrin may depart as easily as he came. Elsa, ill at ease, takes her into the house, and Telramund watches gloatingly. Day begins with the bustle of servants and the sounding of trumpets to gather the people. The Herald publishes Telramund's exile, Lohengrin's accession to his estates, his wedding to Elsa, and the departure the next day of all the warriors to battle. Four noblemen, angry at being called on for service, find Telramund and conceal him. The wedding procession forms, Elsa entering with Ortrud richly garbed. As Elsa is about to ascend the Minster step, Ortrud angrily darts in front of her, demanding precedence. She casts aspersion on the mysterious Knight. The King and Lohengrin press through the crowd, and Lohengrin, rebuking Ortrud as an evil sorceress, starts to lead Elsa up the steps. Telramund confronts him, demanding his name and station. Lohengrin sees with grief that Elsa is disheartened and afraid. Telramund whispers to her that if the Knight but lose even a finger-joint, he must tell all. Elsa hesitating, finally falls on Lohengrin's bosom and enters the Minster with him.

Act III.—Scene 1. The bridal chamber. The procession enters and Lohengrin and Elsa are divested of their outer robes. Left alone they exchange words of bliss, and she says her only regret is that she may not know and speak his name. She persists in her questioning, despite his entreaties. Suddenly Telramund and the four nobles rush in with swords drawn. Elsa seizes Lohengrin's sword and hands it to him quickly. He kills Telramund with it and bids the nobles, who yield, to take the body to the King. Elsa swoons and he summons her women and bids them take her also before the King. He promises there to give her the answer she has asked; and sadly departs.—The scene changes to that of Act I. The armies gather and the King promises them success in battle. Telramund's body is brought in, followed soon by the tottering and dejected Elsa, then by the mournful Lohengrin. He tells the King he cannot go to the war with the armies: he says that Telramund was slain as a midnight assassin, and that Elsa has been lured into breaking her vow. He says he has no shame of birth to conceal, and describes the Temple of the Holy Grail (i.e., the second cup or grail, from which Christ drank at the Last Supper, which contained the blood He shed on the cross, and which is preserved and renewed yearly by the Holy Ghost, as it is guarded by Knights chosen for blameless life). Lohengrin declares that he is the son of Parsifal (see the story of that opera), and has been sent to rescue the maiden. The swan reappears and Lohengrin announces that the Grail is recalling him. He says that Elsa's brother will return to her, and gives her for him his sword, horn, and ring, which ensure her brother's success. Ortrud exultantly confesses that Elsa's brother is the swan, changed to that shape; if the Knight had remained, the swan would have been freed of the spell. Lohengrin listening kneels in the boat to pray. A dove descends, Lohengrin joyfully removes the chain from the swan, which sinks. In its place appears Elsa's brother. Ortrud falls with a shriek. Elsa greets the boy with such delight that she does not see the dove taking the chain and drawing the boat away. The nobles kneel to the returned boy, but Elsa seeing Lohengrin already far in the distance, faints with a last cry, "My husband!"

Act I.—Scene. A pavilion on the forward deck of a ship; a tapestry closing from view the portion aft. Isolde reclining on a couch, Brangäne gazing out over the sea. The voice of an unseen sailor singing of his Irish love. Isolde starts up in a sudden fury. Brangäne is distressed. Isolde calls for air. Isolde throws back the tapestry, showing sailors and knights and Tristan looking off seaward. Isolde speaks scornfully of Tristan to Brangäne, who defends him. Sent to summon Tristan, Brangäne finds him reluctant to come; he says his only duty is to take the bride Isolde, willing or not, to King Marke, who awaits her. The devoted Kurwenal emphasises this point, but is reproved by Tristan, while Brangäne draws the curtains again. The insulted Isolde tells her of the first meeting when once, years before, she had found Tristan wounded in Ireland and had nursed him to health, though she should have killed him, since he had killed her kinsman and betrothed lover Thorold. He had made love to her and she had forgotten the blood-feud between them; then he had sailed away, only to return to demand her hand for his king and lead her away as bride to another. She curses Tristan. Brangäne tries to calm her, but at Isolde's order brings out a coffer of medicines and poisons. Isolde indicates a deadly draught. The crew is heard greeting the land. Kurwenal appears to bid them prepare to disembark. She tells him to send Tristan to her. Brangäne pleads frantically, but is silenced as Tristan enters. He explains that honour has kept him far from her, and she bitterly reminds him that she should have slain him for killing Thorold. He offers her his sword, but now she pretends to have forgiven him and asks him to seal the peace with a draught; she offers him the cup and he drinks; she snatches it away from him and drains the rest. Instead of both dying as Isolde expects, the draught, which Brangäne has surreptitiously changed to a love-potion, makes them lovers, madly impassioned and blind to all that goes on about them. They do not observe even the bustle of landing, and the approach of King Marke from shore.

Act II.—Scene. A garden with steps leading up to Isolde's chamber. A torch burns. In the distance the horns of far-away hunters are heard. Isolde is awaiting Tristan. Brangäne warns her that Melot, her pretended friend, is actually spying on them; she bitterly regrets her mixture of the love-potion, but Isolde says it is destiny. She quenches the torch as a signal, and beckons to Tristan, who hurries in. They have a long scene of unrestrained ecstasy, the voice of Brangäne, who watches unseen from the tower, falling on their ears with unheeded warning. At last she screams. Kurwenal rushes in to warn Tristan, but King Marke, and Melot and others appear and confront the lovers. Tristan in a daze tries to conceal Isolde, who is overcome with shame. Melot is violent with accusations, but King Marke is only bewildered and mystified. Tristan confesses equal bewilderment, is ready to die, however, and asks Isolde if she will die with him. She says she will follow him anywhere; he kisses her. Melot draws his sword. Tristan rebukes him as a false friend, draws and attacks, but lets himself be wounded, and falls in Kurwenal's arms. Isolde throws herself on his breast.

Act III.—Scene. A castle garden on the cliffs. The mortally wounded Tristan lies sleeping on a couch watched by the anxious Kurwenal. A shepherd playing a melancholy air on a pipe pauses to inquire of Tristan's welfare. He is watching for a ship—Isolde's, if he sees it, he will pipe merrily. Tristan wakes drearily. Kurwenal explains how he had carried the wounded Tristan away to his own long-deserted castle. Tristan tells a dream he had of Isolde. Kurwenal says he has sent for her to come and heal the wound. This enraptures Tristan for a moment, but he sinks back under the spell of the shepherd's wailing song. He wakens again, however, and the shepherd plays a brighter melody. A ship is sighted. Isolde leaps ashore, and Kurwenal hastens down the steep to bring her up. Tristan, left alone in a delirium of joy, desires to meet Isolde again as when she first saw him—with bleeding wounds. He tears the bandage from his wound, staggers toward her, and dies in her arms with a last sigh "Isolde!" The shepherd now warns Kurwenal that another ship has landed with King Marke and Melot. They barricade the gate. Kurwenal kills Melot and resists Marke and his followers, not heeding Brangäne's appeals, and is wounded to death. Brangäne tries to explain to Isolde that she has told the story of the love-potion. The King, understanding all, has come to reunite the lovers. Isolde, however, oblivious of everything, falls into a state of exaltation and seems to see Tristan rising in an apotheosis of bliss. In a transfiguration of rapture, she sinks upon his body, and King Marke invokes a blessing on the dead lovers. This swan-song of Isolde is called the "Liebestod" (lē′-bĕs-tōt), or "Love's-death."

NOTE.—(a) Like "Die Meistersinger," this opera has a semi-historical basis in the ancient contests between Germanic singers. The Minnesänger (mĭn′-nĕ-zĕng-ĕr) or love-bards were noblemen who sang poems and music of their own in praise of pure love, to their own harp accompaniment. They flourished in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. The Mastersingers, usually tradesmen, who succeeded them in the fourteenth to the sixteenth centuries, made more elaborate rules for composition. (b) The goddess Freia or Holda (v. "Das Rheingold"), Goddess of Youth and Spring, was believed to have been driven by Christianity to take refuge in the caverns of a mountain near Eisenach. She became confused, and finally identified, with the Greek Venus of similar attributes, and the mountain came to be called the Venusberg. This mountain is not far from the castle of the Wartburg, where the old landgraves held vocal contests of the sort described in this opera.

Act I.—Scene 1. The subterranean palace of Venus. Surrounded and beguiled by singing and dancing nymphs and sirens, Venus reclines in voluptuous languor, gazing wonderingly at Tannhäuser, who is dreaming of the upper air and homesick for the life he left for her. At her insistence he sings in her praise, but begs for his freedom. At first resentful, she then tries to charm his restlessness away, but grows furious again and tells him that his Christian God will never forgive him. She vanishes and he finds himself (scene 2) in a sunny valley before a shrine of the Virgin. A young shepherd pipes and sings of Holda, the Goddess of Spring. Seeing a file of elderly Pilgrims wandering Rome-wards, he asks their blessing. Tannhäuser himself kneels and joins their chant (known as the Pilgerchor, "The Pilgrims' Chorus"). They disappear in the distance, and the Landgrave, entering with his retinue of Bards, on a hunt, finds his long-lost favorite and welcomes him back. Tannhäuser speaks vaguely of travel in strange lands and wishes to avoid them, but Wolfram tells him that Elizabeth has been pining for him and his all-surpassing minstrelsy. Tannhäuser, at the memory of her, gladly rejoins them and they set off for the castle of the Wartburg.

Act II.—Scene. The Hall of Apollo in the Castle. Elizabeth enters and greets it with joy since now Tannhäuser's voice is to glorify it again. Wolfram ushers in Tannhäuser and he and Elizabeth are fervently reunited. The Landgrave welcomes Elizabeth to the hall she has shunned so long and announces her as the queen of the contest. The court gathers with much pomp. The Minnesingers enter. The Landgrave announces that love is the subject of the prize-songs. Four pages collect the names of the Bards in a cup and draw lots. Wolfram, the first chosen, sings of the fountain of clean-hearted love, to much applause. Tannhäuser interrupts with a praise of passion, but is received in chill silence. Walter sternly contradicts him, and is applauded. Tannhäuser reiterates his view and Biterolf angrily rebukes him. Tannhäuser returns the abuse, and Wolfram tries to calm the rising excitement by imploring heaven's intervention. Tannhäuser madly declares that Venus alone can teach love. The women leave the Hall hastily and the men advance against Tannhäuser, whom the Landgrave declares eternally condemned, for his unholy life in the Venusberg. The rash minstrel is about to be cut to pieces by the infuriated mob, but Elizabeth protects him and pleads that he may have a chance to repent. Tannhäuser is now overcome with shame and prays God to accept him. The Landgrave bids him join a band of young Pilgrims who seek absolution at Rome. He rushes away hopefully.

Act III.—Same as scene 2 of Act I. Elizabeth is praying before the shrine. Wolfram muses on her incessant prayer that Tannhäuser may return forgiven. The returning elderly Pilgrims are heard approaching and she rises. They pass, singing joyfully, and she scans them anxiously, but Tannhäuser is not with them. Crushed with grief, she sinks to her knees begging to die. In an apotheosis of soul she departs. When Wolfram offers her escort, she points silently to heaven whither she now is tending. The faithful Wolfram, left alone, sings to the Evening-star to bless and guide her. (Romance of the Evening Star—"O du mein holder Abendstern.") In the thickening night, Tannhäuser staggers by in tattered Pilgrim garb. Wolfram asks him how he dares return unshriven, and he declares wildly that he is on his way to the Venusberg again. He tells how the Pope had absolved all the other Pilgrims, but had likened him in his unholy acquaintance with the Venusberg to the Pope's own dead staff, which could never again put forth leaf or flower. The excommunicated Tannhäuser can find shelter nowhere but with Venus. She now appears to him in a rosy cloud, but Wolfram struggles to restrain the maniacal Tannhäuser and finally breathes Elizabeth's name. Tannhäuser cries her name wildly, and the goddess vanishes frustrated. A funeral procession enters bearing the dead Elizabeth. At sight of her, Tannhäuser, imploring her to pray for him in heaven, dies of grief. The younger Pilgrims now enter, chanting of the miracle they have seen. The Pope's staff has blossomed, showing heaven's forgiveness of Tannhäuser.

Der Ring des Nibelungen (dĕr rĭng dās nē′-bĕl-oong-ĕn). The Ring of the Nibelung.

"A stage-festival for three days and a Fore-evening."

This great work is a trilogy with prologue, or rather a tetralogy, bearing a close resemblance to Greek tragedies, which were groups of three plays set to music by the author of the text, and declaimed with choral interspersions much after the manner of Wagnerian opera, except that the harmonic resources in which this latter is so rich were practically unknown in the music of the tragedies of Æschylos, Sophokles, etc.

The stories of these four works have a continuity, but, though they were meant for performance on consecutive evenings, they contain many repetitions. The plots are adapted with much license from that great collection of German legend and mythology, the epic "Das Nibelungenlied" or "Song of the Nibelungs," a race of hideous gnomes living in the heart of the earth in the Nebelheim or "home of mists."

The tetralogy follows the baleful effect of a piece of consecrated gold stolen from the Rhine, made into a ring and then fought for by gods, Nibelungs, and heroes, bringing disaster to all its possessors, until it finally returns to the Rhine after compassing the destruction of the old dynasty of gods, with Wotan as their chief and Walhalla as their home. There is much room for moralising and allegory in the work, and commentators have not lost sight of the opportunity to confuse the complex with further obscurities. There is enough, however, in these librettos as dramatic and poetic works to occupy the interest and the attention.

The Prologue or "Vorabend" (fôr-ä′-bĕnt), or Fore-Evening of the trilogy:

1. Das Rheingold (däs rīn′-gôlt). The Rhine-gold.

Scene 1. — The orchestral prelude, based on a single musical pattern, indicates the gloomy flow of the depths of the Rhine, which are disclosed on the rising of the curtain. The Rhine daughters or nymphs gather and disport around a great central rock where rests the sleeping Rhine-gold, which their father has set them there to sentinel. Alberich appears from a chasm and makes sensual love to them and tries to clutch them. They make sport of him and decoy him to violent scrambling and wrath. Suddenly the Rhine-gold "awakes" and gleams. The fascinated Alberich asks what it is, and the Rhine-girls laughingly taunt him with his ignorance of the fact that this gold if seized and fashioned into a ring would confer boundless power on the thief, who must, however, they add tauntingly, forswear love before he can take it. Alberich's love is turned to hate by their scorn, and climbing the rock he wrenches the gold loose. In the gloom that follows, he laughs at their frantic pursuit and disappears into the earth. By a scenic transformation, the first scene is modulated skilfully, as are all the scenes of this opera, into the next. Scene 2.—An open space among cliffs, one of which bears the new castle Walhalla. Wotan and Fricka awake from sleep. He revels in the beauty of the vast achievement just finished in the building of a fit home for the gods. She reminds him that he must now pay the builders, for he had promised the two Giants his wife's sister Freia. Fricka upbraids him for his ruthless ambitions and his roving infidelity. He reminds her that he gave one of his eyes to win herself and that he will not give Freia up to the Giants as he promised, but trusts in Loge to slip him out of the compact by trickery, since the whole compact was Loge's idea. Freia now hurries in, terrified with fear that the Giants are to have her. The Giants follow shortly. They say they have come for their wages. Wotan tells them she is not his to give. The Giants are furious, Fasolt saying they had counted on her beauty, Fafner preferring the golden apples of youth that grow in her garden. They propose to seize Freia, but Froh and Donner appear to shelter her. Donner threatens them with his thunderous hammer, but Wotan intervenes. The anxiously awaited Loge now appears and all suspect him of trickery as he flits flame-like about. He finally tells how he has ransacked the earth for a ransom for Freia, but nowhere could he find anything rated so high as woman and love—only one being in the universe has other preference, and that is Alberich. He tells of the theft of the gold and of the ring Alberich has made from it. Wotan now covets the ring and so do the Giants. Loge says the ring can only be got by theft. The Giants offer to accept it as ransom. Meanwhile they take away the screaming Freia as hostage. Immediately the Gods grow wan and old and Loge says that the apples of youth which renew the universe and the gods, are withering in Freia's deserted garden ; a pallid mist rises. Wotan resolves to wrest the gold from Alberich, and Loge leads him into a cleft of the earth whence sulphurous vapours spread, veiling the transformation to Scene 3. A subterranean cavern. Alberich drags in the squealing Mime, who pretends not to have finished his appointed task of making the Tarnhelm (a helmet conferring invisibility on the bearer). Inadvertently he lets it fall. Alberich puts it on and vanishes into mist ; invisible now, he beats Mime, then is heard as he departs to the forge-room beneath. Loge leads in Wotan and they question the whimpering Mime, who tells them that Alberich has usurped a despotism over them all and makes them slaves to his greed. He tells of the new helmet of darkness and the beating he had. Alberich comes in, visible now, the Tarnhelm at his girdle, he drives in a herd of Nibelungs who heap up gold ; he then scourges them back to their work. He gives his new guests bitter greeting and says he will soon have them all in his grasp, gods and women. Loge hints that the gold might be stolen in his sleep. Alberich trusts in the Tarnhelm to hide him. They question his power to change his shape. To prove it he becomes a great serpent. Loge hints that he cannot change himself to anything small like a toad. Alberich ingenuously makes this change. Wotan puts his foot on the toad, Loge snatches the Tarnhelm, thus bringing Alberich back to his natural shape. They tie him up and drag him back to the upper ir and to scene 4, the same as scene 2. They offer him freedom for all his gold; he murmurs to his ring a summons to his dwarfs, who appear and heap up the gold. Loge, in spite of his protest, adds the Tarnhelm to the heap. Wotan espies the ring and wrenches it from Alberich's finger. Alberich, released, curses the ring and loads its power with a heritage of death, misery, envy, sleeplessness, and crime to its possessor. He then returns to his forge. (The too-consistent mind will wonder why a ring which conferred "measureless might" on its wearer, could not get him out of an ordinary rope; but myths, like metaphors, "must not be squeezed till they squeal".) The Gods and the Giants assemble. The Giants demand that the gold be heaped up to hide the beautiful Freia whom they are so loth to surrender. They stick their staves in the ground in front of her, and Loge and Froh heap up the gold. The Giants can still see her hair shining through and the Tarnhelm must be added to the heap. Even now they can see one of her eyes, and demand the ring on Wotan's finger. He furiously refuses it. Now, in a rocky cleft appears the awesome Erda, mother of the three Norns or Fates; she implores Wotan to keep his faith and yield the ring. She vanishes, and after some resistance he throws the ring on the heap. Immediately the Giants quarrel for it, and Fafner kills Fasolt, places the treasure in a sack, and stalks away. The Gods watch him with horror and Wotan resolves to visit Erda again. Donner, hating the mists that veil Walhalla, disappears in storm clouds; he swings his thunder hammer and the lightning clears the mists. Froh spans the gorge with a rainbow bridge to Walhalla. The Gods move toward the castle. Loge, the flame demi-god, looks scornfully after those whom he has saved, and is tempted to turn against them, but follows for the nonce. The wail of the forlorn Rhine daughters is heard from the deeps of the valley, but the Gods mock it with laughter.

2. Die Walküre (dē väl-kü′-rĕ). The Valkyrs.

Music-drama in three acts. Begun, 1852. Finished, 1856.

With this work, the trilogy proper begins. As gradually transpires: since the events of "Das Rheingold," the fickle Wotan has been wandering over the now populated earth under the name Wälse (vĕl′-zĕ). The children of his roving amours have formed a tribe called Wälsungen, or Volsungs, who are at war with the tribe of Neidungs (nī′-doongs). A Volsung woman had borne to Wotan the twins Siegmund and Sieglinde, but the children were soon separated. Over the conflicts of humanity Wotan eagerly watches, and those who prove heroes and are killed in battle are carried aloft to form a blissful garrison for the defence of Walhalla. Over every battlefield hover, for this purpose, the heavenly horse-women, or Valkyrs, who are all illegitimate daughters of Wotan by Erda, whom he had seduced with a love-potion.

Act I.—Scene. The interior of a primitive hut built round a great tree in which a sword has been thrust up to the hilt. Siegmund breathlessly enters from the storm outside. Sieglinde not knowing him, gives him a horn of mead, and treats him kindly; her husband Hunding, one of the Neidungs, enters and confirms her hospitality but with suspicion. Siegmund, asked to tell who he is, describes his vile life in the woods with his father, a Volsung, his mother and twin-sister having been carried off by the Neidungs. To-day he has fought single-handed in defence of a woman. Hunding recognises him as the wretch his tribe is hunting, and says that on the morrow he must fight out the feud. He gives Siegmund sanctuary for the night, but warns him to have weapon and resolution for the morning. Siegmund, left alone, broods over the misfortune that hounds him, but remembers that his father had said a sword would be at hand in direst need. Sieglinde enters, having drugged her husband, and tells him of the sword in the tree, thrust there by a strange wanderer (Wotan). No one has ever been able to draw it out. She longs for someone to unsheath it, and revenge her. The door springs open, showing moon-lit night outside. Siegmund says that the mysterious visitor is the Spring itself, and sings a rapturous idyll. Sieglinde calls him the Spring she has longed for. Not knowing that they are brother and sister, they grow ardent in love. He proclaims Wälse (Wotan) as his father, and with a mighty effort, plucks out the sword, which is called "Nothung" (nōt-oong), i.e., need. Sieglinde proclaims herself his sister. He embraces her fervently as both sister and bride for the restoration of the Volsung lineage.

Act II.—Scene. A gorge in the mountains. Wotan sends Brünnhilde to watch an impending battle. Fricka comes angrily in. She plays the Xanthippe. To her as goddess of wedlock, Hunding had appealed to punish Siegmund and Sieglinde, who have fled. After a bitter quarrel she compels Wotan to swear that Siegmund shall die under Hunding's sword, even if he must intervene himself. When she has gone, Brünnhilde reappears and tries to console her dejected father. He tells her the story of the Rhine-gold; of Fafner who holds the ring, of his betraying Erda for his purpose, and of his one hope that some unaided hero shall of his own volition and resource win the world-power. He bewails his oath to Fricka, but when Brünnhilde hints that she will save Siegmund, he threatens her wrathfully. When they have left in opposite directions, Siegmund and Sieglinde enter, both overcome with fatigue, and she also with shame at yielding to him. In the distance the horses of their pursuers are heard. She swoons in her anguish. Brünnhilde appears and bids Siegmund follow her to Walhalla, but he refuses to be separated from Sieglinde. He even threatens to kill her and himself first, and Brünnhilde passionately vows to preserve them both. She disappears, and a great storm arises. Siegmund leaves Sieglinde to meet Hunding. They fight. Brünnhilde protects Siegmund with her shield; but Wotan appears, and with his spear shatters the sword of Siegmund whom Hunding slays. The disobedient Brünnhilde, in terror, escapes with Sieglinde, and Wotan after slaying Hunding with one scornful glance, follows her.

Act III.—Scene. A mountain peak and cavern. The Valkyrs gather, each with a slain hero across her horse. They await Brünnhilde, who appears finally in great panic with Sieglinde on her saddle. She tells what she has done and begs shelter. Sieglinde pleads to be allowed to die, but Brünnhilde reminds her that in her womb she bears Siegmund's son, to be called Siegfried (here first appears the motive "Siegfried and the sword"). Sieglinde now wishes to live, and they decide that a cave near Fafner's lair would be safe from Wotan's discovery. She gives Sieglinde the pieces of Siegmund's sword, and bids her save them for her son. Sieglinde hurries away, just before Wotan appears and denounces Brünnhilde bitterly. He disowns her, and tells his plan to disgrace her by making her a prisoner on this mountain. The maidenhood which is the pride of the Valkyrs, shall be the prey of whosoever finds her. He sends the other Valkyrs away, and Brünnhilde pleads earnestly that she protected Siegmund because she knew Wotan really loved him and wished him to win; but she cannot alter his resolve. She begs to be surrounded with flames that only a fearless hero may reach her to make her his own. Wotan grants this wish, and bids her a tender farewell, kisses her divinity away and lays her fast asleep with closed helmet on a bank of moss. He places her long shield over her, and invokes Loge, who sends a circle of fire to guard the sleeping Valkyr. He vanishes after a last charm: "He who feareth my spear, shall never fare through this fire" (in which again the "Siegfried and the sword" motive appears).

3. Siegfried (zēkh'-frēt).

Three-act music-drama. Begun, 1856, finished, 1869. Produced, Bayreuth, August 15, 1876.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

SIEGFRIED.....Unger, tenor.
MIME (mē'-mĕ).....Schlosser, tenor.
DER WANDERER (dĕr vän'-dĕr-ĕr), Betz, bar.
ALBERICH (äl'-bĕr-ĭkh).....Hill, bar.
FAFNER (fäf'-nĕr), Von Reichenberg, bar.
ERDA (ĕrt'-ä).....Frau Jäida, alto.
BRUENNHILDE (brĭn-hĭl'-dĕ), Frau Friedrich Materna, sopr.

Act 1.—Scene. A cave-dwelling with primitive forge and anvil. The dwarf Mime is forging a sword, but grumbles that the boy Siegfried breaks the strongest blade he can make. If he could only forge the pieces of Siegmund's sword Nothung, that would be unbreakable; with it Siegfried might even slay Fafner who, shaped like a dragon, guards the all-powerful Ring. Mime would then possess himself of the Ring. But he winces at his inability to forge Nothung. The boyish Siegfried romps in with a bear and terrifies the dwarf, and breaks with a blow the latest sword he has forged. Mime sobs that all his fatherly care of the boy meets only hate and rebuff. Siegfried confesses an unconquerable repugnance to the dwarf; he only tolerates him for the knowledge he has. He has learned that all animals have father and mother; he asks who his mother was, and Mime claims the double honour of being both father and mother to the boy. Siegfried has seen his own image in a brook, and gives Mime the lie. He chokes the dwarf into telling him of a nameless woman who had come to the cave and died in bearing a child. She entrusted him to Mime after naming him Siegfried. He tells over in little slices the story of his devoted care for the boy, and finally produces the broken sword. Siegfried orders him to forge it anew and dashes out into the woods. Mime, despairing of hoodwinking the lad to his own purposes, views with suspicion the entrance of Wotan, who is disguised as a wanderer. In a long colloquy, which re-tells the stories of the previous operas, they enter into a contest in which each is to ask three questions; the one failing to answer forfeits his head. Mime asks (1) What race dwells in the earth? (2) What on the surface? (3) What in the clouds? Wotan answers (1) The Nibelungs, whom Alberich subjugated with the Ring. (2) The Giants, of whom Fafner guards the Ring. (3) The Gods, of whom Wotan is the chief, ruling all with his spear. He strikes the spear on the ground and a thunder rumbles. Wotan, recognised, asks Mime three questions: (1) What race does Wotan persecute though he loves them? Mime answers correctly, "the Volsungs." (2) What sword must Siegfried use to slay Fafner? Mime answers, "Nothung." (3) Who will forge that sword anew? Mime can find no answer. Wotan laughs and says that only one who knows no fear can forge it; to that hero he bequeathes Mime's head. When he is gone, Siegfried returns to find Mime hysterical with fright. He tries to teach Siegfried fear, a thing the boy has never felt; as a last resort he will show him the dragon. Siegfried resolves to forge the sword himself and with growing ecstasy works away. Mime watches him and plans his own ambitions, brewing the while a poison for Siegfried when he has won the Ring. The sword at length is made and Siegfried exultantly splits the anvil in twain with its resistless edge.

Act II.—Scene. The heart of a forest at night. Alberich lies brooding. The Wanderer enters. The ancient enemies quarrel. They speak of Siegfried who is coming to slay Fafner. Alberich calls to the dragon Fafner, whose cave is near by, offering to protect him if he will give him the Ring. Fafner yawningly declines. Wotan advises Alberich to try Mime next, and vanishes. Alberich hides as in the dawning light Mime enters with Siegfried. His descriptions of the dragon fail to terrify Siegfried, who finally orders him away. The boy, alone, muses on his father and his mother. The bird-choir charms him. He cuts a reed, fashions a pipe and tries to imitate them on it and on his horn. Fafner thrusts out his hideous head and gapes. Siegfried laughs. After some banter he closes to the attack and kills the fire-breathing dragon, who with his dying breath warns the boy against conspiracy. The dragon's blood on the boy's hand burns him. He lifts it to his lips. Instantly he understands the bird-voices. A wood-bird tells him of the Tarnhelm and the Ring and he enters the cave. Mime and Alberich steal in; they wrangle, but retire when Siegfried reissues with the ring and Tarnhelm. The wood-bird tells him to beware of Mime, whose hypocrisy he can see through, thanks to the taste of dragon's blood. Mime enters and while trying to dissemble, actually tells his basest motives. Siegfried finally slays him and, throwing the body in the cave, calls again to the wood-bird for counsel. The bird tells him that his future wife sleeps on a lofty peak flame-girdled. He bids the bird lead on and joyfully hastens after.

Act III.—Scene I. The mouth of a craggy cavern at night. Wotan appearing summons Erda to a long, but bootless conference, in which he expresses his resignation to his coming doom. Erda vanishes and Siegfried comes along the path. Wotan questions him and is told all that has happened. He reproaches the boy for his frank insolence and tries to check him, but has his spear hewn in two for his counsel, and vanishes. Siegfried, blowing his horn, plunges into the mist and flames and the scene is changed to the same as Act III. of "Die Walküre," where Brünnhilde still lies sealed in sleep under her long shield. Siegfried, seeing her, thinks her a man till he has opened her helmet and lifted her breastplate. He is overcome with an emotion which he thinks may be fear, but at length kisses her. She wakes and greets the sunlight, and knows him to be Siegfried. Her joy changes to fear and grief as she remembers her lost Valkyr estate, but his ardour and bravery win her back to rapture in his arms.

4. Götterdämmerung (gĕt'-tĕr-dĕm'-mĕr-oongk). The Gloaming (or Dusk or Twilight) of the Gods.

Music-drama in three acts and Prologue. Begun, 1867. Finished, 1876. Produced, Bayreuth, August 16, 1876.

CHARACTERS AND THEIR CREATORS.

SIEGFRIED (zēkh′-frēt).....Unger, tenor.
GUNTHER (goon′-tĕr).....Gura, bar.
HAGEN (hä′-gĕn),
Von Reichenberg, bass.
ALBERICH (äl′-bĕr-ĭkh).....Hill, bar.

GUTRUNE (goo-troo′-nĕ), Frl. Weckerlin.
WALTRAUTE (vält′-row-tĕ), Frau Jäida.
THE THREE NORNS, OR FATES.
THE THREE RHINE-DAUGHTERS.

Prologue.—Scene, on the Valkyrs' rock, same as the last scenes of "Die Walküre" and "Siegfried." The three Norns sit idle and gloomy under a fir-tree. The first Norn fastens a golden rope to the tree, and tells of the coming of Wotan long before, and how he had paid one of his eyes to drink at the spring of wisdom, and broke a spear from the World-ash tree; thereafter the tree and the spring failed. She throws the rope to the second Norn, who winds it round a rock and tells how Siegfried shattered Wotan's spear, and Wotan had sent his Walhalla heroes to chop up the World-ash tree. She casts the rope to the third Norn, who tells that the Gods and heroes will gather in Walhalla round a fire made of the World-ash boughs, and the fire will waste Walhalla and leave the Gods in eternal night. As the rope is passed forward and back, they talk of Loge's plots against Wotan and of Alberich; the sacred rope grows frayed and finally parts. They wind the strands about them and moaning that eternal wisdom and wise counsel are lost forever to the world, sink into the earth. Day dawns. Siegfried comes from the cave, full-armed, followed by Brünnhilde leading her horse Grane, which had been preserved in sleep during her own long slumbers. Siegfried having made Brünnhilde his own, and learned from her the story of the Gods and the meaning of the holy runes, is now eager for new deeds. He promises to remember her faithfully, and gives her the Ring itself as a pledge. She gives him the horse to carry him back to the world, and they part in mutual idolatry.

Act I.—Scene I. The Hall of the Gibichungen (gē′-bĭkh-oong-ĕn), on the banks of the Rhine. Three of the Gibichs or Gibichungs, a race of heroes, are seated in earnest counsel: Gunther (who is wifeless and longs for Brünnhilde, whom he believes to be still surrounded by the terrifying flames which Siegfried had pierced), his sister Gutrune (who is husbandless and longs to wed Siegfried, whose fame has reached them), and their half-brother, the vicious Hagen (whom their mother Grimhilde had borne when seduced by Alberich's gold). Hagen is suggesting that they persuade Siegfried to marry Gutrune, then ask him to bring Brünnhilde through the flames to wed Gunther. Siegfried's horn is heard and they see him rowing on the river. They invite him to land. He does so, and they lead his horse Grane to a stall. He tells them that he has left the useless gold of Alberich in the dead dragon's cave, and brought away only the Tarnhelm and the Ring. Now, Hagen's father Alberich had charged him to recover the Ring (v. "Das Rheingold"), and he learns that Siegfried has given it to Brünnhilde. Gutrune brings in a horn full of a magic liquor which effaces all remembrance. Siegfried, draining it, forgets Brünnhilde utterly, and becomes so infatuated with Gutrune that he asks for her hand. Gunther tells of the fire-guarded Brünnhilde, and Siegfried promises to win her for Gunther by means of the Tarnhelm. The two men prick their arms with their swords, drop blood into their wine-horn, and swear blood-brotherhood, and Hagen cuts the horn in two to complete the pact. When asked why he has not joined the two, he evades the question. Siegfried and Gunther set forth to find Brünnhilde, while Hagen stays to guard the house, and bide his time to seize the Ring. Scene 2, same as the Prologue. Brünnhilde, alone, is visited by her sister Waltraute (v. "Die Walküre"). Asked why she had broken the ban their father Wotan has put on Brünnhilde, she says that she has fled from Walhalla in terror. The Valkyrs no longer seek heroes slain on battlefields; Wotan has come home with his spear hewn asunder; the sacred ravens have flown away; Wotan has made a great pile of logs from the shattered World-ash tree and sits with his heroes waiting the general doom. Waltraute has wrung from him the word that if the Ring could be found and flung back into the Rhine whence it was stolen, and cursed by Alberich (v. "Das Rheingold") the doom would be averted. Brünnhilde, despite Waltraute's frenzied pleading, sternly refuses to throw back into the Rhine-waves the pledge of love Siegfried has given her, and Waltraute rushes away in wild despair. Siegfried's horn is heard, and he enters in Gunther's form with the Tarnhelm hiding his face. The terrified Brünnhilde threatens the stranger with the Ring. Siegfried says it shall be their wedding-ring, and takes it from her after a struggle. He orders her into the cave, and drawing his sword Nothung to lay between them as a proof of faith to Gunther, follows her in.

Act II.—Scene. The river-bank before the Hall of the Gibichungs. Hagen is seated, asleep. Alberich, his father, is talking to him in his dreams, urging him on to revenge his ancient wrongs on the ignorant Siegfried. Hagen vows and Alberich vanishes. Siegfried enters in the dawn and removes the Tarnhelm. Hagen wakes, Gutrune enters, and Siegfried tells how he had won Brünnhilde, but kept the sword between them till he gave her over to Gunther, who was waiting at the foot of the mountains. Siegfried had then willed himself back to the Hall by his Tarnhelm's power. Hagen summons the vassals with his horn; they come expecting a battle, but are told of the wedding festivities. Gunther and Brünnhilde arrive in a boat. Brünnhilde is dumbfounded at seeing Siegfried, and swoons in his arms, but he still fails to recognise her. Then she sees the Ring on his finger. Gunthe. confesses he had not given it to Siegfried. Hagen tells Brünnhilde that Siegfried had won the ring from Gunther by wiles, and Brünnhilde in supreme rage accuses Siegfried of having possessed her body as well as her soul when he conquered her. Siegfried swears to Gunther on Hagen's spear that Brünnhilde's accusation is false. Brünnhilde on the same spear swears her own statement, and hallows the point to pierce Siegfried's heart in revenge. Siegfried tries to reassure Gunther, and embraces Gutrune. Hagen promises the distracted Brünnhilde revenge, and she tells him that he must stab Siegfried in the back, his only vulnerable point. Gunther, overcome with his own position, and believing that Siegfried has played him false, is drawn into the plot. Hagen plans to kill Siegfried out of Brünnhilde's sight at a hunt. The three then vow the death of Siegfried, who enters, wreathed as a bridegroom.

Act III.—Scene 1. A valley through which the Rhine sweeps. In the stream the Rhine-daughters drift, waiting the hero who shall restore them the lost Rhine-gold. Siegfried appears; he has lost his way, following a bear. The Rhine-daughters tease him and try to win the Ring from him, but their prayers are futile, and threats do not avail to frighten him, so they swim away. The hunters now gather with their booty; they drink, and Siegfried, under the memory-waking spell of a herb Hagen has put in his drink, tells them the whole story of his life, and how he came to learn the language of birds, and how he won Brünnhilde. The sacred ravens fly past, Siegfried starts up and looks after them. Hagen thrusts his spear into his back. Siegfried turning, swings his shield high to crush Hagen, but with sudden weakness, drops it, and falls on it. Hagen stalks away. Siegfried, seeing Brünnhilde in a vision welcoming him, dies in a rapturous delirium. His body is raised and carried homeward. Scene 2. The Hall of the Gibichungs at night. Gutrune is waiting for Siegfried. Hagen storms in, announcing Siegfried's return, saying that a wild boar has killed him. Gutrune faints as the body is brought in. Gunther declares Hagen's guilt. Hagen admits it, and claims the Ring. Gunther opposes him, and is killed. As Hagen moves to take the Ring, the dead Siegfried's arm rises threateningly and all fall back in terror. Brünnhilde enters. She proudly claims the dead hero as her husband, and Gutrune now realises for the first time the truth. While a funeral pyre is being raised and decked, Brünnhilde muses upon Siegfried, and the tangled net of lies that has enmeshed his pure soul and brought her shame. She understands all Fate now, and taking the Ring from Siegfried's hand, places it on her own. His body is put upon the pyre. She calls to the Rhine-maidens that they will find the ring burned free of its curse in her own ashes. She seizes a firebrand, and sets the pyre ablaze. The ravens fly up and disappear. She bids all look to the north when she is dead, to see the burning of Walhalla. Her horse has been brought in. Addressing him and bidding him neigh gladly to rejoin Siegfried his lord and her husband, she warns mankind to trust only to love and not to gain or to treachery, and dashes into the flames. In a great flash the Hall of the Gibichungs catches fire and is ruined. The pyre dies out and collapses. The Rhine overflows and comes rippling across the Hall. The Rhine-daughters swim in on the waves. Hagen, who rushes in to struggle for the Ring, is dragged down to death by two of them while the third holds up exultantly the Rhine-gold that has returned home at last from its devastating travels. In the north a great glow appears. It is the flash of the flames consuming Walhalla. With the palace built by deceit and broken faith, the fire destroys the race of gods and heroes, and their merciless, honourless dynasty, leaving Free-will and Love as the inspiration of mankind.

His chief forester.....Waner, bass.
Kas′par,
A forester....Heinrich Blume, bass.
Max (mäx),
A forester (in Italian, Giulio), Karl Stümer, tenor.
Zamiel (zäm-ĭ-ĕl′),
A demon.
A Hermit.....Gern, bass.
Kil′lian,
A peasant.....Wiedemann, tenor.
Agathe (ä′-gä-tĕ),
Kuno's daughter,
Frl. Karoline Seidler, sopr.
Aennchen (ĕn′-khĕn),
Her friend,
Frl. Johanna Eunike, sopr.

Act I.—Scene. Before an inn. The peasants are congratulating Killian, the winner of a shooting-match; he taunts Max, who has lost. Kuno and Kaspar enter and learn of Max's humiliation. Kuno tells how his own grandfather was made head-ranger to the prince by a lucky shot that saved the life of a man bound to a stag; he will give his own daughter to the best marksman, and make him his successor. He hopes Max may win. Killian speaks of a certain enchantment with seven magic bullets of which he has heard. A trio concerning the morrow's match is followed by a hunting chorus, and the men and women dance away. Max alone, bewails his recent bad luck and his fear of losing Agathe ("Durch die Waldes, etc."), while Zamiel, the demon, hovers about unseen. Kaspar appears and persuades Max to drink, singing a boisterous vine-song ("Hier im ird'schen Jammerthal"). He persuades the sceptical Max to shoot at an eagle almost invisible aloft; the eagle falls just as the clock strikes seven; Kaspar says that more of the magic bullets may be had, and after winning from Max a promise to meet him in the Wolf's Glen at midnight, he sings a song of diabolic triumph.

Act II.—Scene 1. A room in Kuno's house. Agathe preparing for her wedding is gloomy with foreboding; a picture had fallen from the wall and cut her forehead just as the clock struck seven. Aennchen teases her and sings a little ballad of a young lover ("Kommt ein schlanker Bursch gegangen"). But Agathe speaks of a hermit who frightened her with his prophecies. Aennchen goes, and Agathe leaning out into the moonlight has a blissful reverie ("Leise, leise, fromme Weise"). She sees her lover coming; he enters, and Aennchen returns. Max learns with dread that Agathe's forehead was cut by the picture just the moment he killed the eagle with the magic bullet. He tells her he must go to bring a slain stag from the Wolf's Glen, and in spite of her horror of the place he goes. Scene 2. The wild ravine of the Wolf's Glen. A chorus of invisible demons. Kaspar appears and summons Zamiel. The demon appears to him; he appeals to be released from his unholy compact —he is to die the next day; he offers as a bribe to Zamiel to bring a new victim who wishes the magic "free bullets." Zamiel accepts, saying that six of the bullets shall hit, but the seventh shall betray. Kaspar asks that the seventh may kill Agathe so that both her lover and her father shall go mad and fall in Zamiel's power. Zamiel consents, saying, "Thou or he to-morrow must be mine." He vanishes. Max enters in much terror. They set about casting the bullets from unhallowed materials; as they count them an echo repeats their words. After the fifth, the demons cry out; after the sixth the echo cries "Beware," but Max summons Zamiel, who appears as the seventh is cast.

Act III.—Scene 1. Agathe's room. The bride is still sad and praying. Aennchen enters and Agathe tells of the fierce storm that raged at midnight; she dreamed she was a dove; a huntsman appeared; the dove vanished and an eagle fell dead. Aennchen tries to reassure her by telling comically a frightful dream her grandmother had, all caused by the family dog getting into her room. The bridesmaids appear and sing ("Wir winden dir den Jungfern Kranz"). When, however, the bridal garland is produced, it proves to be a funeral wreath; but she remembers in her gloom the roses left for her by the hermit and plucks up courage. Scene 2. The Forest. The Graf and others assembled. A Hunters' Chorus ("Was gleicht wohl auf Erden dem Jägervergnügen"). Kaspar watching from behind a tree. The match has taken place and the Graf accepts the victorious Max as Kuno's successor; he asks Max as a last test (this is his seventh shot) to bring down a white dove flitting about in the branches. Agathe's sudden absence is noted. Max calls on his last bullet to find its mark, and Kaspar invokes Zamiel. Agathe, standing near the tree where Kaspar hides, cries, "I am the dove!" She is stunned but is saved by the hermit's wreath; Kaspar is killed and dies cursing as Zamiel appears to him. Max confesses his league with Zamiel and the Graf banishes him in spite of the entreaties of all. The hermit appears, however, and pleads for him as it was his first sin; he suggests the abolition of the trial-shot, a year's penance for Max, and then his wedding to Agathe. The opera ends in rejoicing and religious fervour.

MUSICIANS

N.B. The German modified vowels ä, ö, ü, are often spelled ae, oe, ue. For convenience they will here be arranged alphabetically as if a, o, u.

For the system on which given names are abbreviated, and for their pronunciation, see the pages devoted to them.

The word "Gerbert," or "Coussemaker" in a parenthesis means that some of the composer's works are in the great collections of Gerbert or Coussemaker (q. v.). Where not otherwise stated the man is a composer.

(19) Bach, Jn. Sebastian, Eisenach, March 21, 1685—Leipzig, July 28, 1750; youngest son of Jn. Ambrosius B. and Elizabeth (née Lammerhit), of Erfurt (vide CHART OF BACHS); both parents died when he was 10, his father having begun teaching him the violin. He went to the home of his brother Jn. Christoph, who taught him the clavichord, but forbade him inspection of a MS. vol. of works by Frohberger, Buxtehude, etc., obtaining it secretly B. copied it by moonlight for 6 months, though near-sighted, with results fatal to his eyes in later life. This desire to study other men's work characterised his whole career. At 15 his fine soprano voice secured him free tuition at St. Michael's Ch. in Lüneberg (he having already attended the Ohrdruff Lyceum). He went on foot on holidays to Hamburg to hear the great Dutch organist Reinken, and at Celle he heard the French instr. music used in the Royal Chapel. He studied also the work of Böhm, organist at Lüneberg, and practised violin, clavichord and org. often all night; 1703, in the Weimar ct.-orch.; 1704, organist at Arnstadt; 1705, walked 50 miles to Lübeck to hear Buxtehude, and stayed till a peremptory recall from the Church at Arnstadt; 1707, organist at Mühlhausen. On Oct. 17, he m. Maria Barbara Bach, his cousin, who bore him 7 children, of whom 4 died, leaving a daughter, Wm. Friedemann, and K. P. E. (See below.) 1708, he played before the Duke at Weimar, and was made ct.-organist; 1714 Konzertmeister. In his vacations he made clavichord and org. tours. 1714, he furnished the organ-music for a service conducted in the Thomaskirche, Leipzig, and produced a cantata. Dresden, 1717, he challenged Marchand, a French organist of high reputation, who was afraid to compete. 1717 Kapellmeister to Prince Leopold of Anhalt, at Köthen, and composed much orch.- and chamber-music. In 1719 he revisited Halle, to meet Händel, but he had just gone to England. 1720, his wife died. He applied for the organ of the Jacobskirche, Hamburg. B. was now famous, but a young rival offered to pay 4,000 marks for the place and got it. In 1721 he m. Anna Magdalene Wülken, daughter of the ct.-trumpeter at Weissenfels. She bore him 13 children, 9 of them sons, of whom only 2 survived him: Jn., Christoph, Fr., and Jn. Christian. His second wife had a fine voice and musical taste, and wrote out the parts of many of his cantatas; for her he prepared 2 books of music. In May, 1723, cantor at the Thomasschule, Leipzig, vice Jn. Kühnau; also organist and dir. of mus. at the Thomaskirche and the Nicolaikirche, continuing as "Kapellmeister vom Haus aus." to Prince Leopold. He was made, 1736, hon. cond. to the Duke of Weissenfels, and court-composer to the King of Poland, and Elector of Saxony. He kept his place at Leipzig for twenty-seven years, and there wrote most of his sacred music. He often visited Dresden, where he could hear the Italian opera, cond. by Hasse. Frederick the Great having asked to hear him, on May 7, 1747, with his son Wilhelm Friedemann, B. arrived at Potsdam He improvised upon the various Silbermann pianos in the palace, followed from room to room by the king and his musicians. The next day he tried the principal organs in Potsdam, improvising a 6-part fugue on a theme proposed by the king. He afterward wrote a 3-part fugue on this theme, a Ricercare in 6 parts, several canons inscribed "Thematis regii elaborationes canonicae," and a trio for flute, violin, and bass, dedicating the "Musikalisches Opfer" to the king. 1749, two operations to restore his sight, weakened by copying his own and other men's works and engraving his "Art of Fugue," left him totally blind and ruined his previous vigour. His sight was suddenly restored, July 10, 1750; but 10 days later he died of apoplexy. He dictated the choral "Vor deinen Thron tret' ich hiemit, shortly before his death.

Among his distinguished pupils were Krebs, Homilius, Agricola, Kirnberger, Goldberg, Marpurg; J. Kasper Vogler; Altnikol, his son-in-law, and his sons, for whom he wrote the "Klavierbüchlein," and the "Kunst der Fuge." He engraved on copper; invented the "viola pomposa" and the "Lauten-Clavicembalum"; he advocated equal temperament (vide D. D.), tuning his own pianos and writing "Das Wohltemperirte Klavier," to further the cause. This work (known in English as "The well-tempered Clavichord," or "The 48-Fugues") is a set of 48 preludes and fugues, two of each to each key, major and minor. The works are very chromatic and use the keys enharmonically. Some of his improvements in fingering still survive. Bach was little known as a composer during his life, and few of his works were published then. He was not indeed established on his present pinnacle till Mendelssohn took up his cause, in 1829; Franz was also an important agent in preparing his scores for general use. In 1850, a hundred years after his death, the BACH-GESELLSCHAFT began to publish his complete works. Many other Bach societies now exist. B's. enormous list of works includes: VOCAL, 5 sets of church Cantatas for Sundays and feast-days, "Gottes Zeit ist die beste Zeit," etc., secular betrothal cantatas, 2 comic cantatas, the "Bauern Cantate" and "Coffee-Cantate," a protest against the excessive use of the beverage, and Trauerode, on the death of the Electress of Saxony; 5 Passions, incl. the St. Matthew, the St. John, and the St. Luke (doubtful); a Christmas Oratorio, in 5 parts; 4 small masses and the Grand Mass in B min.; motets; 2 Magnificats; 5 Sanctus. INSTRUMENTAL, numerous pieces for clavichord: inventions in 2 and 3 parts; 6 "small" French suites; 6 "large" English suites; Preludes and Fugues, incl. "Das Wohltemperirte Klavier"; pf.-sonatas with instrs., incl. 6 famous sonatas for pf. and vln.; solo sonatas for vln. and 'cello; solos, trios, etc., for various combinations of instrs., concertos for 1 to 4 pfs., vln. and other instrs., concertos with orch. overtures and suites, and fantasias, toccatas, preludes, fugues, and chorale-arrangements for organ. The best biography of B. is by Spitta (Leipzig, 1873–80, 2 vols.; Eng. transl., London, 1884–85).

The Art of Johann Sebastian Bach.

BY SIR CHARLES HUBERT H. PARRY.

FOR more than a century before J. S. Bach came upon the scene, a succession of exceptionally gifted and earnest composers had been hard at work developing the methods and style of organ-music. Andrea Gabrieli and his nephew Giovanni Gabrieli and Claudio Merulo in Venice and Ian Pieterzoon Swelinck in Amsterdam had already done much to define its true sphere and style before the era of pure choral-music was ended. The early years of the seventeenth century saw Frescobaldi in the zenith of his fame, and his pupil Froberger following worthily in his footsteps; and throughout the century rapid progress in the accumulation of artistic methods and the development of true instrumental forms was made by such famous organists as Scheidt, Scheidemann, Pachelbel, Muffat, Reinken, and Buxtehude. And when it is considered that this branch of art already enjoyed an advantage over the new secular form of art which began to be cultivated at the end of the sixteenth century, through having its foundation securely laid in the old style of sacred choral-music, it seems natural that by the beginning of the eighteenth century it should appear to be the most mature of all the branches of art then cultivated. ¶These circumstances had profound and far-reaching influence upon J. S. Bach's musical character. In unravelling the secrets of art he was naturally attracted by that branch which possessed methods most fully developed for the formulation of the artistic impulses which were urging him to utterance. But the attraction was enhanced by the fact that organ-music had already become a kind of appanage of German composers, and had proved the one special form of art in which the fervent religion of Teutonic Protestants found the highest artistic expression. ¶ Hence it came about that, great as his powers were as a composer of choral-music and of suites and secular instrumental music, he was first and foremost a writer of organ-music, and inasmuch as organ-music was the only branch of art which was even approximately mature in his youthful and most impressionable days, the methods and diction of organ-music permeated and served as the foundation of his style in all branches of art which he attempted. In his earlier years he copied out and studied the works of great composers for the organ, and watched with critical appreciation the performances of great organists such as Reinken and Buxtehude. It is easy to trace in his own work the impression made on him by the interlinked suspensions of Frescobaldi and Froberger and by the vivacity of their fugue subjects ; by the treatment of chorale melodies with elaborate figuration of accompanying counterpoint in which Pachelbel excelled, by the copious picturesqueness of detail and the richness and emotional force of the harmonisation of Buxtehude. ¶ He brought all such specialities of earlier composers into the sphere of his own operations, and fused them into consistency by the force of his personality, and this assimilation became the foundation of his life's work. Most of his best organ-music, such as the sonatas, preludes, fugues, fantasias, canzonas and movements founded on chorales, and the great passacaglio in C minor, belong to comparatively early years, and his concentration on this branch of work was only relieved by the production of a few church cantatas, which showed that he had begun to consider other forms of art, in which in later years he attained such comprehensive mastery. After many years spent in several organistships, came the singular central episode of his life, when the appointment as Capellmeister to the Prince of Anhalt-Cöthen caused him to apply his mind almost exclusively for some years to secular instrumental music, mainly of a domestic kind. ¶ He sought for his models and types of procedure in the suites and ordres of the French composers, such as Couperin and Dieupart; and among the examples of the so-called French overture, which came into prominence in Lulli's operas, and had found such a brilliant imitator in Muffat. He studied also the instrumental compositions of the Italians, such as the concertos of Vivaldi, and the sonatas for stringed instruments of other Italian composers such as Albinoni and Legrenzi and even German imitations of such works like Reinken's "Hortus Musicus" ; and the outcome was a perfect outpouring of suites and partitas for the domestic keyed instruments, solo sonatas for violin, flute, viole de gamba and concertos for strings and various combinations of orchestral instruments ; and last and perhaps most notable of all, the collection of the twenty-four preludes and fugues in all keys, which he called—as a sort of manifesto of his belief in the system of equal temperament, which made all keys equally available for the purposes of the composer—"Das Wohltemperirte Clavier." Underlying a very large proportion of the works of various kinds, even dance tunes or movements for a solo instrument like the violin, fugue principles of procedure are predominant. The lightest dance tunes have a contrapuntal texture, and in the more serious and artistic examples it is so woven as to display beautiful combinations of ornament and melodic designs, ingenious sophistications of accent and subtleties of rhythm such as are only possible in the style of instrumental counterpoint which had sprung up in the development of the artistic requirements of organ fugues. ¶ In the famous collection of preludes and fugues, which he ultimately increased to forty-eight by the addition of a second collection, the style of instrumental counterpoint which had been developed for organ-music found a new but most congenial sphere. As the works are written for the domestic keyed instruments such as the tender expressive clavichord, or the picturesque harpsichord, they necessarily illustrated different artistic intentions from such as characterised genuine organ-music. Large scope of design and powerful effects of tune were obviously out of place, and more subtle treatment and greater intrinsic interest of detail were inevitable. ¶ Thus the fugue became much more compact than the organ-fugues, and the treatment of melodic line and expressive harmony more intimately human. The composer deals with more variety of style than in his organ-compositions, and many of the fugues may be taken as studies in human moods, such a playfulness and gaiety, pathos and melancholy, contemplation and fervour, merriment, dignity, and confidence. The adaptation of known principles of artistic procedure to a purpose, at that time so novel, was characteristic of Bach's attitude toward art; and this is as true of the preludes as of the fugues. The genealogy of the preludes may in some cases be traced back as far as the figurate preludes and little fantasias of such early types as were produced by the Elizabethan composers of virginal music and their contemporaries in other countries; though the form is enormously enhanced in J. S. Bach's hands by the skilful use of more definite and attractive figures, and a higher balance of organisation in each work. However, the forms of the preludes are extremely various. Some seem to be almost without precedent. As, for instance, the rapturous instrumental song with solo part and accompaniment all combined for one instrument. ¶ Among the preludes are also a few of the rare anticipations of complete sonatas of the harmonic kind, movements with distinct contrast of key in the first half, "working out," and modulation in the central part, and a recapitulation of the concrete material of the opening portion to conclude with. These occasional excursions out of what seemed to be his most congenial ground, are often thoroughly successful, but all the same his venture into the Italian manner and the Italian type of form prove rather that he grasped their artistic meaning fully than that he believed in their efficiency as vehicles for the highest aspirations of the composer. In the latter part of his life J. S. Bach dealt more in the grand forms which bring into play the methods and resources of many subordinate forms of art, both instrumental and vocal—such as the noble settings of the Passion, the masses—especially the great one in B minor—the work known as the "Christmas Oratorio" and the immense collection of church cantatas written for Sundays and festivals in the churches in Leipzig. In all of these branches of art he had precursors, and the types of various kinds had been explored. The Italian aria-form had been more or less transformed for German purposes before he gave it his own exceptional character and high artistic organisation. ¶ The peculiar form of expressive recitative, so earnest and deeply emotional, which became a characteristic feature of German music and prefigured much in its latest dramatic manifestations, had found worthy exposition. The treatment of chorales with rich harmonisation and elaborate part-writing and the development of the so-called motet choruses and choral fugues and even the peculiar contrapuntal treatment of the accompanying instruments had all found characteristic German exponents. Moreover, the form of Passion music had engaged the attention of composers for nearly two hundred years and had arrived at a considerable degree of development recently in the hands of Kuhnau, Keiser and Händel himself. But Bach's treatment of the scheme so immeasurably distanced all those who went before him that in later time his settings "according to St. Matthew" and "St. John" seem to stand almost alone in their pre-eminent glory. The same is the case with his church cantatas. ¶ The best work even of such composers as Buxtehude and John Christophe Bach seems singularly bald by the side of the copious variety and the inventive vigour of his work of this kind. True it is that in all such cases, and even in such mighty phenomena as the choruses in the B minor mass, he built upon the foundation his predecessors supplied and with methods they had helped to make available. ¶ His peculiar quality was to divine how the resources of art which he found in being could be applied to purposes so grand and comprehensive that it is difficult to realise that the methods were in truth the same as had been used by his forerunners. His artistic powers and insight were at such an immeasurably higher plane than those who preceded him that music seems at once to have stepped out of childishness into maturity at his bidding. ¶ In a sense his work is final and isolated. His work stands alone as the summing-up of a long period of preparation ; and the summing-up in his characteristically Teutonic direction seemed so complete that nothing remained to be said in the lines which he had illustrated. No composer followed in his footsteps. Those who understood him saw that they could not approach him ; and the world in general wanted a more easy-going and accommodating standard of art. So the succeeding generation of composers cultivated the more plausible Italian manner and the easily manipulated Italian form. ¶It was not for a century that his style and methods began to exert influence, and they came back to regenerate the world growing stale with the overpersistency of harmonic forms of the sonata order. ¶Indeed it was the rise of what was called the romantic movement which brought J. S. Bach back into the hearts of men, and made his ways of procedure suggestive of new developments. The foremost prophets of the Romantic movement, Schumann and Chopin, were his most ardent admirers. ¶To the Classicists the style of J. S. Bach had seemed somewhat archaic. But as men began to long for human expression in art and the greater elasticity of form which helps to closer characterisation of mood and feeling, the richness of possibilities and the greater pliancy of the forms Bach used became more and more apparent. At the same time the perfect adaptation of means to ends which his perfect self-containment manifest may serve as a corrective and a counterpoise in the turbulent times which follow the opening of the floodgates of dramatic passion. Those who cherish a constant love of the human art of John Sebastian Bach have still a guiding light which will not betray them.

(25) Karl Philipp Emanuel ("the Berlin" or "Hamburg Bach"), Weimar, March (8?) 14, 1714—Hamburg (Sept. ?) Dec. 14, 1788. Son of above (vide CHART OF BACHS). Beethoven (bāt'-hō-fĕn, not bā-tō'-vĕn), Ludwig van, b. Bonn-on-Rhine, Dec. 16 (baptised, Dec. 17, 1770) (Beethoven said Dec. 16, 1772), d. Vienna, March 26, 1827; grandson of Ludwig van B. (a native of Maestricht, bass singer, opera composer, and conductor to the Elector Clemens August, at Bonn), 2d child of Jn. van B. (a tenor singer in the Electoral choir), who had m. a widow, Magdelena Laym (née Keverich), a daughter of the chief cook at Ehrenbreitstein. B. studied at the public schools at Bonn till 14. From his fourth year, his father taught him music with great severity till 1779. He played the vln. well at 8; at 11 he knew Bach's "Wohltemperirte Clavier." Became pupil of Pfeiffer, a music-dir. and oboist; and Van der Eeden, court-organist, who predicted that he would be "a second Mozart"; 1785, studied vln. with Franz Ries; 1787, took a few lessons of Mozart; 1792, Haydn, passing through Bonn. praised a cantata of his (now lost). The Elector sent B. to Vienna, where he studied cpt. with Haydn, who seemed to neglect him, so that he secretly studied with Schenck; later he went to Albrechtsberger, who said "he has learnt nothing, and will never do anything in decent style"; he studied the vln. with Schuppanzigh and consulted Salieri and Aloys Förster; 1781, he is believed to have written a Funeral Cantata in memory of the English chargé d'affaires at Bonn, who had advanced money to the family; 1781 (1782?), his first publication, 3 pf.-sonatas; 1782, deputy organist; 1783, cembalist for rehearsals of the opera-orch., without compensation; 1784–92, asst. organist at an annual salary of 150 florins (about $63); from 1788 also 2d viola of the theatre orch. Visited Vienna, 1787, and made a sensation by extemporising, Mozart exclaiming "He will make a noise in the world some day." In July his tender-hearted mother died of consumption; his father lost his voice and became a sot. B.'s only home was in the family of the widow von Breuning, to whose daughter and son he gave lessons. Here he acquired his passion for English literature. He now made acquaintance of young Count Waldstein, who became his life-long patron, and in 1792 sent him to Vienna, where he henceforward lived. The decade 1782–92 does not show much fertility in composition: half a dozen songs, a rondo, a minuet, and 3 preludes for pf., 3 pf.-quartets, a pf.-trio; a string-trio, op. 3; 4 sets of pf. variations; a rondino for wind; the "Ritter Ballet" with orch. (pub. 1872); "The Bagatelles," op. 33; 2 vln.-rondos, op. 51; the "Serenade Trio" op. 8; the lost cantata, a lost trio for pf., flute, and bassoon, and an Allegro and Minuet for 2 flutes. 1792, he was sent to Vienna by the Elector, who paid him his salary for 2 years; he had growing royalties from his comps., also 600 florins annually from Prince Lichnowsky, his warmest admirer. March 29, 1795, he played his C major pf.-concerto in the Burg-theater, his first public appearance; 1796, he played before King Fr. Wm. II.; 1798, at Prague, he gave 2 sensational concerts and met two piano-virtuosi: Steibelt, who challenged B. to extemporise and was sadly worsted, and Wölffl, who became his friend. 1800 ends what is called (after von Lenz's book "B. et ses trois styles") his "first period," of composition; the "second period," extending to 1815; the "third" to 1827. This first period includes op. 1–18, pf. and string-trios, string-quartets, 9 pf.-sonatas, 7 variations on "God Save the Queen," and 5 on "Rule Britannia," the aria "Ah perfido," etc. Now a severe and early venereal trouble affected his liver, and began to ruin his hearing, which by 1822 was entirely gone. Though he had always been brusque (especially with the aristocracy, among whom he had an extraordinarily long list of friendships and love-affairs), his former generosity and geniality speedily developed into atrocious suspiciousness and violence toward his best friends. The wild life of a nephew whom he supported, brought him great bitterness. Until the beginning of the "third period," however, he had large stores of joy in life, open-air Nature, and the details of his compositions, which were worked up with utmost care from "sketch-books," always carried with him, and still extant as a unique example of genius at work. In the arbitrary but somewhat convenient von Lenz classification, the 2d period includes the symphonies III — VIII; the opera "Fidelio"; the music to "Egmont"; the ballet "Prometheus"; the Mass in C, op. 86; the oratorio "Christus am Oelberg" (1803); the "Coriolanus" overture; 2 pf.-concertos; 1 vln.-concerto; 3 quartets; 4 pf.-trios, and 14 pf.-sonatas (among them op. 27, op. 28, 31, No. 2, 53, 57, and 81); the "Liederkreis," etc. The "third period" incl. the five pf. sonatas, op. 101, 111; the "Missa solennis," the Ninth Symphony, the overture "Ruins of Athens"; the overtures op. 115, 124; the grand fugue for string-quartet, and the string-quartets op. 127, 130, 131, 132, 135 (F). "Fidelio," first named "Leonore," was prod. Nov. 20, 1805, just a week after the French army entered Vienna. It was withdrawn after three consecutive performances; revised and prod. March 29, 1806, but withdrawn by B. after two performances. Once more revised, it was revived in 1814, very successfully; the present overture is the result of various versions known as the Leonore overtures 1, 2, and 3. The "Eroica" symphony (No. 3) was called "Sinfonia grande Napoleon Bonaparte" in honour of his advocacy of "liberty, equality, and fraternity." When Napoleon proclaimed himself emperor, B. tore up the title-page in wrath and changed the name to "Sinfonia eroica composta per festeggiare il sovvenire d'un gran uomo" (Heroic symphony, composed to celebrate the memory of a great man). In the Ninth Symphony, a choral Finale is used as the final addition to the orchestral climax of ecstasy (the words from Schiller's "Hymn to Joy"). In 1809 Jerome Bonaparte invited B. to become conductor at Cassel with a salary of 600 ducats (about $1,500); but his Viennese patrons Archduke Rudolf, and the Princes Lobkowitz and Kinsky, settled on him an annuity of 4,000 florins ($2,000). Dec., 1826, a violent cold resulted in pneumonia; dropsy followed, B. saying to the doctors who tapped him three times and drew out the water, "Better from my belly than from my pen." After an illness of 3 months he took the Roman Catholic sacraments, a two-days' agony of semi-consciousness followed and he died, just after shaking his clenched fist in the air, during a terrific thunderstorm, the evening of March 26, 1827. 20,000 persons attended his funeral.

His complete works comprise 138 opus-numbers, and about 70 unnumbered comp. The following are those published. Beethoven: A Study of Influences.

BY H. E. KREHBIEL.

IN one respect Beethoven stands alone in the history of music. The influence of all his fellows, from Bach to Wagner and Brahms, can be determined in matter as well as manner, and set down in plain terms; his full significance is yet to be grounded. Beethoven was a gigantic reservoir into which a hundred proud streams poured their waters; he is a mighty lake out of which a thousand streams have flowed through all the territories which the musical art has peopled, and from which torrents are still pouring to irrigate lands that are still terrae incognitae. ¶ In some respects his genius is an enigma. Whence came his profound knowledge of the musical art as it existed before him? He was not precocious as Mozart was. He was a diligent pupil, but not an orderly one. Except in childhood he was unruly, and impatient of discipline. The sternness and cruelty of a dissipated father made his earliest studies a suffering and an oppression. In later years he performed his duties toward Albrechtsberger, but refused to yield himself to that teacher's domination as he had already refused to bow to the authority of Haydn—an authority which he felt was too carelessly exercised. Yet the world knows how conscious he was of the potency of the learned forms into which Albrechtsberger strove to induct him, and the charm of romantic expression exemplified in Haydn. ¶ He refused to acknowledge these men as his teachers, while they returned the compliment by refusing to own him as their pupil. Haydn condemned his first trios; Albrechtsberger advised his other pupils to have nothing to do with him because, as he said, "he had never learned anything, and would never do anything in decent style." Yet Beethoven was proud of his ability in the department of study for which he had gone to this teacher of counterpoint. In his old age he considered Cherubini the greatest of his living contemporaries, and Händel the greatest of the great dead. Note the significance: both were masters in the severe forms. Taking no account of the canons, fugues, and variations which occur incidentally in his symphonies, sonatas, and quartets, we find that Beethoven left an extraordinarily large number of compositions in these forms behind him—no less than thirty-five canons, five independent fugues and thirty-two sets of variations for different instruments. Could there be a more convincing demonstration of his devotion to the scientific side of his art? ¶ But he was no more and no less an iconoclast in these forms than in the romantic. Proof of another kind I found in an anecdote recorded in Mr. Thayer's note-book as related to him by the nephew of the observer of the incident. ¶ In 1809 Wilhelm Rust sat in a coffee-house in Vienna with Beethoven. A French officer happening to pass, Beethoven doubled up his fist and exclaimed: "If I were a general and knew as much about strategy as I know about counterpoint, being a composer—I'd cut out some work for you fellows." ¶ The great difference between him and his teachers was one of conception touching the uses to which counterpoint and fugue should be put. To Albrechtsberger the sciences existed for their own sake; for Beethoven they existed only as a medium of expression. There was nothing sacrosanct about them. As he himself said, it was a good thing to learn the rules in order afterward to know what was contrary to them, and, he might have added, also to know how to violate them when musical expression could thereby be promoted. ¶ Yet Beethoven's greatest significance as an influence is not as a destroyer of forms and contemner of rules, as so many would have us believe who justify all manner of lawlessness to-day and quote Beethoven as an excuse; but as a widener of forms and a creator of rules for the development of expression, which is and must ever remain the aim of musical art. He was the prototype of Wagner's Hans Sachs, who wished due respect paid to the laws of the poet's craft so that poetical creation might go on within the lines of beauty, but who also wished spontaneous creative impulse to have its rights. Where he differed from the pedants who sought to stem the original flow of his utterance, was in realising better than they, that art-works are the source of rules quite as much as their outcome. He felt, with Faust, that "In the beginning was the Deed," neither the "Word," nor the "Thought," nor the "Power," but the "Deed," ; from that can be deduced the other potencies. ¶ "Becthoven was not only the embodiment of all that was before him, but also of that which was yet to come. In his works music returned to its original purpose with its power raised a hundred-fold." I have said this before and elsewhere, but as I cannot say it better and want it said again, I say it again, and here. It is easy rhetoric to descant upon the tremendous strides which music has made in the last half century, the transformation of forms, the augmentation of expressive potencies (rhythmic, melodic, harmonic, instrumental), the widening of the horizon of the things proper to musical expression and much else ; but he has not yet learned his Beethoven who does not see all that has yet appeared to be essential in these things distinctly foreshadowed in the music of the master who, in a larger, more comprehensive, more luminous sense than was dreamed of before or since, was priest, king, hero, and seer. A priest unceasing in his offerings in the Temple Beautiful ! A king whose dominion is over the despotic rulers in man's emotional nature ! A hero who knew his mission and subordinated to it himself, his longings, his loves, his very life ! A seer, as Ruskin says of Imagination, "in the prophetic sense, calling the things that are not as though they were, and forever delighting to dwell on that which is not tangibly present." ¶Like Faust he ever heard the dread words ringing in his ears : "Entbehren sollst du, sollst entbehren !" His art asked his all ; he knew it and gave his all ; and then the Gottbeit which he was wont to invoke, hushed the noises of the material world that he might the better hear the whisperings of the spirit pervading it ; and raised a barrier between him and mankind to force him to be a witness and historian of the struggle between the human and the divine reflected in his own soul. All the misanthropy which filled his later years could not shake his devotion to an ideal which had sprung from truest artistic appreciation and been nurtured by enforced introspection. This is the key to Beethoven's music. ¶ But it will not serve the purposes of this study merely to generalise. If the contention set forth is to be maintained, there must be some martialling of evidence. Confining ourselves to the cyclical form, the symphony, we note that Beethoven introduced a wider range and a freer use of keys than were employed by his models, Haydn and Mozart ; abolished much of what sounds like mere remplissage in the connecting portions between themes, substituting therefor phrases developed out of the themes themselves; introduced original episodic matter; extended the free fantasia and coda; developed the old minuet into the scherzo, which could better carry on the psychological story which he wished to tell in the four chapters of his instrumental poem; infused unity into his works, not only by bringing the spiritual bonds between the movements more clearly before our percipience, but also by making the material bonds obvious and incontrovertible. This last achievement has its simplest as well as most eloquent illustrations in the community of rhythms between the first, third, and last movements of the Fifth Symphony, and all the movements of the Seventh; the recurrence of themes in different movements of the Fifth and Ninth; the family likenesses, physiognomical resemblances, between the principal melodies of the Ninth; finally the programmatic conceit back of the Sixth. ¶ The acceptance and continuation of the hints contained in these innovations is published in the abolition of pauses between the movements in the "Scotch" symphony of Mendelssohn, the adoption of the same device by Schumann, together with community of theme in the symphony in D minor, the invention of "l'idée fixe" by Berlioz for his "Symphonie Fantastique" and the successive recapitulation of material already used in the second, third, and fourth movements in the symphony, "From the New World," by Dvôrák. ¶ It has not been necessary to go far afield for examples; the proofs are surely convincing and come down to our own day. Moreover we find an illustration of the same principle, coupled with an exposition of Beethoven's system of thematic, instead of melodic, development—another form of variation, in brief—in all the symphonic poems of Liszt and his imitators down to Richard Strauss. ¶ Beethoven's license may have degenerated into lawlessness, but he pointed a way that has been followed in all the particulars enumerated, and also broke down the barriers between voices and instruments in the symphonic forms to the delight of many successors. His revolutionary proceeding in the Ninth symphony found imitation by Mendelssohn in his "Hymn of Praise," by Berlioz in his "Romeo and Juliet," by Liszt in his "Faust" and "Dante" symphonies, by Nicodé in "Das Meer," and by Mahler in his symphony with contralto solo.

Berlioz (bār-lĭ-ōs not bār-lĭ-ō), Hector (Louis), Côte-Saint-André, near Grenoble, France, Dec. 11, 1803—Paris, March 9, 1869; "Father of modern orchestration"; conductor, critic, writer of verse and electric prose; sent to Paris to study medicine, he accepted disinheritance and took up music, though he could never play any instr. save the guitar and flageolet; while pupil at the Cons., he earned a bare living; joined the chorus of the Gymnase Dramatique; left the Cons. in disgust with Reicha's formalism, and plunged with characteristic energy—or rather fury—into the cause of romanticism; 1825, an orchestral mass given at St. Roch brought the ridicule he usually had in France where he was little thought of as a composer though admired as a writer; 1828 saw the production of two overtures "Waverley" and "Les Francs-Juges," and a Symphonie fantastique, "Épisode de la vie d'un artiste"; 1829, his "Concerts des Sylphes," publicly produced at 26, show him an ardent believer in programme-music (vide D. D.) and a marvellous virtuoso in instrumentation. He re-entered the Cons. under Lesueur, in spite of Cherubini, who fought his admission; 1830, he took the Prix de Rome with a cantata, "Sardanapale"; after 18 months in Italy he returned to Paris and took up journalism with marked success. His symphony "Harold en Italie" (1834), the "Messe des Morts" (1837), the dram. symphony "Roméo et Juliette," with vocal soli and chorus (1839), and the overture "Carnéval romain," were well received, but the 2-act opera semi-seria "Benvenuto Cellini" failed both in Paris and in London, 1838. In 1839 he was made Conservator of the Cons.; librarian, 1852, but was never made professor as he desired. Concert tours through Germany and Russia, 1843–47, were very successful and are described in his book "Voyage musical." London (1852) he cond. the "New Philh. Concerts"; prod. comic opera "Béatrice et Bénédict" (1862, Baden-Baden); 1865, member of the Académie, and decorated with cross of Legion of Honour. He m. Henrietta Smithson, an Irish actress who made a sensation in Paris in Shakespearian rôles, but later was hissed off, and became a peevish invalid. His opera, "Les Troyens à Carthage" (1863) was a failure. His son Louis died 1867. "Les Troyens," in two parts; La Prise de Troie, 3 acts, and Les Troyens à Carthage, in 5 acts was given complete for the first time, at Carlsruhe, 1897. His most succ. work was his "oratorio," "La Damnation de Faust" (1846). His "Traité d'instrumentation" is a classic in orchestration, though its then sensational modernity is lost. B. strangely despised Wagner, who, however, confessed his large indebtedness to B. Other books are "Soirées d'orchestre" (1853), "Grotesques de la musique" (1859), "A travers chants" (1862), and an autobiography, "Mémoires," from 1803–65. In original verse are the text to the sacred trilogy "L'Enfance du Christ" (Part I., Le songe d'Hérode; II., La fuite en Égypte; III., L'Arrivée à Saïs); and his operas "Les Troyens" and "Béatrice et Bénédict." He composed also a "Te Deum" for 3 choirs, orch. and org.; a "Grande symphonie funèbre et triomphale" for full military band, with strings and chorus ad lib.; overture to "Le Corsaire"; "Le Cinq Mai," for chorus and orch. (on the anniversary of Napoleon's death), etc.

Berlioz.

By Ernest Newman.

BERLIOZ'S early influences were as much literary as musical. His reading was mainly romantic; his musical gods were Beethoven, Weber, and Gluck, whose orchestral works influenced him most. He knew little of Beethoven's piano writings, and did not like Bach. ¶ Into the intellectual world of the Beethoven symphony and the operas of Gluck and Weber he breathed the newer, more nervous life of the French Romanticists. Colour and sensation became as important as form and the pure idea. ¶ These influences and his literary instincts led him to graft the programme form on the older symphony. All his music aims at something concrete. Instead of the abstract world of the classical symphonists he gives us definite emotions, or paints definite scenes. Colour, passion, and veracity were the prime needs; form had to follow their guidance. Hence both his successes and his failures. His virtue is truth and vivacity of expression; his defect the pursuit of these to the detriment of the musical interest. ¶ All modern programmists have built upon him—Liszt, Richard Strauss, and Tschaikowsky. Wagner felt his influence, though he belittled it. ¶ His own words, "I have taken up music where Beethoven left it," indicate his position. He is the real beginner of that interpenetration of music and the poetic idea which has transformed modern art.

Bizet (bē-zā), G. (Alex. César Léopold), Paris, Oct. 25, 1838—Bougival, June 3, 1875; brilliant pianist and distinguished composer. At 9, pupil at Paris Cons. of Marmontel (pf.), Benoist (org.), Zimmerman (harm.), and Halévy (whose opera "Noë" he finished, and whose daughter Geneviève he m.); 1857, took Offenbach 1st prize for an opera buffa, "Le Docteur Miracle," prod. at Bouffes Parisiens, 1863; also won the Grand Prix de Rome. In place of the Mass prescribed he sent from Rome a 2-act Ital. opera buffa "Don Procopio"; 2 movements of a symphony, "La Chasse D Ossian," an overture; and "La Guzla de l'Émir," a comic opera. 1836, his grand opera "Les Pêcheurs de Perles," was prod. Paris (Th. Lyrique); it failed, as did "La Jolie Fille de Perth" (1867), and the 1-act "Djamileh" (1872). In all his music B. revealed a strong leaning toward Wagner, then so unpopular in France; but 1872, his overture "Patrie," the 2 symphonic movements, and incidental music to Daudet's L'Arlésienne, brought him success; and "Carmen" (Opéra-Com., March 3, 1875) brought him a fame, which he hardly knew, as he died three months later of heart disease; he composed also 2 operas, "Numa" (1871) and "Ivan le Terrible"; 150 pf.-pcs., songs, etc.; collaborated with Délibes, Jonah and Legouix in opera "Malbrough, s'en va-t-en-guerre." Biog. by Pigot, 1886.

Bizet.

By Edward E. Ziegler.

As Bizet's last work was his best, it is logical to argue that his untimely death has cheated us of compositions more valuable than "Carmen;" but beyond mere conjecture such an estimate can have no value and his rank among opera-composers must be determined by Carmen. That the stage was his real field, is proven clearly by the persistency with which he composed for it, and a study of his different efforts proves the wisdom of his choice, for there are no masterpieces among his songs, or among his piano-compositions, and even his most successful orchestral number is the "First Suite" compiled for his incidental music to Daudet's "L'Arlésienne." ¶ His early letters confess his musical creed: Mozart and Beethoven, Rossini and Meyerbeer; this is catholic, to say the least, but later he acknowledged his preference for the Germans in general and Beethoven as the master of all. But Bizet was a stranger to the larger forms in music—for two years he toiled intermittingly at a symphony and produced only the "Roman Suite" as a result—and his work shows more tendency to follow Gounod's teaching than that of his high ideals. He was bitterly accused of being a follower of Wagner; Paris, knowing so lamentably little of Wagner's music, then condemned that of Bizet's, which it did not like or could not understand, by labelling it "Wagnerian," and thus put it hopelessly beyond the possibility of discussion. As a matter of fact there is no trace of Wagner to be found in Bizet's music, and the only resemblance between the two is that both were innovators who presented their theories about dramatic art in practical forms, proving them by their operas. ¶Bizet realised the sorry state of the French operatic stage, but contented himself with an effort at reforming the minor stage of the Opéra-Comique, and it is doubtless due in a great measure to the precedent of "Carmen" that to-day the Opéra-Comique is on a higher artistic plane than the Opéra. ¶A direct musical influence it would be difficult to trace to Bizet. As an orchestral colourist he had been outdone and outdared by even his contemporaries; nor did he bequeath to us a new art-form. But because he demanded a more sincere libretto than any of those with which that maker of marionette opera-books, Scribe, had conjured all Paris, and because in his music he did not fear contact with throbbing life, he commands our respect. His work shows a musical sincerity foreign to French composers generally, and he deserved a better fate than a sequence of failures ending with an early death.

Boïeldieu (bō-ĕld-yŭ'), (1) Fran. Adrien, Rouen, Dec. 16 (not 15), 1775—Jarcy, near Grosbois, Oct. 8, 1834; son of secretary of Archp. Larochefoucauld and a milliner; apprenticed to the intemperate, brutal cathedral organist Broche, he ran away, at 12, and walked to Paris, but was brought back. He is not known to have had other teaching. At 18, he prod. succ. "La fille coupable" (Rouen, 1793); 1795, "Rosalie et Myrza," text of both by his father. Discouraged in a planned Cons. at Rouen, he again walked to Paris, and subsisted as teacher and piano-tuner to Erard. The tenor Garat sang his still pop. songs, in public, and won him a publisher. 1796, "La Dot de Suzette," in one act, was prod. with succ. (Opéra-Com.); 1797, "La famille Suisse" (ran 30 nights at the Th. Feydeau); 1798, he pub. sonatas, and a pf.-concerto, etc.; 1800, prof. of piano, Paris Cons. "Zoraime et Zulnare" (1798), "Beniowski," and "Le Calife de Bagdad" (1800) were succ. and ended his first period, one of light gracefulness. He now studied cpt. seriously, probably with Cherubini, who had criticised him. After 3 years' silence, he reappeared with enlarged powers, succ. in "Ma Tante Aurore" (Th. Feydeau, 1803). In 1802 he m. Clotilde Mafleuroy, a ballet-dancer; 1803, he went to St. Petersburg, partially perhaps (but not surely) because of domestic unhappiness, and became cond. of the Imperial Opera, writing by contract 3 operas annually, and a number of marches. He returned to Paris, 1811; had immense succ., particularly with "Jean de Paris," 1812; 1817 prof. of comp. at the Cons. and member of Institut; 1821, Chévalier of the Legion of Honour; 1818, "Le Petit Chaperon rouge" was succ., followed, after 7 years' silence, by "La Dame Blanche," his masterpiece. His last opera, "Les Deux Nuits" (1829), failed. His wife d. 1825, and 1827 he m. Mlle. Phillis, a singer, who was a devoted wife. The poverty of their last years was relieved by Thiers, minister of Louis Philippe, who made him an annuity of 6,000 francs. He died at his country-home, of pulmonary trouble. B.'s work has great vivacity and vitality combined with musical sweetness, and rhythm without jingle. His large gifts in the construction of ensembles are seen in the septet and chorus at the end of the 2d act of "La Dame Blanche," which up to 1875 had been performed 1340 times at the same theatre; its libretto is a combination of 2 of Scott's novels "The Monastery" and "Guy Mannering." He collaborated with Cherubini in "La Prisonnière" (1799); with Méhul, Kreutzer, and others, in "Le Baiser et la Quittance" (1802); with Cherubini, Catel, and Niccolò Isouard, in "Bayard à Mézières"; with Kreutzer in "Henri IV. en Voyage" (1814); with Mme. Gail, in Angela (1814); with Hérold in "Charles de France"; with Cherubini, Berton, and others, in "La Cour des Fées" (1821) and "Pharamond"; with Auber, in "Les Trois Genres"; with Berton, and others, in "La Marquise de Brinvilliers." Biog. by A. His grandson, (3) François, is the present proprietor. (4) Xavier, Montpellier, 1811—Marseilles, 1893; second son of above; composer.

Boïto (bō-ē′-tō), Arrigo, b. Padua, Feb. 24, 1842; poet, soldier, novelist, editor, essayist, librettist, and composer; son of an Italian painter and a Polish woman. Pupil, 1853–62, of Milan Cons., almost dismissed for mus. incompetence (cf. VERDI); composed 2 cantatas, "Il 4 di Giugno" (1860), and "Le Sorelle d'Italia" (1862), in collab. with Faccio; they met with such great succ. that the Govt. gave F. and B. funds for 2 years in Paris and Germany. B. had already taken up Goethe's "Faust," long before Gounod, at the suggestion of his bro. Camillo, an eminent architect. B. brought back from Germany a passion for Beethoven, then little heeded in Italy. 1867 at Paris, as journalist; then Poland, where he sketched out text and music of "Mefistofeles," which was prod. at Milan, 1868 (La Scala), after 52 rehearsals, and with great hopes; but it was then in a rather shapeless state, and Gounod's "Faust" having meanwhile been prod. at Milan with succ., B.'s work was hissed by some, and having provoked riots and duels was withdrawn by order of the police. It was remodelled with more attention to stage requirements and prod. with great succ. at Bologna, Oct. 4, 1875. An earlier opera, "Ero e Leandro," was never prod., B. lending his own libretto to Bottesini, and later to Mancinelli. Other libretti of his are, Ponchielli's "Gioconda," Verdi's "Otello" and "Falstaff," Faccio's "Amleto" and Coronaro's "Un Tramonto." Two operas diligently prepared but still refused to the public are "Nerone" and "Orestiade." He has translated 2 of Wagner's libretti into Italian, and writes often under the pseud. "Tobios Gorria." The King made him "Cavaliere," and "Commendatore"; 1892, Inspector-Gen. of Technical Instruction in the Italian Cons. and Lyceums; 1895 Chevalier of the Legion of Honour. He lives in Milan.

Brahms (bräms), Jns., Hamburg, May 7, 1833—Vienna, April 3, 1897; son and pupil of a double-bass player in the Hamburg City Theatre, later studied with Marxsen of Altona; début Hamburg, at 14, playing his own variations on a folk-song; 1853, toured with Remenyi. Joachim heard him and sent him to Schumann, at Düsseldorf. Schumann, with characteristic openness of mind and enthusiasm, pub. an article in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, greeting B. as the new Messiah of music, a welcome that was a mixture of blessing and bane, embarrassing the young Brahms with a mission that was a white elephant on his hands; for he forsook the romanticism which Schumann, and later Liszt expected of him, and took up a determined classicism in the matter of form, in which, however, he made many modifications to suit his enormous intellectuality and technical resource. This early welcome also gave him over to be bandied between believers like Hanslick who were frantic to find an opponent to the progress of Wagner, and sceptics who would not have him praised for any quality. Schumann's advocacy did not save B.'s publication and concert performance of his 3 pf.-sonatas and 3 books of songs from failure. After serving for a time as cond. to the Prince of Lippe-Detmold, he retired for study to Hamburg, 1858–62. 1862 Vienna; 1863–64 cond. of the Singakademie there; 1864–69 Hamburg, Zurich, Baden-Baden, etc., and made tours with Stockhausen; 1869, Vienna, which was afterward his head-quarters. In 1871–74, cond. "Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde." In 1877 Cambridge University offered him the degree of Mus. Doc., which offer he ignored, accepting, 1881, Dr. phil. from Breslau and writing in acknowledgment the "Akademische Festouvertüre;" 1886, a knight of the Prussian Ordre pour le Mérite, with voting privilege, and a member of the Berlin Acad. of Arts. 1889 presented with the freedom of Hamburg. His "German Requiem," op. 45 (the first 3 choruses given in Vienna, 1867), was given complete in the Bremen cathedral, April, 1868, and established him on a peak where he has since remained while the storms of debate rage below him. He wrote in almost every form but opera (he had considered that at one time) but admitted he "knew nothing about the theatre." He valued Wagner's scores, and owned several Wagner autographs; Wagner, however, said "Brahms is a composer whose importance lies in not wishing to create any striking effect." His first symphony, on which he had spent 10 years, made a sensation when prod. 1876. His vln.-concerto when first shown to Joachim was so impossible to the vln. that J. laughed at it till tears poured down his cheeks; he is said to have materially assisted in its revision. Brahms was a brilliant pianist in his youth; in his 20th year, at a concert with Remenyi, the piano was discovered to be a semitone below concert-pitch; B., playing without notes, transposed the accompaniment to Beethoven's "Kreutzer" sonata, a semitone higher throughout. [Beethoven similarly transposed his own concerto in C to C♯ at a rehearsal.] Biog. by H. Deiters (Leipzig, 1880, Part II., 1898, in Engl., London, 1888); B. Vogel (Leipzig); Widmann (Berlin, 1898); A. Dietrich (Leipzig, 1898).

Johannes Brahms.

BY JAMES HUNEKER.

SCHUMANN, in his much-discussed article "New Paths," called Brahms the true successor to Beethoven. His prediction was verified. To-day Johannes Brahms stands for the ultra-classic in symphonic music, though singularly enough he is really a hardy romanticist, who has widened and deepened the symphonic form. The career of Brahms compared to Wagner's was a quiet, scholarly, uneventful one. A severe student and self-critic, he made his way slowly, for the Wagner furor was at hand, and the modest writer of chamber-music, of songs and symphonies, was completely eclipsed by the glory of his so-called rival. ¶It was Von Bülow's audacious epigram, "The three B's,—Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms," that drew down upon the head of the innocent composer the ire of the Wagner camp. As a matter of record Brahms never posed as an opponent, much less as a rival of the Bayreuth hero; indeed he was an admirer, and knew his scores as only he could know a score—absolutely. But he was not in the least affected by Wagner—how could he be, working as he did in such a totally different genre? This genre, however, was not the out-worked vein it was so contemptuously christened by the new men. To-day Brahms is a modern among the moderns—indeed his has also been called the music of the future. ¶To old forms like the symphony, to the smaller forms, he has brought an abounding invention, a vitality in execution, and a musical intellect the most profound since Beethoven's. To the complex symphonic structure of Beethoven he had superadded a polyphony almost Bachian in its mastery of intricate voicing and the weaving of a marvellous contrapuntal web. The dignity of his themes, the depth and sweetness of his cantitena, the massiveness of his musical architecture—he is in music the born builder—combined with a fecund fantasy, a grim but elastic humour, and no little susceptibility, mark Brahms as one of the elect, a master among masters. His control of the orchestra is absolute in its eloquence, though he is no painter, no seeker after the unique word, the only colour. ¶He has been reproached for a colour monotone by those critics who are easily moved by brilliant and showy externals. But that reproach falls to earth when the adaptability of the garb to the musical idea is discovered. Brahms never erred in this matter; his taste was impeccable. ¶He had a message and he delivered it in tones that befitted its weight, its importance. He is a symphonist primarily; his themes as if carven from granite are symphonic and not dramatic themes, and in his development of them he is second only to Beethoven. A philosopher, he views his subject from every possible side, and the result is an edifice of tone comparable to a Gothic Cathedral. In his songs he is the sweet-voiced, the tender German lyrist, deep in feeling, capricious, noble and moving as Schumann or Schubert. He will rank with these song writers. In chamber-music, in the amiable conjunction of piano and strings, trios, quartettes, quintettes, horn-trio and two clarinet-quintettes, Brahms is supreme. He has written a sterling violin-concerto dedicated to Joachim and played first by him. His two piano-concertos in D minor and B flat major, introduced here by Rafael Joseffy, are masterpieces; though pianists complain of the dearth of display passages, they are sincere in feeling and perfect concertos in the balance of the solo instrument with the orchestra. ¶The Brahms solo piano-music is a new and independent literature. He wrote three sonatas; of these the last is the most popular; its andante and scherzo are beautiful specimens of piano-writing.

The solo scherzo in E flat minor, opus 4, was a great favourite with Liszt, who saw in it trace of Chopin. The little pieces written during the closing years of the composer's life are exquisite and poetic gems, conceived by a poet, executed with all the dainty cunning of a lapidary. These miniatures are Brahms in his most genial mood. The forger of thunderbolts was now resting and plotting lovely little gardens of fragrant flowers. ¶ His extraordinary technical invention is nowhere better evidenced than in his Paganini variations for the piano, the Ultima Thule of pianists. These variations are paralleled in his St. Anthony variations for orchestra, a noble disapproval of the assertion that Brahms had no intimate feeling for the orchestra. His German Requiem written in 1868 is tremendous in its scope and elemental power. It is the apotheosis of a nation's grief. ¶ He was not uniformly successful—little wonder, for his published works number 130. But if this Titian stumbled, was intermittent in his inspiration, the main body of his work stands out marmoreal, of overwhelming grandeur, truly German, and withal, sounding the big note as no one has sounded it in music since Beethoven.

Chéri (shā-rē), Victor (rightly Cizos), Auxerre, 1830—suicide, Paris, 1882; cond. and dram. composer.

Cherubini (kā-roo-bē'-nē) (M.) Luigi (Carlo Zenobio Salvatore), Florence, Sept. 14, 1760—Paris, March 15, 1842; one of the greatest masters of counterpoint; pupil of his father, (cembalist, at the Pergola Th.), then of B. and A. Felici, Bizarri and Castrucci; 1779 sent (under patronage of the future Emperor Leopold III.) to Milan, to study cpt. with Sarti; at 13, had c. a mass and an intermezzo for a society theatre; at 15, another intermezzo; 1780, "Quinto Fabio" was prod. without succ. though with better results in a revised version (1783); he had succ. with 6 other operas, and was in 1784 invited to London, where he prod. an opera buffa, with some success, and another with none; he was court composer for one year; 1788 he prod. "Ifigenia in Aulide" at Turin; and then lived in Paris, where his French opera "Démophon" (Grand Opéra, 1788) failed; he then cond. at a small opera house, until 1792. His opera "Lodoiska," 1791, showed a new style of emotional strength, powerful ensemble, and novel orchestral colour that founded a school of imitators. 7 other operas and a ballet followed, incl. his masterpiece (1800), "Les deux journées" (in Germany called "Der Wasserträger"; in England, "The Water-carrier"). 1795 he had been made one of the inspectors of the new Cons., Paris, but was not liked by Napoleon, whose musical opinion he had not flattered. On invitation he wrote for Vienna "Faniska," a great succ. (1806); an invitation to write a mass for the Prince of Chimay, resulted in the famous 3-part mass in F. He wrote 4 more operas, but found church-music more satisfactory. 1815, visited London; wrote a symphony, an overture, and a Hymn to Spring, for the Philh. Soc. After many vicissitudes he became in 1816 prof. of comp. at the Cons., Paris, and 1821–41 dir. His enormous list of works includes 15 Italian and 14 French operas, 17 cantatas, 11 solemn masses, 2 requiems, 1 oratorio; 1 symphony, 1 overture; 6 string quartets; 6 pf.-sonatas, and a mass of smaller works, mus. for pf., etc. The best biog. is by Bellasis (London, 1874).

Chevé (shŭ-vā), Emile Jos. Maurice, Douarnenez, Finistere, 1804—1864; a physician; wrote pamphlets attacking the methods at the Paris Cons. His wife (née Manine, Paris) collaborated with him.

Chevillard (shŭ-vē-yăr), Camille, b. Paris, Oct., 1859; pupil of G. Mathias; took 2d pf. prize at Cons.; till 1897, asst.-cond. of the Lamoureux Concerts; then cond.; c. a symph. ballade, "Le chêne et le roseau"; a symph. poem, a symph. fantasie, etc.

Chiabran (shä-brăn) (or Chabran or Chiabrano), Fran., b. Piedmont, ca. 1723; violinist and composer.

Chiaromonte (kē-är-ō-môn′-tĕ), b. Castrogfovanni, Sicily, 1809—Brussels, 1886; tenor; prof. of singing and dram. composer.

Chic (shēk), Léon, b. April 28, 1819; son and pupil of army musician, director of marine and military bands; c. various pieces.

Chick′ering & Sons, American firm of pf.-makers, est. 1823, by (1) Jonas Chickering (New Ipswich, N. H., 1798—Boston, 1853); his son (2) Col. Thos. E. C. (Boston, 1824—1871), was named Chev. of the Legion of Honour, and took first pf.-prize at the Paris Exposition, 1867; he was in turn succeeded by his sons, the present firm.

Chilcot (chĭl′-kôt), Thos., organist, Bath, 1733, till end of century.

Child, Wm., Bristol, 1606—Windsor, 1697; organist.

Chilesotti (kē-lā-sôt′-tē), Oscare, b. Bassano, Italy, July 12, 1848; law graduate Padua Univ.; flutist and 'cellist; self-taught in harm.; lives in Milan; wrote important historical works.

Chimenti (kē-mĕn′-tē), Margarita (called la Dragherina), sang in London, 1737.

Chipp, Edm. Thos. (Mus. Doc.), London, 1823—Nice, 1886; organist.

Chladni (khlät′-nē), Ernst Florens Fr., Wittenberg, Nov. 30, 1756—Breslau, April 3, 1827; prof. of law and investigator in physics and acoustics; discovered the sound-figures which sand assumes on a vibrating plate, and which bear his name; inv. the euphonium and clavicylinder (v. D.D.).

Chollet (shôl-lā), J. B. M., b. Paris, May, 1798; violinist and singer in opera.

Chopin (shô-păn) (François) Frédéric, Zelazowa Wola (Jeliasovaya Volia), near Warsaw, March 1, 1809 (Natalie Janotha declares it to be Feb. 22, 1810)—Paris, Oct. 17, 1849; eminent composer for the piano; son of Nicholas C. (a native of Nancy, France, who was at first bookkeeper in a cigar factory, then teacher in the Warsaw Gymnasium), and a Polish woman (née Justine Kryzanowska). C. studied at his father's private school, among young Polish noblemen; Albert Żwyny taught him pf. and Joseph Elsner, harm., etc. At 9 he played in public a pf.-concerto and improvisations; c. polonaises, mazurkas, and waltzes; in 1825, pub. as op. 1 a rondo; op. 2 a fantasie with orch. He played in German cities and had at 19 an individual style of comp., having written his 2 pf.-concertos, mazurkas, nocturnes, rondos, etc. He started for London, and played in Vienna, 1829, with such success that a critic called him "one of the most remarkable meteors blazing on the musical horizon": and at Paris he had such succ. in his first concert, 1831, that he settled there for life as a teacher of the pf. and occasional giver of concerts. His pupils were of the most aristocratic, and his friends included Liszt, Berlioz, Meyerbeer, Bellini, Balzac, and Heine. Schumann with typical spontaneity (cf. BRAHMS) was moved in 1831 by Chopin's op. 2, to say, "Hats off, gentlemen:—a genius"; and in 1839, in reviewing certain of his preludes, mazurkas, and valses, to say "He is and remains the keenest and staunchest poet-soul of the time." C.'s liaison with Mme. Dudevant ("George Sand"), begun in 1836 and ended in 1844, has caused endless controversy. In 1838 an attack of bronchitis drove him to Majorca, where she seems to have been a devoted nurse, but the peevishness and weakness due to his developing consumption caused bitter quarrels, and she is believed to have caricatured him as Prince Karol in her novel "Lucrezia Floriani." Concert tours and social life in England and Scotland in 1841 – 49 destroyed his strength. A collection of his letters was pub. (Dresden, 1877). His many biographers include Liszt, M. Karasowski (Dresden, 1877), M. A. Audley, Fr. Niecks (Leipzig, 1889). The latest, in many ways the best balanced, estimate of C. and his works, is James Huneker's "Chopin" (New York, 1900). His comps. include beside those mentioned (74, with opus-number 12 lacking): "Don Giovanni," fantasia, op. 2; "Krakoviak," rondo, op. 14; E♭ Polonaise, op. 22; and a fantasia on Polish airs for pf. with orch; duo concertant on themes from "Robert le Diable"; an introd. et Polonaise, op. 3, and a sonata, op. 65 for pf. and 'cello; pf. trio, op. 8; and a rondo for 2 pfs. op. 73. FOR PF. SOLO: Allegro de concert; 4 ballades; barcarolle, op. 60; berceuse, op. 57; bolero, op. 19; 3 écossaises, op. 72; 12 grandes études, op. 10; 12 études, op. 25; 3 études; 4 fantasies; 3 impromptus; marche funèbre, op. 72; 52 mazurkas. "Morceau de concert sur la Marche des Puritains de Bellini"; 19 nocturnes, 11 polonaises; 24 préludes, op. 28; prélude, op. 45; 3 rondos; 4 scherzos; 3 sonatas; tarantelle, op. 43; 13 valses; variations on "Je vends des scapulaires," op. 12; "Variation dans l'Hexaméron"; 16 Polish songs op. 74.

Frédéric François Chopin.

By James Huneker.

CHOPIN'S home education doubtless preserved in him a certain feminine delicacy which never deserted him. ¶ At the age of nine he played a Gyrowetz concerto in public and improvised, but seemed more solicitous about the impression his new collar made on the audience, than for the success of his music. ¶ As a composer of nineteen he was remarkable and far in advance of his critics and audiences. The disturbed political atmosphere of Poland coupled with an unsuccessful love affair—he vainly adored the singer Constantia Gladowska—decided him on a residence in Vienna. There his playing did not create any enthusiasm, and in the fall of the year he went to Stuttgart en route for Paris. It was in the German city that he heard of the downfall of Warsaw and of his patriotic hopes; for Chopin was a fierce patriot, but because of his slender physique, a non-combatant. He journeyed at once to Paris and settled there. ¶ His intimacy with the famous novelist George Sand lasted ten years, and her influence, hurtful according to some, and valuable according to others, was most potent and enduring. His sensitive nature was subject to many rude shocks during his companionship with the coarser-fibred and more intellectual woman. Yet it cannot be denied that from his most ardent pangs, he, artist-like, contrived to wring some of his sweetest and most subtle music. The shock of the separation, a separation that was inevitable, shattered Chopin's bruised spirit, and two years later he died, if not of a broken heart, partially of disappointment, chagrin, and spleen. His lungs, always weak, became hopelessly diseased, and after a profitless tour in England and Scotland, where he was really too weak to play, he died of consumption and was buried in Père-Lachaise, near the graves of Cherubini and Bellini. His funeral, an imposing one, called out the representative artistic spirits of the city. Seldom has genius been so accompanied to its last resting-place. ¶ During his lifetime Chopin was the centre of a circle of wit, talent, and fashion. Balzac, Delacroix, Liszt, Meyerbeer, Heine, Bellini, Berlioz, Mendelssohn, were a few among his intimate associates. His spiritual and original piano-playing admitted him into the inner circle of aristocracy, and he was sought for persistently until his life was sapped by sorrow and constant social duties. ¶ Chopin played but seldom in public, for he was unfitted by nature to cope with the audiences of the larger concert halls. That task he gratefully resigned to Liszt. But in the twilight of the salon among the favoured choice souls, his playing took on almost unearthly qualities. His touch, light in weight, was exquisite in timbre; his tone ranged from forte to a feathery pianissimo, while his style was absolutely unique. Tender, martial, ironical, capricious, gay, and sad, this young Pole held in bondage the entire emotional gamut. Never had the piano sounded so before, sounded so aërial, so witty, so passionate; and it may be doubted if it has sounded thus since; for, while Liszt, Rubinstein, Tausig, Joseffy, Heyman, DePachmann, Essipoff, Rosenthal, and Paderewski were, and are, remarkable interpreters, yet those who heard Chopin the pianist despair in their efforts to describe his spiritual performances. His light, finely articulated hand explains some of the characteristics of his technics; the wide-spread harmonies, the changeful play of inner voices; the novel figuration; and the lovely melodic life. ¶ Chopin is the poet of his instrument, the musical poet of Poland. He caught up and treasured the folk-songs of his country, and gave them to the world in an idealised form. His mazurkas are tiny poems full of caprice, wounded pride, ecstatic moments; his four ballads are epical in scope, containing noble melodies, the form absolutely original; the four scherzos are evidences of Chopin's creative powers, for here the form is again novel; the content startling. Bitterness, frantic and cruel, followed by rapturous outbursts of melody arouse in the listener the most vivid emotions. It is Chopin at the apex of his power. The polonaises are passionate and patriotic, or else fantastic and graceful, but always wonder-breeding. His waltzes are for the salon, and for the soul—like the mazurkas. Of the three sonatas, the one in B flat minor is the most satisfactory. Without organic unity it nevertheless astonishes by its originality and depth. Its slow movement is the funeral march, now a banal concert number. In his four Impromptus Chopin is full of charm, while in the Barcarolle and in the Fantaisie, Opus 49 he almost achieves perfection. The nocturnes and Cradle Song, now for the most part war-worn from repetition, contain much beautiful music. The Studies, opus 10 and 25 with the Preludes, opus 28 are Chopin in all his dazzling invention, his never-failing fancy, poetry, daring harmonic innovations and moving melodic richness. ¶ He changed the modern map of music by his subtle and profound experimentings with the possibilities of chromatic harmonies, and for this ranks among the great composers. Within his range he is the most perfect lyrist that ever sang, and the ethereal sonorities of his style, his discreet and original use of the tempo rubato, make him a forerunner of all that is free, individual and exotic in latter-day music. ¶ Chopin was not happiest in writing for ochestra or for piano in conjunction with violin or violoncello. His two concertos contain charming episodes, but do not cohere, do not make the eloquent appeal of the smallest of his mazurkas. He was not fashioned for the epic, this master of intimate moods. He wrote variations, fantasies, a 'cello-sonata, a piano-trio and bolero, a tarantelle and songs. ¶ We have forgotten them; but never so long as the piano remains the piano, will Chopin be forgotten. He is, as Rubinstein said, its soul.

Cimarosa (chē-mä-rō'-sä), Domenico, Aversa, near Naples, Dec. 17, 1749—Venice, Jan. 11, 1801; the orphan of a poor mason; studied at Minorite charity-school, his first teacher being Polcano, monastery organist; when 12 years old was given a scholarship in the Cons. di S. Maria di Loreto, where he studied singing with Manna and Sacchini, cpt. with Fenaroli, and comp. with Piccinni. 1770 his oratorio "Giuditta" was prod. in Rome; 1772, his first opera, "Le Stravaganze del Conte," at Naples, without succ., which was won, however, next year by "La Finta Parigina." Of phenomenal facility, he c. 76 operas in 29 years. He lived alternately in Rome and Naples. 1781, he prod. two operas in Naples, one in Rome, and two in Turin; invited 1789 to be court-composer at St. Petersburg (vice Paesiello), he spent 5 months of triumphal progress thither, being lionised at various courts; he stayed there 3 years, prod. 3 operas and wrote 500 pieces of music for the court; but he could not tolerate the climate, and was reluctantly released, being engaged as cond. to Emperor Leopold at Vienna, with a salary of 12,000 florins. He prod. 3 operas incl. his masterpiece "Il Matrimonio Segreto" (1787), which won an all-effacing success. 1793, he returned to Naples. 1799, he took part in the Neapolitan revolutionary demonstration on the entrance of the French army, and was condemned to death by King Ferdinand, but banished instead; he died suddenly at Venice. It being everywhere claimed that he had been poisoned by order of Queen Caroline of Naples, the Pope's physician made an examination, and swore that he died of a gangrenous abdominal tumour. Particularly in comic, but at times also in serious opera, C. almost challenges comparison with Mozart for fluency of melody and orchestral richness. His best operas are "La Finta" (Naples, 1773), "L'Italiana in Londra" (Rome, 1774), "Il Fanatico per gli Antichi Romani" (Naples, 1777), in which were introduced dramatically vocal-trios and quartets, "La Ballerina Amante" (Naples, 1782), "Le Trame Deluse" (Naples, 1786), "L'Impresario in Angustie" (Naples, 1786), "Giannina e Bernadone" (Naples, 1788), "La Vergine del Sole" (St. Petersburg, 1791), "Il Matrimonio Segreto" (Vienna, 1792), "Le Astuzie Femminile" (Naples, 1794). He was received with honour by various princes, and was court-musician to Louis XII., many amusing anecdotes of his musical humour being told. He finally returned to Condé as Provost of the Cathedral Chapter. Burney called him "the father of modern harmony." The florid and restless cpt. of his church-works and the secular cantus firmus (v. D.D.) that was the basis of most of them, brought his school into disfavour and disuse when the revolutionary Palestrina appeared. But he was at least the culmination of his style, and his erudition was moulded into suave and emotional effects, so that Ambros says that he was the "first musician who impresses us as being a genius." His period coinciding with the use of movable types for music, his works are preserved in large quantities in volumes and in the collections of Petrucci and Peutinger. His French chansons were pub. by T. Susato, 1545, P. Attaignant, 1549, and Du Chemin, 1553; excerpts in modern notation are in the "Bibliothek für Kirchenmusik," 1844; in Commer's "Collectio," Rochlitz' "Sammlung vorzüglicher Gesangstücke," 1838, Choron's "Collection," and in the histories of Ambros, Burney, Hawkins, etc.

Field, (1) John, Dublin, July 16, 1782—Moscow, Jan. 11, 1837; a great though gentle revolutionist of music, to whom much of Chopin's glory belongs, for Field developed the more lyric manner of pf.-playing and carried it into his composition, in which he gave the piano-song or poem its first escape from the old stiff forms. He created the Nocturne, and many of his comps. in this form have practically every quality and mannerism characteristic of those of Chopin, who excelled him in passion, resource, and harmonic breadth. He was the son of a violinist, and grandson and pupil of an organist, who compelled him to practise so hard that he ran away, but was brought back and later was apprenticed to Clementi as a salesman. He also had lessons from C., and went with him to Paris in 1802, making a great stir with his interpretation of Bach's and Händel's fugues; he was kept at his salesman's tasks till 1804, when he settled at St. Petersburg as a teacher and pianist of great vogue. After touring Russia, in London, 1832, he played a concerto of his own at the Philh.; then to Paris; 1833 Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, where he was not a succ. Intemperance and fistula kept him nine months in a Naples hospital; whence he was rescued by a Russian family Raemanow and taken to Moscow, playing in Vienna with greatest succ.; but his health was lost and he died a few years later and was buried in Moscow. Besides 20 nocturnes (of which only 12 were so named by Field) he c. 7 concertos (No. 4 in E flat the most popular); 4 sonatas; "Air russe"; "Air russe varié" (4 hands); "Chanson russe varié," in D min.; polonaise; "Reviens, reviens," Romanza and Cavatina in E; 4 romances; 7 rondeaux; rondeau with 2 vlns., viola, and bass; variation in C; 2 divertissements with 2 vlns., viola, and bass; 2 fantasias; and pf.-exercises in all keys. Robert Franz.

By Henry T. Finck.

NEXT to Schubert, Robert Franz is undoubtedly the most original of German song-writers. Unlike Schubert, he was a specialist, confining himself almost entirely to the field of art-songs, of which he wrote 279. These short songs represent, however, multum in parvo. As he himself once remarked, they are "like a mirror reflecting the development of music from a to z." By their simple strophic structure they remind one of the early folk-song. Many of them are as stately and majestic as the Protestant chorals of the time from Luther to Bach. ¶ Like Bach's music, the pianoforte parts of Franz's songs are polyphonic; that is, the melody is not confined to the voice, but each part of the instrumental accompaniment is a melody, too, and these diverse melodies are interwoven with magic art. At the same time his harmonies and tone-colours are as modern as Chopin's, especially in the use of chords widely extended with the aid of the pedal. ¶ Franz admitted he could never have become what he was, had it not been for Schumann and Schubert; yet his style is entirely different from theirs. He was also more critical than any of his predecessors, retaining in his desks all songs that did not please him; hence the proportion of good ones is greater in his case than in any other. His songs are a happy blending of the romantic spirit and the classical style, of the modern declamatory style and a genuine bel canto.

Gluck (glook), Christoph Wilibald (Ritter von), Weidenwang, near Neumarkt, Upper Palatinate, July 2, 1714—Vienna, Nov. 25, 1787; son of head-gamekeeper to Prince Lobkowitz; at twelve sent to the Jesuit Coll. at Komotau (1726–32), where he learnt the violin, clavecin, and organ, and was chorister in the Ch. of St. Ignaz; at eighteen he went to Prague, earning a living by playing at rural dances, giving concerts and singing and playing in various churches; under the tuition of Father Czernohorsky he mastered singing and the 'cello, his favourite instr.; 1736 entered the service of Prince Melzi, Vienna, who took him to Milan and had him study harm. and cpt. with Sammartini. After four years' study he prod. "Artaserse" (La Scala, 1741) with great succ. and was commissioned to c. for other theatres; prod. 8 operas 1742–45. On invitation he went to London 1745 as composer for the Haymarket, in opposition to Händel. "La Caduca dei Giganti" was given on the defeat of the Pretender, 1746, "Artamene," followed by "Piramo e Tisbe," a pasticcio of his best arias had no succ. and led Händel to say that the music was detestable, and that Gluck knew no more counterpoint than his cook. The operas G. had written up to this time were thoroughly Italian. The influence of Händel and Rameau's works heard at Paris awakened him, and led him to that gradual reform which made him immortal, though it brought on him the most ferocious opposition. "La Semiramide Riconosciuta" (Vienna, 1748) began the change to more serious power. 1750–62 he prod. "Telemaco" (Rome, 1750), "La Clemenza di Tito" (Naples, 1751), and 4 others. 1754–64 he was dir. court-opera Vienna and prod. 6 more works. He made great succ. in spite of opposition with "Orfeo ed Euridice" (1762), "Alceste" (1767), "Paride ed Elena" (1769), libretti by Calzabigi. 2 other inferior works were performed by members of the royal family (1765). In the dedicatory prefaces to "Alceste" and "Paride ed Elena," G. expressed his protest against the Italian school, and declared for dramatic consistency unhampered by rigid formulæ for arias, duets, etc., and interpolated cadenzas. He had such harsh criticism at home and such encouragement from du Rollet of the French Embassy at Vienna in 1772 that he went to Paris. But here also he met such opposition, that all his diplomacy and all the power of his former pupil, Queen Marie Antoinette hardly availed to bring about the presentation of "Iphigénie en Aulide" (1774); its great succ. was repeated in "Orphées" (Aug., 1774), "Alceste" (1776), and Armide (1777). Piccinni was brought to Paris as a rival, and prod. "Roland" while Gluck was preparing the same subject. Gluck burned his score and published a letter which precipitated an unimaginably fierce war of pamphlets. Both men now set to composing "Iphigénie en Tauride"; here Gluck forestalled his rival by two years (1779), and Piccinni's work on appearing was not a succ., while Gluck's succeeded enormously. His last opera, "Echo et Narcisse," was not succ. (Sept. 21, 1779); 1780, he retired to Vienna and lived on his well-earned wealth, till apoplexy carried him off. He wrote a De profundis for chorus and orch., 6 overtures and an incomplete cantata, "Das Jüngste Gericht," finished by Salieri, and 7 odes for solo voice and pf. Biog. by A. Schmidt (1854); Marx (1863); Desnoiresterres (1872).

Gluck.

By Ernest Newman.

TAKEN up in his twenty-second year by an amateur of Italian music, and put under Sammartini at Milan, Gluck's earliest models were Italian. Though his first works showed slight, unconscious traces of Northern origin, he probably thought, for twenty years, of little more than producing opera after opera in the Italian style. The intellectual changes that led to the reform of the opera with Orfeo were perhaps due in part to the influence of Rameau and Händel. The French light opera, also, and his own attempts in it, seem to have taught him something of direct, contemporary expression, as distinguished from the conventional operatic mouthing of antique sentiments. Apart from these musical influences, he was strongly swayed by the general æsthetics of the eighteenth century, whose ideal of art was the veracious imitation of Nature. He had probably read Algarotti's book on the Opera (1763), which advocates many of the reforms he afterwards carried out. ¶ Three rich currents intercrossed in him when he came to consciousness of himself. His Italian practice had given him ease and grace of style; his Northern nature and training made him at home in the world of grave and dignified passion; from the French opera he had learned to seek in musical tones the natural correlatives to the verbal idea. To these three musical qualities he added the power of penetrating reflection upon the essence of his art. ¶ The opera, when he took it up, was the laughing-stock of Europe. It left his hands a serious form of art, carefully thought out in all its details, with a new method and unity of purpose. The overture was made to throw light on the coming drama; the libretto was kept on as high a level as the taste and subjects of those days would permit; the old distinction of aria and recitative was undermined, the aria becoming more dramatic while not ceasing to be lyrical when required, and the recitative being raised from its previous conventional lines into a living, organic musical speech; the orchestra no longer merely accompanied the singer, but helped in the expression of the emotions of the actor; the senseless vocal ornaments of the Italian opera were discarded, and the singers taught to exist for the opera instead of the opera existing for them; in a word, brains and a purpose occupied the field hitherto filled only by vanity and imbecility. ¶ Had Europe not undergone such startling changes at the end of the last century, Gluck's influence would have borne great fruit. But the new social and intellectual life brought in a new world, for which a new music had to be found; while elsewhere his influence was lost sight of in the dazzling artificiality of the later Italian opera. Still, all the serious dramatists—Beethoven, Wagner, Weber, Berlioz—had their way made easier by the labour of Gluck. ¶ Like Wagner and Bach, he stands in a category of his own, seeming almost to be without ancestors and without descendants. His place is among the masters of dramatic grip and veracious poetic expression. Even yet, indeed, some of his work is incomparable in these respects.

Gounod.

By Vernon Blackburn.

GOUNOD'S music belongs entirely to a world of its own. In a word, he made that world, and then he set his music in it. You would not say that it was first-rate by any means, and you would not have the heart to say that it was second-rate. But, just as the old writers conceived a condition after death in which man received neither reward nor punishment, a sort of midway house where the dross of the flesh had not been expunged and where the fire of the spirit had not entirely departed, so Gounod is a kind of mingled spirit in music. He is the idol of gold with the feet of clay. ¶Yet he had one note, one separate characteristic in his music which does certainly divide him from every other musician in the world. None has sounded as he has sounded the peculiar note of eroticism which is absolutely sexual. Instance it by one example (the song of Marguérite at the end of the second act of "Faust," when she throws open the window to give expression to her emotion) as a creation of sexualness which no other song in the world has probably possessed. I have heard it said that the performance of Gounod's masses in Paris used to be regarded by ladies of fashion and quality as something in the light of an orgy. For this was Gounod's dominant note, his dominant quality. ¶He was not a master of melody, but he wrote quite beautiful melodies. He was not a master—and in each case I am using the word "master" in the superlative sense—of technique, but he had a mystic-second-rate mystic, but, all the same, mystic, quality in his work. He was not really dramatic; "Philémon et Baucis," "Faust," and Roméo," are there to prove so much; but he was charming in just not the great way. As a song-writer, though, he often achieved something like greatness. The much-hackneyed "Quand tu chantes," "Nazareth," but, above all, "Le Juif Errant," prove that in little flights of emotion, separate swingings into the sky, as it were, Gounod could do as well as anybody. But he was not a great master; he was a great contemporary, as I have said elsewhere, and his death was mourned by contemporaries. Whether future generations will rank him any higher than Emanuel Bach, time alone can prove. ¶Gounod's personality can scarcely be said to have made any impression upon the world, and his influence died like a bright "exhalation of the evening." You can prove it to-day only in mediocre song-writers.

Grétry (grā-trwē), (1) André Ernest Modeste, Liège, Feb. 9, 1741—Montmorency, near Paris, Sept. 24, 1813 ; dram. composer ; son of a violinist. Chorister at 6, but dismissed for incapacity at 11, then pupil of Leclerc and Renekin. R. failing to keep him to the strict course of cpt. Moreau later tried with equal failure; 1758 he prod. 6 symphonies at Liège; 1759 a mass for which the Canon du Harlez sent him to study in Rome, to which he walked ; he studied cpt. and comp. with Casali and Martini for 5 years, but was again dismissed as impossible ; a dramatic intermezzo, "Le Vendemmiatrice," was succ. 1765, but reading Monsigny's "Rose et Colas," he decided that his restless dramatic longings were best adapted for French opéra comique. He was a long time finding a fit librettist (Voltaire declining his invitation). He reached Paris slowly via Geneva, where he taught singing a year and prod. the succ. 1-act "Isabelle et Gertrude." In Paris after 2 years' hardships his "Les Mariages Samnites" was rehearsed, and though not prod., won him a patron in Count Creutz, the Swedish Minister, who secured him as libretto Marmontel's comedy "Le Huron." This was prod. (Op.-com., 1768) with a great succ., enjoyed also in extraordinary degree by an astounding series of works, mostly comic and mostly successful, the best of which are "Lucile," "Le Tableau Parlant" (1769), "Les Deux Avares," "Zémire et Azor" (1771), "Le Magnifique" (1773) ; "La Rosière de Salency" (1774) : "La Fausse Magie" (1775), "Le Jugement de Midas" (in which he satirised the old French music and its rendition at the Académie), and "L'Amant Jaloux" (1778); the grand opera "Andromaque" (1780) (in which the chief rôle is accompanied by 3 flutes throughout); "La Double Épreuve" (or "Colinette à la cour") (1782); "Théodore et Pauline" (or "L'Épreuve villageoise"); and "Richard Cœur de Lion" (his best work, still played in Paris); the gr. opera "La Caravane du Caïre" (1785, performed 506 times; (libretto by the Comte de Provence, later Louis XVIII.); "La Rosière Republicaine" (1793); "La Fête de la Raison" (prod. 1794 during the Revolution); "Lisbeth"; "Anacreon chez Polycrate" (1797); c. 50 operas in all, remarkable for spontaneity, grace and fervour of melody, dramatic effect and general charm, but open to serious criticism as works of formal art. He was called "the Molière of music." Mozart and Beethoven wrote Variations on themes of his. Once launched, his progress was a triumph of honour of all kinds; in 1802 Napoleon made him Chevalier of the Legion of Honour with a pension of 4,000 francs. He bought Rousseau's former residence at Montmorency and retired there; wrote Memoirs, etc. He had several children, including the gifted Lucille (v. infra), all of whom he outlived. He left 6 unprod. operas and c. also 6 symphonies; 6 pf.-sonatas, 6 string-quartets, church-mus., etc. Biog. by his nephew, A. J. G. (1815); Grégoir (1883); Brunet (1884), etc. (2) Lucille, Paris, 1773–93; daughter of above, who instrumented her opera "Le Mariage d'Antonio," written and prod. at the Op.-Com., with succ. when she was only 13; the next year her opera "Toinette et Louis" was not a success; she married unhappily and died at 20.

Volkslieder und Tänze," "Bilder aüs dem Volksleben," Peer Gynt suite No. 1 (4 hands), and many songs, incl. song-cycle to Garborg's "Haugtussa." Biog. by Ernest Closson (Fischbacher, Paris, 1892).

Eduard Grieg.

By Henry T. Finck.

WHEN Hans von Bülow called Grieg the Norwegian Chopin he doubtless had in mind the melodic fertility, the harmonic originality and boldness, the eloquence of style, and the almost exclusive devotion to the shorter forms of composition, which these two masters have in common. There is another point of resemblance. For a long time musicians believed that the striking peculiarities of Chopin's music were due to the influence on him of the Polish folk-music, whereas, in truth, they are only the product of his own genius. The same must be said of Grieg with reference to the Norwegian folk-songs, which are generally supposed to have been the sources of his inspiration. It is only necessary to study these folk-songs of Norway to see how utterly erroneous this idea is. He caught their spirit—half melancholy, half wild—but his melodies and harmonies are his own, and they are more beautiful than any folk-music. ¶ As a youth he came under the influence of Schubert, Schumann, Chopin, and Wagner, but in his songs (beginning with the third Grieg Album in the Peters edition) he is all Grieg, and the same is true of his pianoforte and other instrumental pieces. Apart from a concerto for the pianoforte, three sonatas for piano and violin, one for piano and 'cello, a few choruses, an overture and a few orchestral suites (among which the two Peer Gynt are best known), he has written only songs (120 up to date), and a large number of short pianoforte pieces. Half a dozen of his songs have been arranged with pianoforte accompaniments. ¶ As a harmonist Grieg is even bolder than Wagner and Liszt; he has spoken the last word in modulation. His best productions are still far too little known. His music has influenced nearly all the younger Scandinavian composers, and not a few others, who sometimes help themselves to his ideas, in the innocent belief that they are simply copying Norwegian folk-melodies. A kindred spirit to Grieg is the most original of American composers, Edward MacDowell.

Händel (hĕnt′-l) (Hendel, Hendeler, Handeler or Hendtler), Georg Friedrich (at first spelt Hendel in England; later he anglicised it to George Frederic Handel (hăn′-dĕl, the form now used in England), Halle, Feb. 23, 1685—London, April 14, 1759; son of a barber (afterwards surgeon and valet to the Prince of Saxe-Magdeburg) and his second wife Dorothea Taust. Intended for a lawyer; in spite of bitter opposition he secretly learned to play a dumb spinet. At 7 on a visit to his elder step-brother, valet at the court of Saxe-Weissenfels, Händel while playing the chapel-organ, was heard by the Duke, who persuaded the father to give the boy lessons. Zachau, organist of Halle, taught him cpt., canon and fugue, and he practised the oboe, spinet, harpsichord and organ; he soon c. sonatas for 2 oboes and bass, became assist. organist, and for 3 years wrote a motet for every Sunday. In 1696 his skill on organ and harpsichord won him at Berlin the friendship of Ariosti, and the jealousy of Bononcini. The Elector offered to send him to Italy; but his father took him back to Halle; the next year his father died, and he went to Halle Univ. (1702–03) to study law, at the same time serving as organist at the cathedral at a salary of $50 a year. 1703 he went to Hamburg as violino di ripieno. He fought a duel with Mattheson, later his friend and biographer, and was saved by a button. When Keiser the dir. fled from debt, H. was engaged as clavecinist. He c. a "Passion" and prod. 2 operas, "Almira" (succ.) and "Nero" (1705); he was also commissioned to write "Florindo und Daphne" (1708), an opera filling two evenings. In 1706, with 200 ducats earned by teaching, he went to Italy and made success and powerful acquaintances, incl. the Scarlattis. In Florence (1707) he prod. with succ. "Rodrigo" (Venice, 1708), and "Agrippina" with great succ. In Rome he prod. 2 oratorios, and in Naples a serenata, "Aci, Galatea e Polifemo," in which is a bass solo with a compass of 2 octaves and a fifth. 1709, in Germany as cond. to the Elector of Hanover; 1710 visited England on leave of absence. In 2 weeks he c. the opera "Rinaldo," a pasticcio of his older songs. It was prod. at the Haymarket Th. with great succ.; 1712 he returned to London on leave; but stayed. His first two operas were not succ.; but an ode for the Queen's birthday, and a Te Deum and Jubilate in celebration of the Peace of Utrecht won him royal favour and an annuity of £200; 1714 his Hanover patron became George I. of England, and only the good offices of Baron Kilmanseck and the production of the 25 pieces called the "Water-Music," at a royal aquatic fête, restored him to favour. 1716–18 he went to Hanover with the King. He there c. his only German oratorio, the "Passion"; 1718 cond. to the Duke of Chandos and c. the English oratorio "Esther," the secular oratorio "Acis and Galatea," and the Chandos Te Deums and Anthems. He taught the Prince of Wales' daughters, and c. for Princess Anne "Suites de Pièces" for harpsichord (The Lessons) including "The Harmonious Blacksmith."

He was dir. of new R. A. of M. 1720 prod. the succ. opera "Radamisto" (prod. 1721 in Hamburg as "Zenobia"). Now Bononcini and Ariosti appeared as rivals and a famous and lasting feud arose round the three after they had prod. one opera, "Muzio Scaevola," in which each wrote an act. B. had rather the better of it, when he was caught in a plagiarism (a crime not unknown in Händel's works (v. LOTTI). B. left England without reply (1731). Up to this time H. had prod. 12 operas.

1726 he was naturalised. 1729–31 he was in partnership with Heidegger, proprietor of the King's Th., where he prod. "Lotario," followed by 4 more operas. 1732 he prod. his two oratorios revised; 1733 the oratorios "Deborah" and "Athaliah" at Oxford, when he was made Mus. Doc. h.c. 1733 he began a stormy management of opera, quarrelled with the popular singer Senesino, and drove many of his subscribers to forming a rival troupe "The Opera of the Nobility," with Porpora and afterwards Hasse as composer and conductor; 1737 the companies failed, H. having prod. 5 operas; the ode "Alexander's Feast" (Dryden), and the revised "Trionfo del Tempo e della Verita." Over-exertion brought on a stroke of paralysis in one of his hands and he went to Aix-la-Chapelle, returning to London with improved health. He now prod., under Heidegger, 5 operas, incl. "Faramondo," "Serse" (1738), and "Deidamia" (1741).

Now he abandoned the stage and turned to oratorio, producing "Saul," and "Israel in Egypt" (1739); the "Ode for St. Cecilia's Day," and in 1740 "L'Allegro and Il Penseroso" (Milton), and a supplement "Il Moderato," written by Chas. Jennens, who also wrote the text of the Messiah. 1741 he visited Dublin and prod. there his masterpiece the "Messiah," April 13, 1742. This re-established him in English favour and raised him from bankruptcy. It was followed by "Samson," the "Dettingen Te Deum," "Semele," "Joseph" (1743), "Belshazzar," and "Heracles" (1744). His rivals worked against him still, and in 1745 he was again bankrupt, writing little for a year and a half, when he prod. with renewed success and fortune his "Occasional Oratorio," and "Judas Maccabaeus" (1746); "Joshua" (1747), "Solomon" (1748); "Susannah" (1748); "Theodora" (1749); "The Choice of Hercules" (1750); and "Jephthah" (1752), his last. During the comp. of "Jephthah" he underwent three unsuccessful operations for cataract. He was practically blind the rest of his life, but continued to play org.-concertos and accompany his oratorios on the organ up to 1759. He was buried in Westminster Abbey. His other comp. incl. the "Forest Musick" (Dublin, 1742), etc., for harps.; the "Fireworks Musick" (1749) for strings; 6 organ-concertos; concertos for trumpets and horns; and for horns and side drums (MS.); sonatas for vln., viola and oboe, etc. A complete edition of his works in 100 vols. was undertaken in 1856 for the German Händel Soc. by Dr. Chrysander as editor. Biog. by Mattheson (1740); Mainwaring (1760); Forstemann (1844); Schölcher (1857); Rockstro (1883).

Handel.

By John F. Runciman.

IF Handel cannot be called the greatest of the musicians, he is without doubt the greatest man who ever wrote music. The resource and energy of the man and the splendour of his personality altogether threw into the shade the magnificence of his music. The man eclipses the music as the sun eclipses the moon; the music indeed seems merely to reflect a small part of the light issuing from that miraculous sun, the man. Had he devoted the whole of his life to music, his music would have been a wonderful achievement; had he devoted his whole life to his business enterprises and to fighting the aristocracy, it would still seem a life wonderfully and greatly lived; and when one remembers that he wrote most of the glorious music the same time that he was fighting aristocracy and trying to run opera in England, he does indeed appear as one of the most astounding phenomena the world has produced and stared at. ¶ Born in Germany towards the end of the seventeenth century (1685), he promptly entered upon an infantile struggle on the question of whether or not he should become a musician. His father, a doctor, thought it a more honourable—it was everywhere thought a more respectable—proceeding to earn a livelihood by sending people slowly or swiftly to the next world than by making them miserable in this, through playing on instruments tuned according to the old "natural" temperament. The fact that the child Handel found a means of carrying his point, is characteristic of the man. He was apprenticed after the old-world German fashion to an old-world German organist, Zachau, and learned to play the organ and a few other instruments, studied all the music in use at his master's church or known to his master, and was taught to write anthems at a moment's notice. When he considered the time ripe he set out on his travels to learn all that could be learned elsewhere. He was for a time attached to an opera-house; he visited Italy, and finally came to England. He returned to Germany for a short time after his first English trip, but returned and made England his permanent home. ¶ He acquired the control of opera, at first having the aristocracy at his back. The aristocracy quarrelled with him and tried to crush him. They started a rival opera-house; and the result was that the two enterprises failed for want of sufficient support. Handel became bankrupt and lost his health. He took a trip abroad and returned to try his luck with opera once more. His aristocratic rivals never tried again. They were wise. Even Handel, without competitors, was not able to succeed. "The Beggar's Opera" was all the rage. All the world rushed night after night to hear it. Italian opera (old-fashioned Italian opera, of course) was in pretty much the same condition in London, as Middle-Victorian Italian opera is in to-day in London and America. People were sick of its inanities and went to something not, perhaps, much more reasonable, but at any rate more interesting and intelligible. "The Beggar's Opera" was not a very stimulating concoction; but compare the libretto with the perfectly idiotic drivel that Handel had to set—drivel of which the bulk of his audiences understood nothing save that it was drivel—and one can easily see why all the world gave it the preference. So Handel, beaten, not by the aristocracy, but by the changing taste of the time, reluctantly relinquished opera, and, going in for oratorio, immediately became once again a popular favourite and made a fortune. ¶ It is necessary to consider these roughly selected details of his life. As has been indicated, no estimate of Handel can afford to leave out the man. Moreover his purely artistic development is very hard to understand if we forget the life led by the man as apart from the life led by the composer. In his youth he acquired the German technique of his day. The same technique as John Sebastian Bach acquired. That is the foundation of all his art. But whereas Bach remained in Germany, an obscure and all but unknown schoolmaster and organist, and evolved his perfected mode of expression out of the German technique, Handel immediately went to Italy and learned something that could be added to it. He learned, that is, the value of Italian song; and the lesson immediately bore splendid fruit. ¶ No one ever wrote more magnificently for the voice than Bach; but Handel learned to write beautifully, simply, plausibly. His first Italian operas are full of wonderful tunes. Italian melodic outlines grafted on German harmony, and shaped so as to become infinitely more dignified and expressive than any Italian music save Palestrina's had ever been. Then he came to London, where Purcell's music was all the vogue, and it was from Purcell that he learned the art of handling the chorus and of writing picturesque music for chorus or solo voice or orchestra. ¶ Had he never come to England, had he never known Purcell's music, his name might indeed have lived as the author of a few divinely inspired songs, but it is safe to say that Handel, the gigantic chorus writer, would never have been heard of. ¶ There is scarcely a thing in the later Handel, in the Handel all England knows and adores, that does not derive from Purcell. His method of painting musical pictures, as used throughout such portions of "Israel in Egypt" as are his own, as used in such "Messiah" choruses as "All we like sheep have gone astray," is simply a more elaborate development of Purcell's plan of writing a chorus. His trick, always certain of its effect, of hurling enormous tone-masses at his hearers had also been extensively used by Purcell. ¶ His music may be said to be made up of the old German technique or trickery in writing flowing parts, of Italian singable melody, of Purcell, and of Handel. Not that—apart from his undeniable thefts—he can be called a thief. These thefts—after all, only so-called—need not detain us more than a moment. ¶ All his life, as has been pointed out, Handel was greatly occupied by other matters than the writing of music; he had again and again to throw together an oratorio at a few days' notice; he did it and probably never thought of "immortality" or any of his pièces d'occasion being regarded a century later as masterpieces. If in his hurry he put in a few choruses by this, that, or the other German or Italian forgotten no- or little- body, he did it quite openly. Of course, as Handel has turned out to be so much vaster a genius than he himself suspected, it is well that we should know precisely how much of his music really is his ; and now that Dr. Chrysander has finally settled the whole question it might be dropped. ¶ Handel never stole. What he learned from Italy he assimilated and made his own ; he assimilated and made his own Purcell's methods ; and what he brought into music was a very notable thing. It was a splendid radiant spiritual robustness, a magnificent sense of the sublime, and a tenderness that is not surpassed even by the tenderness of Mozart, Beethoven, or Wagner. There is also a quality of electric speed in many of his choruses, and a power of heaping climax on climax until one's very nerves yield to the strain put on them. Two very familiar choruses, "For unto us a child is born" and "Worthy is the Lamb," exemplify this power in an astounding way. His tenderness, his sheer strength, his sublimity, may all be found in the well-known oratorio. ¶ But one cannot but believe that in the long run Handel will be better known by his songs than by anything else. It was in the writing of these songs—of strings of them called Italian operas—that he found his most congenial occupation, and he only gave it up when he was fairly driven out of it. Great as his choruses are, they are not greater than his songs. There are hundreds of them only waiting to be sung once again to be appreciated. Beyond what may be called the strictly personal qualities that Handel brought to music, Handel added nothing. Consequently he left no field unworked for any successors. Consequently, also, English musicians ever since have gone on imitating his successes without any success whatever. He killed for many generations any chance there ever was of an Englishman becoming an original composer. Nevertheless, he was a great man and even an Englishman may forgive him.

Haydn (hīd'-'n), (2) (Fz.) Josef, Rohrau-on-Leitha, Lower Austria, March 31, 1732—Vienna, May 31, 1809; second son of a wheelwright who was the sexton and organist of the village church, and a fine tenor, and whose wife, Maria Koler, had served as cook for Count Harrach. She sang in the choir. At 5, H. was taken to the home of a paternal cousin, Frankh, who taught him Latin, singing, the vln. and other instrs. He was engaged as a chorister for St. Stephen's, and taught by Reutter the cond., who gave him no encouragement and dismissed him in 1748. At 8, he went to Vienna, and studied singing, vln. and clavier, with Finsterbusch and Gegenbauer. He studied harmony chiefly from Fux' "Gradus ad Parnassum" and Mattheson's "Volkommener Kappellmeister." At 13 he c. a mass. He obtained a few pupils, and a Viennese tradesman lent him 150 florins, with which he rented an attic-room and an old harpsichord. He practised C. P. Bach's first 6 sonatas and the vln.; Metastasio taught him Italian, and recommended him to a Spanish family as teacher for their daughter, who was studying with Porpora. From Porpora, in return for menial attentions, H. received some instruction in comp. and a recommendation to the Venetian ambassador for a stipend of 50 francs a month. At 20, he had c. 6 trios, sonatas, his first mass, and a comic opera "Der neue krumme Teufel" (Stadttheater, 1752), a satire on the lame baron Affligi the ct.-opera dir.; this work was suppressed but revived afterwards, and he received 24 ducats for it. He began to make powerful friends, and became Musikdirektor and Kammercompositeur to Count Fd. Maximilian Morzin. 1759 Prince Paul Anton Esterházy heard his 1st symph. and 1760 took him into his service as 2d (later 1st) conductor; the same year H. m. Maria Anna, the elder sister of the girl whom he loved and who had entered a convent. This marriage was as unhappy as one would expect. Prince Nikolaus Esterházy, who succeeded his bro. in 1762, retained H. as conductor and in his service H. c. 30 symphonies, 40 quartets, a concerto for French horn, 12 minuets, most of his operas, etc. He was soon very pop. through Europe, and royalty sent him gifts. 1785 commissioned to write a mass, "The Seven Words on the Cross," for the Cath. of Cadiz; in 1790 Prince Nikolaus was succeeded by his son Anton, who kept H. as cond. and increased his stipend of 1,000 florins to 1,400. In 1791 on a pressing invitation brought by Salomon, he went to England and was for 18 months the lion of the season. Oxford made him Mus. Doc.; and he c. the so-called "Salomon Symphonies," for his concerts. On his way home, he visited his native place to witness the unveiling of a monument erected in his honour by Count Harrach. In this year Beethoven became his pupil. 1794, he revisited London, with renewed triumph, the King urging him to stay, but, at the invitation of a new Prince Esterházy, he returned. 1797, he c. the Austrian national Anthem. At 65, he prod. his great oratorio "The Creation" ("Die Schöpfung"); in 1801 "The Seasons" ("Die Jahreszeiten"). His health failing he went into retirement, appearing in public only once in 1808, when he was carried in a chair to hear a special performance of the "Creation." His agitation was so great that he had to be taken away after the first half; the throng giving him a sad farewell, and Beethoven bending to kiss his hands and forehead. In 1809, his death was hastened by the shock of the bombardment of Vienna by the French. His astounding list of works includes besides those mentioned, 125 symphonies and overtures, incl. the "Farewell" ("Abschiedssymphonie," 1772), the "Fire S." ("Fuersymph., 1774), the "Toy S." ("Kindersymph.), "La Chasse" (1870), the "Oxford" (1788), the "Surprise," ("S. mit dem Paukenschlag," 1791); "S. with the drum-roll" ("S. mit dem Paukenwirbel," 1795); 51 concertos for harpsichord, vln., 'cello, lyre, barytone, double-bass, flute and horn; 77 string-quartets; 175 numbers for barytone; 4 vln.-sonatas; 38 pf.-trios; 53 sonatas and divertimenti; an oratorio "Il Ritorno di Tobia"; 14 masses; 4 operas; 4 Italian comedies; 14 Ital. opere buffe, and 5 marionette-operas; music to plays; 22 arias; cantatas, incl. "Ariana a Naxos," "Deutschlands Klage auf den Tod Friedrichs des Grossen," "The 10 Commandments" in canon-form; 36 German songs; collections of Scotch and Welsh folk-songs, etc. Biog. by S. Mayr, 1809; K. F. Pohl (Leipzig, 1875, 1882; completed by E. von Mandyczewski). Haydn's diary is quoted from extensively in Krehbiel's "Music and Manners" (New York, 1898).

Joseph Haydn.

By August Spanuth.

WHILE the relative station in musical history of Bach, Händel, Gluck, Mozart, and Beethoven is universally and definitely agreed upon, various opinions may still be entertained of the merits and subsequent influence of Joseph Haydn's work as a composer. ¶ This is all the more remarkable as he never met with much opposition. Only at one time during his life, a few rather inferior critics earnestly tried to belittle him; however, these were insignificant attempts, wholly unworthy of the closer attention of the historian. Nowhere has the musical public been slow in acknowledging Haydn's genius. Even at the time when he was Kapellmeister in the remote little town of Eisenstadt, his fame spread all over Europe, and his compositions were loved, played, and sung in all the big and small cities. Nor has there even been a violent partisanship pro and contra Haydn. All of which is easy enough to comprehend, inasmuch as he did not offend anybody's taste, even where he was most progressive in his compositions, and remained with his feet on the ground when his ideals were ever so lofty. ¶ The source of his musical inventions was the song and the dance of the people, yes, one might say, the children's song, and his artistic development was as slow as it was steady, thus allowing his admirers time to grow with him. Even where he reaches the very summit of his art, his melodic invention bears the ear-mark of childlike naïveté. ¶ And yet it seems impossible to have any two musicians determine the value of Joseph Haydn for the development of music, both entirely alike. Was he a reformer? The one will answer, "Yes," and point out that there was no real symphony before Haydn; that the old Italian symphony was nothing else but an introduction to, or an interlude during, the opera; that what there was of instrumental music before Haydn, was either in the way of fugues, and in the style of the concerto, or purely descriptive music. He will, furthermore, assert that Haydn created a thoroughly novel oratorio, doing away almost entirely with the old Italian style, and holding up his individuality in spite of the tremendous influence of the Händel oratorio. ¶ The other one will deny him the exalted title of a reformer, and, while he may readily admit that Haydn has added the Menuetto to the symphony, and fortunately got rid of the clavicembalo, that he, moreover, succeeded in giving the solo-sonata and the string-quartette a concise and plastic shape, he will probably insist that Haydn has done only very little that was essentially new, and that, in musical history, he can only rank as the man who paved the way for the giant Beethoven. ¶ But no matter how opinions may differ on this point, one must own of Haydn, that he was the first great musician to introduce an element of subjectiveness into instrumental music. And in so far one cannot deny him the instinct of a reformer, though he hardly was conscious of it. He never abandoned traditions just because he had decided to create a new musical language; he simply followed the inner voice of his genius. ¶ And he could do so all the more freely, since he had never enjoyed a thorough and severe musical education. He learned from here and there, he had models like Philipp Emanuel Bach, or Porpora, and Händel, etc., but he followed none of them so closely as to restrict his own individuality in the least. On the other hand, there was no trace of the spirit of revolt in his system. His very life is a strong proof for his peaceful and benevolent nature. When his sweetheart took the veil, he allowed himself to be persuaded to marry her older sister, who was three years his senior, and a Xantippe. This, and the fact that he lived with her for more than forty years, stamps the man as of an almost angelic character.

Liszt (list), Franz (originally Ferencz), Raiding, near Odenburgh, Hungary, Oct. 22, 1811—Bayreuth, July 31, 1886; in many ways the most brilliant of all pianists, and a composer whose poorest works are too popular, while he is not granted the credit due his more solid achievements; as great a patron of art, also, as he was creator. Son and pupil of an amateur; at nine played in public, at Oedenburg, Ries' E♭ concerto. A group of Hungarian counts subscribed a 6 years' annuity of 600 florins, and the family moved to Vienna, where L. studied with Czerny (pf.), and Salieri (theory) for 18 months. Beethoven hearing him play his trio op. 97, embraced him. At 12 he gave v. succ. concerts in Vienna and his father took him to Paris, where he was refused as a foreigner because of Cherubini's objections to "infant phenomena;" hereafter L. was his own teacher, except in comp. which he studied with Paër and Reicha. At 14, his 1-act operetta, "Don Sancho" had 5 performances at the Acad. royale de musique. On his father's death in 1827 he supported his mother by teaching, soon becoming the salon-idol he always remained. He was strongly influenced by Chopin, von Weber, Paganini and Berlioz. He had a brilliant series of heart-affairs, beginning with the literary Countess d'Agoult ("Daniel Stern"), with whom he lived in Geneva (1835–39). She bore him a son and three daughters; Cosima, the youngest, became the wife of von Bülow, later of Wagner. 1839, he successfully undertook to earn by concerts money enough for the completion of the Beethoven monument at Bonn. 1849, ct.-cond. at Weimar, with royal encouragement to aid mus. progress. He made himself the greatest patron among creative artists, aiding Wagner materially by productions of his works at Weimar and by pf.-transcriptions, aiding also Raff, Schumann, and Berlioz, finally resigning before the opposition to, and failure of, an opera by Cornelius (q. v.). 1859–70, he lived chiefly at Rome, where in 1866 the Pope, Pius IX., made him an abbé. 1870 he was reconciled with the Weimar Court. 1875 pres. of the new Acad. of Mus. at Pesth; he spent his last years at Weimar, Pesth, and Rome, followed by a large retinue of disciples and pupils whom he taught free of charge. He died during a Bayreuth Festival. C. 2 SYMPHS.: "Dante" (after the "Divina Commedia" with female chorus); "Eine Faustsymphonie" ("Faust," "Gretchen," "Mephistopheles," with male chorus); SYMPH. POEMS: "Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne" (Victor Hugo); "Tasso, lamento e trionfo"; "Les Préludes"; "Orpheus"; "Prometheus"; "Mazeppa"; "Festklänge"; "Héroïde funèbre"; "Hungaria"; "Hamlet"; "Hunnenschlacht"; "Die Ideale" (Schiller); and "Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe" (Michael Zichy); ALSO FOR ORCH. "Zwei Episoden aus Lenaus Faust" (Der nachtliche Zug, 2 Mephisto-wälzer), etc. FOR PIANO: 2 concertos; "Danse macabre" with orch.; "Concerto pathétique"; 15 "Rhapsodies hongroises"; "Rhapsodie espagnole"; "Sonata in B. Min."; "Fantasia and Fugue on B–A–C–H"; variations on a theme from Bach's B-min. mass; 10 "Harmonies poétiques et réligieuses"; "Années de pélerinage"; 3 "Apparitions," 2 ballades; 6 "Consolations"; 2 élégies; 2 légendes (St. François D'Assise and St. François de Paul); "Liebesträume" (Notturnos); "Études d'éxécution transcendante"; "Ab irato, étude de perfectionnement"; concert-études, "Waldesrauschen" and "Gnomenreigen"; "Technische Studien" (12 books), etc., and many transcriptions of symphs., overtures, 50 songs by Schubert, etc. Vocal comps.: 4 masses, incl. Missa solennis (the "Graner" Festival Mass); requiem; 3 oratorios, "Die Legende von der Heiligen Elisabeth," "Stanislaus," and "Christus"; Psalms 13th, 18th, etc., with orch. and other church-music; 3 cantatas with orch.; male choruses, 60 songs, etc. Wrote life of Chopin, of Franz, etc. Complete ed. of his writings in 6 vols. Biogr. by L. Ramann, 1880.

Franz Liszt.

By Henry T. Finck.

THERE are two great paradoxes in the career of Liszt. The first is that just as Rossini, the most popular opera composer of his day, ceased writing operas thirty-nine years before his death, so Liszt, the greatest and most adored pianist of all times, ceased playing in public (except for an occasional charitable purpose) about the same number of years before his end came. He had, with his inimitable art, familiarised concert-goers with nearly all the best compositions for the piano, created by other masters. He had transcribed for the same instrument a large number of songs, operatic melodies and orchestral works (the number of these transcriptions at his death was 371), thereby vastly increasing their vogue. He also wrote altogether 160 original compositions for the pianoforte, many of them as new in form as in substance; unique among them being the fifteen Hungarian rhapsodies—collections of Magyar melodies with gypsy ornaments, moulded by him into works of art, after the manner of epic poets. But—and here lies the second paradox—Liszt, the greatest of all pianists, was not satisfied with the piano. In many of his pieces for it, he endeavours to impart to it orchestral power and variety of tonal effect; and finally, when he became conductor at Weimar (1849), he transferred his attention chiefly to the orchestra. ¶ Of his thirty-four orchestral works, the most important are the "Faust" and "Dante" symphonies, and thirteen symphonic poems, in which he deviated from the old symphonic form in a spirit similar to Wagner's operatic reforms—abolishing the mosaic of unconnected movements and allowing the underlying poetic idea (programme) to shape the form of the music. Of great importance and beauty also are his sixty songs, which represent the climax of the tendency to mirror in the music, not only the general spirit of the poem, but every line and word. The last period of his life was largely given up to the writing of sacred compositions. Among these, the most original in substance is the "Legend of St. Elizabeth," the most original in form "Christus," in which the last remnants of the opera (the aria and recitative) are eliminated from the oratorio, and little remains besides choruses and instrumental numbers. Liszt's genius in early life was shaped largely by Schubert, Chopin, Berlioz, and Wagner. His own influence on the pianists and orchestral writers of Germany, France, and Russia, can hardly be overestimated.

Lully (rightly Lulli) (lül-lē, or lool'-lĭ), (1) J. Bap. de, Florence, 1633—Paris, March 22, 1687. A Franciscan monk taught him the violin and guitar. His parents were noble but poor; the Chev. de Guise took the boy in 1646 to France to entertain Mlle. de Montpensier, but he was set to work in the scullery, where Count de Nogent heard him play the vln. and placed him in the private band. L., however, set to music a satirical poem on Mlle. de M. and she dismissed him. He studied the harps. and comp. with Métri, Roberdet, and Gigault, and became a member of the King's private orchestra; 1652, he became head of the "24 violins"; he organised a second group, "les petits violons," of 16 instrs. and made it the best orchestra in France. 1653, ct.-composer and prod. masques and ballets in which Louis XIV. took part and Lully as "M. Baptiste," danced and acted. 1672, the king held him in such favour that he gave him letters patent for an "Académie royale de musique" (now the Gr. Opéra); a rival theatre was closed by the police (v. CAMPRA). With this opportunity (cf. Wagner's Bayreuth, Theatre) the transplanted Italian proceeded to found French opera—idiomatic mus. to texts in the vernacular, and free of the super-ornamentation of the Italian Sch. He held the vogue till Gluck put him in eclipse. L. was dir., stage-manager, conductor, and even at times machinist, as well as composer. He was fortunate in his librettist, Quinault. He developed the overture, and introduced the brass into the orch. He was famous for his temper and once while cond. furiously struck his own foot with the baton, producing a fatal abscess. His works, mainly on classical subjects, include "Les Fêtes de l'Amour et de Bacchus"; a pastoral pasticcio (1672); "Cadmus et Hermione"; "Alceste"; "Thésée"; "Le Carnaval," opera-ballet; "Atys, Isis, Psyche"; "Bellérophon"; "Proserpine"; "Le Triomphe de L'Amour"; "Persée"; "Phaëton"; "Amadis de Gaule"; "Roland"; "Armide et Renaud"; "Acis et Galatée," historic pastoral (1686), etc., also symphs., a mass, etc. (2) Louis de, Paris, 1664—after 1713; son of above; dramatic composer.

Mendel (mĕn'-dĕl), Hn., Hatte, 1834—Berlin, 1876; writer and lexicographer.

Mendelssohn, (1) (Jakob Ludwig) Felix (rightly Mendelssohn-Bartholdy) (mĕn'-d'l-zōn-bär-tôl'-dē), Hamburg, Feb. 3, 1809—Leipzig, Nov. 4, 1847; eminent composer of remarkably early maturity. Great-grandson of a Jewish sch.-master, Mendel, who adopted Christianity and had his children reared in the Christian faith; grandson of the prominent philosopher Moses; son of the banker Abraham M. Pf.-pupil of his mother, Lea Salomon-Bartholdy, as was also his elder sister Fanny (v. HENSEL). The family-life of the Mendelssohns is almost unique in history for its happiness and mutual devotion. M. studied also with L. Berger, Zelter (theory), Hennings (vln.) and Mme. Bigot (pf.). At 10 he entered the Singakademie, as an alto ; the same year his setting of the 19th Psalm was performed by the Akademie. Every Sunday a small orch. performed at his father's house, and his comps. were heard here early and often ; he usually cond. these concerts even as a child. 1825 his father took him to Paris to consult Cherubini, who offered to teach him, but the father preferred to have him at home. At 12 he began the series of 44 vols., in which he kept copies of his comps. This year he c. bet. 50 and 60 pcs., incl. a cantata, a mus. comedy, a pf.-trio, 2 pf.-sonatas, a vln.-sonata, songs, etc. At 9 he had played the pf. in public ; at 12 he was a notable improviser (while playing a Bach-fugue at Goethe's request he extemporised the Development which he had suddenly forgotten). At 17 he c. the remarkably original, beautiful and (in advance) Wagnerian overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the superb octet for strings (op. 20). This same year he matriculated at Berlin Univ. with a translation of Terence, said to be the first German attempt to render Terence in his own metres. He also painted, and was proficient in gymnastics and billiards. At 18 he prod. the succ. opera "Die Hochzeit des Camacho," at the Berlin Opera, in which he used the leitmotif (v. D. D.). At 20 he compelled and conducted the first performance since the composer's death of the Bach "Passion according to St. Matthew" at the Singakademie. This was the first step in the great crusade he waged, taking Bach out of obsolescence into the pre-eminence he now keeps. 1830, M. declined the chair of mus. at the Berlin Univ. The year before he had made the first of nine voyages to England, where he has stood next to Händel in popularity and influence. He cond. his symph. in C minor, at the London Philh., which gave him his first official recognition as a composer. The same year he was invited (in vain) to c. a festival hymn for the anniversary of the emancipation of the natives of Ceylon, and in his letters (in which his sunny nature finds free play) he referred to himself as "Composer to the Island of Ceylon." He appeared also with brilliant succ. as pianist and organist. He now travelled in Scotland, Switzerland, and elsewhere, and returning to London, conducted the "Hebrides" overture, played his G min. concerto and B min. Capriccio brillant, and pub. his first 6 "Songs without Words" (c. in Venice, 1830). His race and his amazing energy and succ. made him much opposition at Berlin, and he was refused the conductorship of the Singakademie in 1833, although he had arranged a series of concerts for the benefit of the Orch. Pension Fund. 1833, he cond. the Lower Rhine Mus. Festival at Düsseldorf, and became Town Mus. Dir. of the ch.-mus., the opera, and two singing-societies, for a salary of 600 Thaler (about $450). 1835, he became cond. of the Gewandhaus Orch., Leipzig, which (with Fd. David as leader) he raised to the highest efficiency ; the Univ. made him, in 1836, Dr. Phil., h. c. ; 1836, he cond. his oratorio "Paulus," the Lower Rhine Festival Düsseldorf, in 1837 also at the Birmingham Festival. 1837, he m Cécile Charlotte Sophie Jeanrenaud of Frankfort, daughter of a French Protestant clergyman. She bore him five children, Karl, Marie, Paul, Felix, and "Lili" (Elisabeth). In 184 Friedrich Wilhelm IV. invited him to take charge of the grand orch. and choral concerts at Berlin. The hostility to him was however so general that he wished to resign, but at the King's request organised the cath. mus., later famous as the "Domchor" (cath. choir). He was made R. Gen. Mus. Dir. With Schumann, Hauptmann, David, Becker, and Pohlenz, in the faculty, he organised the since famous Conservatorium of Mus. at Leipzig (since 1876 the "R. Cons."); he again cond. the Gewandhaus Concerts. 1845 he cond. "Elijah" at Birmingham. He resigned the Gewandhaus conductorship to Gade, and the piano-dept. to Moscheles, whom he invited from London. Upon hearing the news of the sudden death of his idolised sister, Fanny Hensel, he fell insensible and lived only 6 months.

M. was kept from opera by inability to find a satisfactory libretto. Besides "Die Hochzeit des Camacho" he left an unfinished opera "Lorelei," an operetta "Son and Stranger," and 5 small unpub. operas. He c. 3 oratorios, "Paulus" (St. Paul), "Elias" (Elijah), and "Christus" (unfinished), the symph. cantata "Lobgesang," op. 52; the ballade, with orch. "Die erste Walpurgisnacht," op. 60; 2 "Festgesänge," "An die Künstler" (for male chorus and brass), and "Zur Säcularfeier der Buchdruckerkunst" ("Gutenberg Cantata"), with orch.; mus. to the plays "Antigone" (op. 55), "Athalie" (op. 74), "Œdipus in Colonos" (op. 93), and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (op. 61); c. also vocal works with orch., hymn, "Tu es Petrus," Psalms 114, 115, and 95, prayer "Verleih' uns Frieden," and sopr. concert-aria "Infelice" (op. 94).

4 SYMPHONIES, in C min.; A min. (or "Scotch"); A (or "Italian"); D (or "Reformation"). OVERTURES, "Sommernachtstraum" ("A Midsummer Night's Dream"), op. 21; "Hebrides," "Die Fingalshöhle" (or "Fingal's Cave"), op. 26; "Meerstille und glückliche Fahrt" ("Calm Sea and Prosperous Voyage"), "Die Schöne Melusine" ("The lovely Melusine") (op. 32), "Ruy Blas" (op. 95), "Trumpet" overture, and an overture for wind-band (op. 24); c. also andante, scherzo, capriccio, and fugue, for string-orch. (op. 81), funeral march (op. 103), and march (op. 108); 2 pf.-concertos, in G min. and D min.; capriccio brillant; rondo brillant, and serenade and allegro giojoso, for pf. with orch.; vln.-concerto in E min. (op. 64); a string octet, quartets, 2 quintets, a pf.-sextet, 7 string-quartets, 3 pf.-quartets, 2 pf.-trios, 2 trios for clar., basset horn, and pf.; 2 'cello-sonatas, a sonata for vln., variations concertantes (op. 17) and "Lied ohne Worte" (op. 109), for 'cello with pf., religious and secular choruses, 13 vocal duets, and 83 songs. FOR PIANO—3 sonatas; capriccio; Charakterstücke; rondo capriccioso; 4 fantasias, incl. "The Last Rose of Summer"; "Lieder ohne Worte" ("Songs without Words") in 8 books; "Sonate écossaise," 6 preludes and fugues, "Variations sérieuses," etc.; 6 Kinderstücke, 3 preludes and 3 studies, op. 104; "Albumblatt," "Perpetuum mobile," etc. 4-hand variations; 4-hand allegro brillant; duo concertant (with Moscheles), for 2 pfs. on the march-theme in Weber's "Preciosa." FOR ORGAN, 3 preludes and fugues; 6 sonatas, op. 65; preludes in C min.

Biogr. by his eldest son Karl (1871); by Hiller (1874); S. Hensel (1879); Eckardt (1888); an extended article by Grove (in his Dictionary), etc. Numerous editions of his letters are published. See also next page.

(2) Arnold, b. Ratibor, Dec. 26, 1855; grand-nephew of above; studied with Haupt, Kiel, Grell, Taubert; organist and teacher in the Univ. at Bonn; then teacher at Cologne Cons.; then at Darmstadt professor. C. operas "Elsi" (Cologne City Th., 1894), and "Der Bärenhäuter," "Der Hagestolz" for chorus and orch.

Mendelssohn.

By Vernon Blackburn.

FELIX MENDELSSOHN BARTHOLDY almost rivalled Mozart in the precocity of his genius. Music came to him, as it were, straight out of the skies. He played with it from boyhood, and at the age of nineteen wrote his greatest work. I refer, of course, to the overture to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." It would be difficult to say exactly whence Mendelssohn derived the leading motives of his musical tendency. Mozart, of course, did much for him, but he was a brilliant, though, I should imagine, a superficial, student of the great John Sebastian and of the train of German and Austrian composers, including Haydn, which succeeded the period of that great master, Beethoven, with whom, of course, he was intimate from his childhood. One remembers the story of his playing one of the symphonies to Goethe; but I doubt if Beethoven had a very serious influence over this gay, companionable, brilliant musician to whom music was not so much a spiritual as a pantheistic influence. ¶ The external world to him fired his brain, and his delicate genius responded to the influence. His personality was neither commonplace nor profoundly interesting. There is a certain class of German youth which makes a point of exuberance, of high spirits and somewhat boisterous assertiveness of the bright side of life. Such a temperament is usually accompanied by a certain shallowness of spirit, and by a certain naïf outlook which is just a trifle irritating to the serious man. ¶ His place in the art of music has not, I should imagine, been quite definitely settled even at this day. While Sir George Grove would place him among the archangels of musical creation, there are others who prefer to rank him as quite in the front rank of the second class. On the whole, my judgment ranges with the latter, although there are times, of course, when he strayed into the really great things of his art, as for example in the "Watchman," from the "Hymn of Praise," or "How Lovely are the Messengers," from "St. Paul." There will be none, however, I imagine, not even Sir George Grove himself, to rank Mendelssohn with Mozart, John Sebastian Bach, and Handel, and that alone may be taken as a test as to whether he really may be placed among the great gods. ¶ If I were asked to assign his position, in the flash of a phrase, I should call him the Ganymede, the cupbearer of Jupiter's table. He was in the company of the gods, and he served them, he pleased them well; and his dwelling-place was in the palace of Jove; but he was not of royal rank, though he wore the livery of the great kings of art. And his influence has been confined chiefly to the more elegant song-writers of the time, to the composers of graceful and forgotten oratorios, and to the brilliant comic opera record of Sir Arthur Sullivan. And this, though Mendelssohn, after arriving at man's estate, never wrote a note that indicates him as possessing one flash of genuine humour. The disciple has here indeed outstripped the master.

Meyerbeer (mī'-ĕr-bār), Giacomo (rightly Jakob Liebmann Beer; by adding the name "Meyer" he secured a large inheritance from a wealthy relative; he then Italianised "Jacob" as "Giacomo"), Berlin, Sept. 5, 1791 (94?)—Paris, May 2, 1864; son of a Jewish banker; a precocious and remarkable pianist; pupil of Lauska and Clementi; at 7 played in public; studied with Zelter, Anselm, Weber; 1810, was invited by Abbé Vogler to live in his house as a son and pupil; did so for 2 years, one of his fellow-pupils being his devoted friend C. M. von Weber. Here he c. an oratorio and 2 operas "Jephthas Gelübde" (Ct.-Op., Munich, 1813) and "Abimilek" (Munich, 1813), the first a failure, the latter accepted for Vienna, whither he went and made a great succ. as pianist though his opera was not a succ. In his discouragement Salieri told him he needed only to understand the voice, and advised an Italian journey. He went to Venice in 1815 and, carried away with Rossini's vogue, c. 6 Italian operas which had succ., especially "Il Crociato in Egitto" (Venice, 1824). While writing this last he went to Berlin hoping to prod. 3-act German opera, "Das Brandenburger Thor"; though he found no hearing, Weber begged him not to give himself up to Italian influences. In the 6 years of silence that followed, occurred his marriage, his father's death, and the death of his two children. In 1826, he went to Paris to live, and made a profound and exhaustive study of French opera from Lully down, forming his third style, in which acc. to Mendel "he united to the flowing melody of the Italians and the solid harmony of the Germans the pathetic declamation and the varied, piquant rhythm of the French." He made a coalition with the sophisticated librettist, Scribe, and his first French opera, "Robert le Diable" (Gr. Opéra, 1831), was an enormous succ., financially establishing the Opéra itself, though M. had had to pay the manager Véron a large sum to secure its production. Less pop. succ. at first, but more critical favour attended "Les Huguenots" (1836); its prod. at Berlin, 1842, led King Fr. Wm. IV. to call him there as Gen. Mus.-Dir. His opera "Das Feldlager in Schlesien" (1843), had only mod. succ. until Jenny Lind sang it in 1844. 1847, he visited Vienna and London; returning to Berlin he prod. Wagner's new work "Rienzi"; later he obtained "The Flying Dutchman" performance, after its rejection elsewhere. The extent to which he befriended Wagner is matter of bitter controversy, some claiming that he gave only formal assistance while Wagner was obscure, and fought him with underhanded methods and a "press-bureau," when Wagner attained power. At any rate Wagner despised and publicly assailed the music of Meyerbeer. Yet, whether or no Wagner borrowed money from M., he certainly borrowed numberless points of artistic construction from him. In 1849, "Le Prophète" (finished 1843) was prod. at the Paris Gr. Opéra (1849) followed by the successes "L'Étoile du Nord" (Op.-Com., 1854), some of it taken from his "Das Feldlager in Schlesien"; and "Dinorah, ou le Pardon de Ploërmel" (Op. Com., 1859). "L'Africaine" (worked on with constant and characteristic changes from 1838) was prod. at the Paris Gr. Opéra, 1865, a year after his death. M. left by will 10,000 thaler ($7,500) for the foundation of a Meyerbeer Scholarship, for which only Germans under 28, and pupils of the Berlin "Hochschule," the Stern Cons., and the Cologne Cons., are eligible. Competitors must submit a vocal fugue à 8 (for double chorus), an overture for full orch., and a dram. cantata à 3, with orch. (text of cantata, and text and theme of fugue being given). The fund gives six months in Italy, six in Paris, and six more in Vienna, Munich and Dresden together. M. c. also incid. music to "Struensee" (the tragedy by his brother, Michael Beer; Berlin, 1846), choruses to Æschylus' "Eumenides"; festival-play "Das Hoffest von Ferrara"; monodrama "Thevelindens Liebe," for sopr. solo, chorus with clar. obbligato (Vienna, 1813); cantatas, "Gutenberg" and "Maria und ihr Genius" (for the silver wedding of Prince and Princess Carl of Prussia); "Der Genius der Musik am Grabe Beethoven"; serenade "Brautgeleite aus der Heimath" (for the wedding of Princess Louise of Prussia); ode to Rauch (the sculptor), with orch.; 7 sacred odes a cappella; Festhymnus (for the King of Prussia's silver wedding); 3 "Fackeltänze," for wind-band, also scored for orch. (for the weddings of the King of Bavaria, and the Princesses Charlotte and Anna of Prussia); grand march for the Schiller Centenary (1859); overture in march-form (for opening of London Exhibition, 1862); coronation march for King Wilhelm I. (1863); church-music; pf.-pcs., etc. Biog. by A. de Lasalle (1864); H. Blaze de Bury (1865); Ella (1868); H. Mendel (1868), and J. Schucht, 1869.

Meyerbeer.

By Irenaeus Prime-Stevenson.

WITHIN a decade or so, especially since the Wagnerian measuring-rule was applied right and left, up and down, to almost all the lyric drama, more in enthusiasm than in good judgment, and also since opera-making has come to be talked of as a sort of exact science—Meyerbeer has been ungraciously handled by a certain school of criticism. This school is rich in Podsnaps. If we can believe these arbiters and observers, Meyerbeer was a feeble charlatan in French opera, or in any kind of opera, a vulgar and bawdy melodist and a commonplace orchestrator. Moreover, we must, by such critics, believe that the public as well as the critics have so thoroughly "found him out," that the popular interest in his works is over; that "The Huguenots," "L'Africaine," and "Le Prophète" are works that bore everybody of true musical intelligence—"the souls of them fumed forth, the hearts of them torn out." ¶ Unfortunately for these undiscerning prophets, their premises are obviously wrong, and their results are short-sighted. Meyerbeer is a composer full of faults. His inconsistencies are a continual irritation. His shortcomings are plain to the ear. His superficial, emotional side, too, is indisputable. He was never sure of himself, or rarely so; and that is fatal often to artistic strength. But when all is counted against him, Meyerbeer is still a great composer, an operatic master to be reckoned with for a long operatic time to come; and as for the world in general it is far from setting him aside when his best scores are the question. ¶ His splendid subtler mastery of true dramatic effect is, after all, as emphatic as his cheaper method of making a point. He does not, alas! sustain his melodies. He does not work out good themes as they deserve, over and over. He gives-out, he resorts to noise and claptrap. His favourite rhythm is tedious. ¶ But notwithstanding all, he is a genius in dramatic, pathetic melody. He is constantly able to move us legitimately by his beautiful art as an orchestral colourist. He writes for the operatic actor as a singer, perfectly and consistently, as well as for the operatic artist as a declaimer. He is a king at great musical phrases, words and music so linked that we cannot think of them as not together. And as a merely French composer Meyerbeer is of the first rank. A sincere and learned musician himself, especially influenced by the greatest and even severest German and Italian musicians, he is distinctly a descendant in artistic speech of no less than Gluck. One often finds a Gluck-like nobility of phrase in Meyerbeer's dialogue, a Gluck-like outstart of melody, to atone for all that is savoury of Offenbach or worse. ¶ As for Meyerbeer's influence on not only the French opera but in far wider range, that is undeniable. French opera since his day has never set his monitions aside, from Halévy to Reyer: and Wagner (heretical as it sounds to say so) never quite drew away from the French principles in dramatic opera that he often most repudiated—exactly as he repudiates his eternal practical debts to Meyerbeer for no vague kindness. ¶ Meyerbeer is the Scott, the Jokai, of opera, forever. Just as we forgive technical error or error of sentiment in both here and there, so must we forgive Meyerbeer: and in admiring his best scenes much indeed is to be forgot! ¶ Personally, he was a large-souled and a good man as well as a man of finest cultivation and polish. His charities were numberless and his large bequests have continued them. Take him all in all, he is a creator and an influencer of, we may say, permanent dignity and honour in the general gallery of the really great, not merely the pseudo-great, operatic sovereigns.

Monte (môn'-tĕ), Filippo (or Philippus de) (Philippe de Mons) (dŭ-môńs), probably at Mons (or Malines), 1521—Vienna, July 4, 1603; conductor and celebrated composer.

Montéclair (môn-tā-klăr), Michel Pignolet de, Chaumont, 1666—Saint-Denis, n. Paris, Sept., 1737; double-bass player; dram. composer and writer of methods.

Monteverde (môn-tā-vĕr'-dĕ) (he signed his name, Monteverdi), Claudio (Giov. A.), Cremona (bapt., May 15), 1567—Venice, Nov. 29, 1643; eminent composer; when young, vla.-player in the orch. of Duke Gonzaga, Mantua, and studied cpt. with Ingegneri. At 17 and at 20 pub. Canzonette à 3, and madrigals, in which appeared (among many unintentional or unbeautiful effects) the harmonic innovations for which he is famous and which led Rockstro to call him "not only the greatest musician of his own age, but the inventor of a system of harmony which has remained in uninterrupted use to the present day." His progressions include the unprepared entrance of dissonances, the dominant seventh and the ninth (v. D. D., CHORD, PROGRESSION, SUSPENSION, PREPARATION, etc.). He was bitterly assailed in pamphlets, particularly by Artuso, and he replied in kind. The outcome was his complete triumph and the establishment of the new school of song and accompaniment. His victory, while salutary for art in general and dramatic song in particular, was too complete; for the bigoted defenders of polyphonic music dragged down with them in their ruin the splendid edifice of church-mus. built to perfection by Palestrina and others. 1603, M. became his teacher's successor as Maestro to the Duke and c. for the wedding of the Duke's son to Margherita of Savoy the opera "Arianne," in which Ariadne's grief moved the audience to tears. In 1608 he prod. his opera "Orfeo" with the unheard-of orchestra of 36 pieces (Riemann states that "Arianne" was the 2d work and Orfeo the first). Orfeo was published in 1609 and in 1615, and the score shows great modernity, Rockstro comparing its preludes with one bass-note sustained throughout to the Introduction to "Das Rheingold," and its continual recitative also to that of Wagner.

In 1608 appeared his mythological spectacle "Ballo delle Ingrate." Vespers and motets (pub. 1610) gave him such fame that he was in 1613 made Maestro di Cappella at San Marco, Venice, at the unprecedented salary of 300 ducats (the usual salary had been 200), but it was raised to 500 in 1616, and a house and travelling expenses given him. 1621, his very romantic Requiem was given with effect. In 1624, he introduced the then startling novelty of an instrumental tremolo (which the musicians at first refused to play) into his Dramatic Interlude; "Il Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda"; 1627 he c. 5 dramatic episodes incl. "Bradamante" and "Dido," for the court at Parma; 1630, opera "Proserpine Rapita"; in 1637 in the first opera-house opened at Venice, the Teatro di S. Cassiano, operas having hitherto been performed at the palaces of the nobility (v. PERI), M. prod. the operas "Adone" (Venice, 1639); "Le Nozze di Eneta con Lavinia" (1641), "Il Ritorno di Ulisse in Patria" (1641), and "L'Incoronazione di Poppea" (1642). He earned the title of "the father of the art of instrumentation"; was the most popular and influential composer of his time.

In 1663 he joined the priesthood and is heard of no more. C. masses, psalms, hymns, magnificats, motets, madrigals, etc.

(3) Wolfgang Amadeus (baptised Jns. Chrysostomus Wolfgangus Theophilus), Salzburg, Jan. 27, 1756—Vienna, Dec. 5, 1791; son of (1), and bro. of (2); one of the major divinities of music. Of unrivalled precocity in performance, composition, and acoustic sensitiveness; at 3 his talent and his discovery of thirds (v. D.D.), led his father to teach him. He began at once to compose little minuets which his father and later he himself noted down. He and his sister made a joint début at Munich, when he was barely 6, though he had appeared as a performer 4 months before in a comedy at the Univ. at Salzburg. He appeared the same year in Vienna, fascinating the court. He now learned the vln. and org. without instruction. At 7 he was in Paris, where his first works were pub., "II Sonates pour le clavecin." The next year he was in London, delighting royalty, winning the honest praise of musicians and coming victoriously out of remarkable tests of his ability as sight-reader and improviser. During his father's illness, while silence was required, he c. his first symph. Here his 6 sonatas for vln. and harps. were pub. and his first symph. performed frequently. He won the friendship of J. Chr. Bach, and was given singing lessons by Manzuoli. Before leaving England he wrote a motet to English words in commemoration of a visit to the British Museum. The family stopped at various cities on the way home, the children playing at courts with constant succ., a concert being given at Amsterdam in 1766, at which all the instrumental music was M.'s. At Biberuch he competed as organist without result against a boy 2 years older, Sixtus Bachmann. Returning to Salzburg, in 1766, M. was set to studying Fux, etc. 1767 he c. an oratorio, 1768, an opera, "La Finta Semplice," at the Emperor's request. Its production was postponed by the now jealous musicians till 1769. Meanwhile a German opera "Bastien und Bastienne" had been performed, and M. made his début as cond. in 1768 (aged 12), with his solemn mass. The Archbishop made him Konzertmeister, with salary, but his father wished him to enjoy study in Italy. His concerts were sensations, the Pope gave him the order of the Golden Spur (also given to Gluck), and at his father's behest he signed a few compositions by his new title Signor Cavaliere Amadeo, but soon dropped this. After tests he was elected a member of the Accademia Filarmonica of Bologna. At 14 he gave a concert at Mantua in which according to the programme he promises to play "a Symphony of his own composition; a Clavichord-concerto, which will be handed to him, and which he will immediately play at sight; a Sonata handed him in like manner, which he will provide with variations, and afterwards repeat in another key; an Aria, the words for which will be handed to him, and which he will immediately set to music and sing himself, accompanying himself on the clavichord; a Sonata for clavichord on a subject given him by the leader of the violins; a Strict Fugue on a theme to be selected, which he will improvise on the clavichord; a trio, in which he will execute a violin-part all' improvviso; and finally, the latest Symphony composed by himself." In Rome, after twice hearing Allegri's famous "Miserere," long kept secret, he correctly wrote out the entire score from memory. At Milan he prod. 3-act opera seria "Mitridate, re di Ponto" (1770), which had 20 consecutive performances under his direction. 1771, he brought out a dramatic serenade, "Ascanio in Alba," for the wedding of Archduke Ferdinand. 1772 his friendly protector, the Archbishop of Salzburg, died; his successor, Hieronymous, Count of

Colloredo, treated M. with the greatest inappreciation, compelling him to sit with the servants (though M. was frequently entertained at the houses of the nobility with great distinction); and when M. demanded his discharge in 1781, he had him kicked out by a servant. It was for his installation that M. had c. the dramatic "Il Sogno di Scipione" (1775), "Lucio Silla" (1772), and "La Finta Giardiniera," prod. at Milan, under his own direction, 1775; later "Il Re Pastore" at Salzburg during Archduke Maximilian's visit. 1778 he went with his mother to Paris, where he won little attention in the struggle between Gluck and Piccini. At length after his mother's death he returned to Salzburg as Konzertmeister, and ct.-organist; but settled in Vienna, after prod. the opera "Idomeneo" (Munich, Jan., 1781). On commission for the Emperor he wrote ("Belmonte und Constance, oder) Die Entführung aus dem Serail," prod. with great succ., despite the machinations of the theatrical clique, 1782; a month later he m. Constance Weber (the sister of Aloysia, whom he had loved in Mannheim). She bore him six children, four sons and two daughters. The small receipts for compositions and concerts were quickly spent on luxuries beyond their means, and as neither was a good manager of resources, many hardships followed. After two unfinished operas he prod. a mus. comedy, "Der Schauspieldirector" (Schönbrunn, 1786). May 1, in Vienna, his opera buffa "Le Nozze di Figaro" ("Marriage of Figaro") was rescued from intrigues into a very great succ. The then famous librettist Da Ponte next wrote the book for "Don Giovanni" (Don Juan), which made a very great succ. at Prague (1787), and led the Emperor to appoint M. "chamber composer," at 800 gulden ($400) a year (Gluck, just deceased, had 2,000 gulden). 1789 he accompanied Prince Karl Lichnowski to Berlin, playing for the Dresden court, and at the Thomaskirche, Leipzig. King Fr. Wm. II., hearing him at Potsdam, offered him the post of 1st Royal cond. with 3,000 thaler ($2,250) a year, but M. would not abandon his "good Kaiser;" still Fr. Wm. II. ordered three quartets, for which he paid well. Hearing this, the Emperor ordered the opera buffa "Così fan Tutte" (Vienna, 1790). Soon after its production the Emperor died; his successor Ld. II. cared little for M., leaving him in greatest hardship. His devoted friend Jos. Haydn now went to London. M. made a tour, pawning his plate to pay the expenses. For the coronation of Leopold II., as King of Bohemia, at Prague, he was invited to write the festival opera "La Clemenza di Tito," performed 1791. He returned to Vienna and c. "Die Zauberflöte" ("Magic Flute," Vienna, Sept. 30, 1791), a work in which are exploited the allegories of the Masonry of which M. was a member. It made a decided succ. He was, however, growing weaker and suffering from fainting fits, claiming that he had been poisoned. A mysterious stranger had commissioned him to write a requiem, and M. began it with a superstitious dread that the messenger had come from the other world to announce his death. It has since been learned that he was Leutgeb, the steward of Count von Walsegg, who gave the work out as his own, not, however, destroying the MS. The work was not quite completed by Mozart, who had his pupil Süssmayer fill out the incomplete portions. Mozart died of malignant typhus. A violent rain-storm coming up in the midst of the funeral, the party turned back leaving the body to be interred in some spot, never after discovered, in the ground allotted to paupers in the St. Mary cemetery. The profits of a Mus. Festival given by the Frankfort "Liederkranz,"

June 25, 1838, were devoted to founding a Mozart Scholarship, the interest amounting in 1896 to 1500 marks, applied quadrennially to the aid of talented young composers of limited means. At Salzburg the Mozarteum, a municipal musical institute founded in his memory, consists of an orch. soc. pledged to perform his church-music in the 14 churches of the town, to give 12 concerts yearly, and to sustain a mus.-sch. in which the musicians of the orch. give instruction.

A complete ed. of M.'s works pub. by Breitkopf & Hartel (1876–86), contains much church-mus. inc. 15 masses, cantatas "Davidde penitente" (masonic), "Maurerfreude" and "Kleine Freimaurrercantate," etc.; stage-works, besides those mentioned, "Die Schuldigkeit des ersten Gebots" (only partially his own), "Apollo et Hyacinthus" (Latin comedy with mus.); "Zaïde" (unfinished); "Thamos, König in Aegypten" (choruses and entr'actes; Berlin, 1786); "Idomeneo, re di Creta, ossia Ilia ed Idamante." ORCH.-WORKS: 41 symph.; 2 symph. movements; 31 divertimenti, serenades, and cassations; 9 marches; 25 dances, "Masonic Funeral-Music"; "A Musical Jest" for string-orch. and 2 horns; a sonata for bassoon and 'cello; phantasie for Glockenspiel; andante for barrel-organ, etc.; 6 vln.-concertos, bassoon-concerto, a concerto for flute and harp, 2 flute-concertos, horn-concertos, a clarinet-concerto, 25 pf.-concertos, a double concerto for 2 pfs., a triple concert for 3 pfs. CHAMBER-MUSIC: 7 string-quintets; 26 string-quartets; "Nachtmusik" for string-quintet; 42 vln.-sonatas, etc. PF.-MUSIC: for 4 hands; 5 sonatas, and an andante with variations; for 2 pfs., a fugue, and a sonata; 17 solo sonatas; a fantasie and fugue; 3 fantasias; 36 cadenzas to pf.-concertos; rondos, etc.; 17 organ sonatas, etc. VOCAL MUSIC: 27 arias, and 1 rondo for sopr. with orch.; German war-song; a comic duet; 34 songs; a song with chorus and org.; a 3-part chorus with org.; a comic terzet with pf.; 20 canons.

The best of many biographies is by Otto Jahn (1856–59, 4 volumes in English, London, 1882), etc.

His letters have also been published and translated in two volumes. One of his two overtures was found at the Paris Cons. 1901. Six unpublished sonatas were found in Buckingham Palace, 1902.

Mozart.

BY VERNON BLACKBURN.

JOHN CHRYSOSTOM WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART, the son of a tolerably good musician, by name Leopold, from his earliest years displayed the most extraordinary sense of musical precocity. At the age of three years he was able to pick out harmonies on the harpsichord; by the time he was seven, he had already burdened his young soul with the responsibility of various compositions which are more interesting than such compositions might be expected to be. The darling of courts in his childhood (for his father took him early on his travels for purposes of exhibition as a musical prodigy), the intensely industrious youth, the creator of a dramatic art in music, separate and by itself in the world, the greatest master of melody that this earth has ever seen, the writer of innumerable symphonies, innumerable songs, innumerable sonatas, the possessor of a musical memory such as had never been conferred on the son of man before, he was the brilliant artist of high spirits, the man who lived life to the very last drop of the glass. ¶In a word, a genius, in art and in living, of the highest flower. He went down to his grave before he was forty years of age, buried no man knows where, deserted of friends, deserted even in his last journey to the Vienna cemetery by his wife; abjectly poor, with not a soul to weep for him, not a soul to care what became of these sacred relics. Here was, indeed, a combination of glory and the darkest tragedy which can scarcely be found outside the Attic drama. ¶Yet, from the critical point of view, it can scarcely be said that Mozart was in any sense a revolutionary; he was the glorious link which combined the music of the last century with the music of this. The strictest formalist, the impeccable master of counterpoint, the respecter in every way of traditions, you can see him, as it were, on the tiptoe of the future, bearing on his brilliant soul, and bearing it lightly, all the burdens of the past. ¶But it is as a writer of opera that his fame is like to last longest, for it is here that he brought the brilliant qualities of the consummate musician to combine with the scarcely less brilliant qualities of the dramatist. Many men who might have written music equally noteworthy could not have touched the dramatic significance of it. "Don Giovanni," that glory of our blood and state, "Le Nozze di Figaro," "Cosi Fan Tutte," "Die Zauberflöte," these remain as noble a testimony of his great genius in the musico-dramatic world as the centuries are likely to bring forth. Then consider the G minor symphony—so different in quality from the quality of Beethoven at his best, and therefore not comparable to the great nine, but in its way the very flower of musical genius. Then again, such work as he brought into the Requiem declares him to be, as a master of the emotions, of supernatural terror, unsurpassed; I would almost say unsurpassable. In a word, here was the golden child of music, adding to the simplicity of his childishness the complex wisdom of the serpent. ¶Poor Mozart! Yet, who is ordinary man that he should say "poor" of such an immortal creature? Poor as it seems to us, yet it is not likely that he would have given up one golden moment of his glorious inspiration in exchange for the comforts of a Sultan. He was an artist, every inch of him.

Paganini (päg-ä-nē'-nē), Niccolò, Genoa, Oct. 27, 1782—Nice, May 27, 1840; the pre-eminent violin-virtuoso. Studied with G. Servetto and G. Dosta; at 8 he c. a vln.-sonata; at 9 he played in public with greatest succ.; from 1795 he studied with Ghiretti and Aless. Rolla (though P. denied this), at Parma. 1798, he ran away from his severe father after a concert at Lucca, and played at Pisa and other places. At 15 he was a passionate gambler, and very dissipated. Fits of gambling alternated with periods when he practised 10 hours a day, the result being a ruined constitution. He pawned his violin to pay a gambling debt, but a M. Levron presented him with a Joseph Guarnerius, which P. willed to Genoa. In 1804 he went home, and practised till 1805, when he had extraordinary succ. making a sensation by brilliant performances on the G string alone; soon ct.-soloist at Lucca; then to 1827 he toured Italy, crushing all rivalry with an extraordinary technic; 1827, Pope Leo XII. conferred on him the Order of the Golden Spur; he played at Vienna, receiving from the municipality the great gold medal of St. Salvator; from the Emperor the honorary title of ct.-virtuoso. 1829, Berlin; 1831, Paris; 1831, London. 1833–34, Paris; then retired to his villa at Parma. He lost 50,000 francs on a scheme to establish a gambling house with concert-annex at Paris, the gambling-license being refused. Though his earnings were enormous, he was not generous except spasmodically; he gave Berlioz $4,000 as a compliment for his "Symphonie Fantastique" (B. had writtten "Harold in Italy" for P.'s Stradivari viola). He m. the singer Antonia Bianchi, and he left his son Achille $400,000 (£80,000). He died of phthisis of the larynx. His technic was never equalled, and it provoked superstitious dread among his auditors, his ghoulish appearance aiding the impression. He was sometimes the charlatan and some of his effects were due to special tunings (scordatures), but his virtuosity has never been rivalled. C. 24 caprices for violin-solo; of which pf.-transcriptions were made by Schumann and Liszt; 12 sonatas for violin and guitar (op. 2); do (op. 3); 3 gran quartetti; concerto in E♭ (solo part in D, for a vln. tuned a semitone high); concerto in B min.; "La Campanella," with Rondo à la clochette (op. 7); variations on many themes, "Le Streghe," "God save the King," "The Carnival of Venice," etc.; concert Allegro "Moto perpetuo" (op. 12); a sonata with accomp. of vln., 'cello or pf., and studies, etc. Biog. by Fétis (Paris, 1851; Engl. London, 1852); A. Niggli (1882); O. Bruni (Florence, 1873).

Page, (1) J., England, ca. 1750—London, 1812; tenor. (2) Nathan Clifford, b. San Francisco, Oct. 26, 1866; pupil of E. S. Portland, Me., Jan. 9, 1839; the first American composer of importance; pupil of Kotzschmar, at Portland, Haupt (cpt.), Fischer (singing), and Wieprecht (instr.), Berlin; gave org.-concerts in Berlin and American cities, then lived in Boston as organist West Church; 1862, teacher of mus. Harvard Univ., and organist at Appleton Chapel, Cambridge; since 1876, prof. of mus. and organist at Harvard; c. an opera (text and mus.) "Azara"; oratorio "St. Peter," "Centennial Hymn," with orch. (to open the Philadelphia Exposition, 1876); "Columbus March and Hymn" (to open the Columbian Exposition, Chicago, 1893); mus. to Sophokles' "Œdipus Tyrannus" for male voices and orch. (prod. at Harvard, 1881); 3 cantatas with orch. "The Realm of Fancy," "The Nativity," "Song of Promise," 2 symphs. op. 23, in C min., and op. 34 in A ("Spring symph."); 2 symph. poems, "The Tempest" and "An Island Fantasy"; overture to "As You Like It"; Domine Salvum with orch.; mass, with orch.; chamber-mus., vln.-sonata, etc.

Paisiello (pä-ē-sĭ-ĕl′-lō) (or Paesiello) (pä-ā-sĭ-ĕl′-lō), Taranto, Italy, May 9, 1741—Naples, June 3, 1816. At 5 studied at Jesuit sch. in Taranto with a priest Resta; later studied with Durante, Cotumacci and Abos, Cons. di S. Onofrio, at Naples; teacher there, 1759–61. He c. masses, etc., till a comic intermezzo (Cons. Theatre, 1763) won him a commission to c. an opera for the Marsigli Th., at Bologna, where his comic opera "La Pupilla, ossio il Mondo alla Rovescia," was prod. 1764. (Grove calls this work 2 operas.) In 12 years he prod. 50 operas mainly succ., though in rivalry with Piccinni and Cimarosa; these include "Il Marchese di Tulipano" (Rome, 1766); "L'Idolo Cinese" (Naples, 1767) and "La Serva Padrona" (Naples, 1769). He was notable also for his jealousy and devotion to intrigue. 1776–84, St. Petersburg, with a splendid salary and on invitation from Empress Catherine. Here he prod. 1776 "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," gaining such succ. that the later and better opera by Rossini was received as a sacrilege with great hostility at first; on his return from Russia he prod. at Vienna one of his best works, "Il Re Teodoro," and 12 symph. for Joseph II. 1784–99, cond. to Ferdinand IV. of Naples; and prod. various works incl. "L'Olimpiade" (1786) and "Nina, o la Pazza per Amore" (1789), "La Molinara" and "Izingari in Fiera." During the revolution 1799–1801, he won the favour of the Republican govt., also regained the favour of royalty at the Restoration, till Napoleon who had always admired him called him to Paris, 1802–03, as cond. Here P. lived in magnificence, lording it over Cherubini and Méhul. 1803–15, he was in Naples again as ct.-cond. In 1815, on the return of Ferdinand IV., he was reduced to a small salary; soon his wife died, and he shortly after. A composer of great prolificity, melodic grace and simplicity, his works are rarely heard now. He c. 100 operas, a Passion oratorio (Warsaw, 1784); 3 solemn masses, Te Deum for double chorus and 2 orch.; requiem with orch. (performed at his own funeral); 30 masses with orch., 40 motets, 12 symphs., and other things in proportion. Biog. by Le Seuer (1816), Quatremère de Quincy (1817), Schizzi (Milan, 1833), Villarosa (Naples, 1840).

June 3, 1844; studied with Marmontel (pf.), Benoît (org.) and Halévy (cpt.), Paris Cons.; won 1st prize for pf. and org., 1857; 1860, Grand prix de Rome, with the cantata "Le Czar Ivan IV." (Opéra, 1860); from Rome, he sent an Italian opera buffa, an overture and a symph.; 1872, prod. the 1-act comic opera "Le Passant" (Op.-Com.) followed by 5 operas incl. the still pop. "Patrie" (Opéra, 1886; 1889, Hamburg, as "Vaterland"; 1895, Milan, as "Patria"); and c. also 2 masses, a symph., etc.

Palestrina (pä-lĕs-trē′-nä) (rightly Giovanni Pierluigi Sante, called da Palestrina, from his birthplace), Palestrina, near Rome, probably 1514 or 1515 (some say 1528 or 9)—Rome, Feb. 2, 1594. One of the most revered names in music; he was b. of poor parents, little is known of his early life; he is said to have earned his living first as a church-singer; probably studied in Goudimel's sch., 1540, and was, 1544–51, organist at Palestrina, then magister puerorum (master of the boys), in the Cappella Giula, with title "maestro della cappella della Basilica Vaticana." He dedicated a book of masses to Pope Julius III., who, Jan., 1554, admitted him to the Pontifical Chapel as a singer, against the rules, P. having a wife and no voice. July 30, 1555, Paul IV. dismissed him with a pension of 6 scudi per month. This blow affected him so deeply (he had 4 children to support) that he suffered nervous prostration. On Oct. 1, however, the Pope appointed him cond. at the Lateran. 1560, he prod. his famous "Improperia" (v. D. D.) for Holy Week, with such succ., that the Pope secured them for the Sistine Chapel, where they have been performed on every Good Friday since. 1561, he took the better-salaried post of cond. at Santa Maria Maggiore. The Pope was determined to rid church-mus. of its astonishing secular qualities: first, the use of street-ballads, even when indecent, as canti fermi, many of the choir actually singing the words; and second, the riotous counterpoint with which the sacred texts and the secular tunes were overrun. The Council of Trent and a committee of 8 cardinals, considering the matter seriously, decided not to revolutionise church-music entirely, and in 1564 commissioned Palestrina, by this time famous, to write a mass which should reform, without uprooting, ecclesiastical polyphony. He wrote three, all noble, the third, the "Missa papæ Marcelli," winning the most profound praise. He was called "the saviour of music," and appointed composer to the Pontifical Chapel. 1571, he became and remained till death maestro of St. Peter's. He also composed for the "Congregazione del Oratorio" (v. NERI); taught in Nanini's sch., and was from 1581 maestro concertatore to Prince Buoncompagni. Pope Sixtus V. wished to appoint him maestro of the Sistine Chapel, but the singers refused to serve under a layman. He was, however, commissioned to revise the Roman Gradual and Antiphonal, by Pope Gregory XIII.; he pub. the "Directorium chori" (1582), the offices of Holy Week (1587), and the Præfationes (1588), but on the death of his pupil and assist. Giudetti, he was compelled to leave the work unfinished. A complete ed. of his works is pub. by Breitkopf and Härtel: Vols. i.–vii. contain 262 motets; Vol. viii., 45 hymns; Vol. ix., 68 offertories; Vols. x.–xxiv., 92 Masses; Vol. xxv., 9 Lamentations each in various arrangements in 3, 4, 5, 6, or 8 parts; Vol. xxvi., 17 Litanies, Motets and Psalms in 3–12 parts; Vol. xxvii., 35 Magnificats; Vol. xxviii., about 90 Italian (secular) Madrigals; Vol. xxix., 56 Church-Madrigals (Latin); Vol. xxx. (from colls. of 16th–17th cent.), 12 Cantiones sacræ, 12 Cant. profanæ, and 14 Cant. sacræ; Vol. xxxi. (from archives of the Pontifical Chapel, etc.), 56 miscellaneous numbers, many doubtful, incl. 11, "Esercizi sopra la scala"; Vol. xxxii., 60 miscellaneous comp. incl. 8 Ricercari, Responses, Antiphones, etc.; Vol. xxxiii., Documents, Index, Bibliography, etc. Among his best masses are "Æterna Christi munera," "Dies sanctificatus," "O sacrum convivium," in 8 parts; "Assumpta est Maria in coelum," "Dilexi quoniam," "Ecce ego Joannes," "Papæ Marcelli" in 6 parts; "Tu es Petrus" in 6 parts; these, the Motet "Exaudi Domine," 3 Lamentations, also selected Madrigals, Canzonets, etc., are pub. separately. Biog. by Baini (Rome, 1828); A. Bartolini (Rome, 1870); Bäumker (1877); Cametti (Milan, 1895).

Palestrina.

By W. J. Henderson.

PALESTRINA'S work in musical history was bringing order out of chaos in church-music, and setting the model for the loftiest purity of style. The music of the Church had become too complex through the extreme development of rigidly canonic writing. Palestrina, following the lead of some of his predecessors, who had begun to write in free counterpoint, showed how this new style could be made to yield the finest possible results in the composition of music for the mass, and other parts of the Roman ritual. By adhering to the ecclesiastical scales and avoiding chromatic progressions, by clinging to purely religious thought and excluding anything like passion, Palestrina produced works which have remained to this day the perfect model of church-music. ¶ The contrapuntal skill in his writing is masterly, but it never parades itself. Its most beautiful effects are produced with apparent spontaneity, and frequent chord harmonies of enchanting loveliness seem to be accidental. The Roman school of church-composers was founded by Palestrina, and his influence is even yet perceptible in the music of the Holy City. He has universally been accorded the position of the greatest of all church-composers.

Pergolesi (pĕr-gō-lā'-sē), Giov. Bat., Jesi, Papal States, Jan. 4, 1710—(of consumption) Pozzuoli, near Naples, March 16, 1736; eminent composer. At 16 entered the Cons. dei Poveri di Gesù Cristo, Naples, and studied with de Matteis (vln.), Greco (cpt.), Durante, and Feo (cpt.). He speedily won attention by novel harmonies and threw off contrapuntal shackles early. His last student-work, the biblical drama "San Guglielmo D'Aquitania" (prod. with comic intermezzi at the convent of S. Agnello Maggiore, Naples, 1731) shows the beginnings of vivid and original fancy. He prod. at Naples in 1731, the excellent and novel opera "Sallustia," and the intermezzo "Amor Fa l'Uomo Cieco," which had no succ., while the opera seria "Ricimero" was a distinct failure. But he found a patron in the Prince of Stigliano, for whom he wrote 30 terzets for vln. with bass; he was commissioned to compose a solemn mass for Naples, which was performed after the earthquake of 1731, as a votive offering to the patron saint of the city. It brought him immediate fame. After four stage-works, prod.

in 1732 the intermezzo "La Serva Padrona" (Naples, 1733); won him note as a dramatic composer and has served as a model of comic operas since; it has only 2 characters and the accompaniment is a string-quartet with occasional support of horns. His subsequent 6 operas were received without interest (except for the intermezzo to "Adriano" first given as "Livietta e Tracollo" and later as "La Contadina Astuta)," though after his death they were revived with immense enthusiasm, and their harmonic novelty, sweetness, delicacy and melodic charm were recognised, "La Serva Padrona" and "Il Maestro di Musica" becoming standards in France. Of the failure of "L'Olimpiade," v. DUNI. Irregular habits due to regular disappointments undermined Pergolesi's constitution, and he died of consumption at the baths of Pozzuoli, finishing five days before his death his masterpiece, the celebrated "Stabat Mater" for soprano and alto with string orch. and org. He c. also 3 masses with orch.; Dixit for double chorus and orch.; a Kyrie cum gloria; a Miserere, and a Laudate with orch., etc.; an oratorio, "La Natività," a cantata "Orfeo" for solo voice and orch.; a cantata, "Giasone"; 6 cantatas with string-accomp.; 30 trios, etc. Biog. by Blasis (1817); Villarosa (1831).

Piccinni (or Piccini or Picinni) (pĭt-chĭn'-nē), (1) Nicolà, Bari, Jan. 16, 1728—Passy, near Paris, May 7, 1800; operatic composer, famous as a rival of Gluck. Son of a musician who opposed his tastes. The Bishop of Bari recognising his talent and irrepressible passion for music overcame opposition, and at 14 he entered the Cons. di San Onofrio, Naples, remaining for 12 years, as favourite pupil of Leo and Durante. He entered into competition with the popular Logroscino, and prod. the v. succ. opera-buffa "Le Donne Dispettose" (1754), followed by (1755) "Gelosia per Gelosia" and "Il Curioso del suo proprio Danno"; which had the unprecedented run of four years, "Alessandro nelle Indie" (Rome, 1758), and "Cecchina Zitella, o La Buona Figliuola" (Rome, 1760), the most success. work of its kind in Europe, though written in 3 weeks, were hailed as masterworks. His new dramatic fervour and his extended duets and varied finales gave him such prestige that he is said to have c. 133 dramatic works, incl. "Il Re Pastore" (1760); "L'Olimpiade" (1761) previously though less succ. set by Pergolesi, Galuppi and Jomelli; revised 1771; "Berenice" (1764); "Le Cecchina Maretata" (1765); "Didone abbandonata" (1767); "Antigone" (1771). 1773, the Roman public favoured his pupil Anfossi, and hissed one of P.'s operas, which prostrated him with grief; on recovering he regained favour with "I Viaggiatori." In response to flattering invitations in 1776 he removed with his family to Paris, spent a whole year learning the tongue and writing his first French opera, "Roland" (Opéra, 1778), which had a succ. said to be due largely to the necessity the anti-Gluck faction was under to find a rival. The war betwen the "Gluckists" and "Piccinists" was violent and incessant, though P. regretted his position and made a vain effort after Gluck's death, to raise a fund for annual concerts in his memory. He had succ. with the following French operas, "Le fat méprisé" (1779), "Atys" (1780), "Didon," "Le dormeur éveillé," and "Le faux Lord" (all 3 in 1783). In 1778, as dir. It. Opéra, whose performances alternated with the French company at the Opera, he produced his best Italian works with succ. The management simultaneously commissioned both Gluck and P. to set the opera "Iphigénie en Tauride"; P. had his libretto rewritten by Ginguené, and his version was delayed till after Gluck had made a triumph and left Paris. P.'s opera, though usually called a failure, ran 17 nights in spite of having an intoxicated prima donna on the first night to start the joke "Iphigénie en Champagne". Half a dozen others failed or were never performed. A new rival, Sacchini, now appeared. When this second succ. rival died, the large-hearted Piccinni delivered a glowing funeral-eulogy over him. 1784, he was Maître de chant at the new "École royale de musique et déclamation." His last operatic attempts in French were unsucc. At the outbreak of the Revolution he lost his positions, and retired to Naples, on a pension. But his daughter m. a young French radical, and P., suspected of republicanism, was kept a prisoner in his own house for four years, in extreme poverty. 1798, he returned to France, was fêted at the Cons., presented with 5,000 francs and small irregular pension. He was prostrated for some months by paralysis; a sixth inspectorship was created at the Cons. for him, but he soon fell ill and died. Purcell.

By John F. Runciman.

MODERN English musicians scarce count, and by their achievements up to the present can scarce hope to count, in the history of the world's music. When, however, the world was younger and the English race was fresher, things went differently. Before the rest of Europe had produced anything worth long consideration to-day, the English had brought forth a strong race of musicians; and while the rest of Europe was striving hard to catch up with the English, the English school was reaching a magnificent culmination in Purcell. Many influences went to the shaping of him. Behind was the contrapuntal English school, of which Tallis and Byrde were exemplars; more immediately behind was Pelham Humphries, who brought to England all that France knew; and it is as good as certain that he knew what the Italians, with Correlli at their head, had accomplished. That is to say, he must have learned how to handle many parts in a chorus or orchestral movement; learned how to write recitative and expressive song; learned what could be done in the way of chamber-music; and such orchestral colouring as was possible at that day. ¶ To these acquired masteries he brought a native ear for miraculous colour in music—as witness his Tempest music, written for the worst libretto that the world has not listened to; a glorious invention of expressive or picturesque melody, though chiefly picturesque; a fine instinct for the dramatic, and for expressing it in music; and the most noble sense of the splendid effects to be gained by throwing about masses of vocal tone in the manner afterwards appropriated and made entirely his own by Handel. ¶ Those who have studied Purcell's scores will be astonished by the extent to which Handel took his themes and modes of using them. In that lies his sole contribution to what must be called the "progress" of music. Later English composers, to their shame, and certainly to their utter confusion, copied Handel instead of developing on Purcell's lines. They profited nothing; and Purcell remains as the last of the tribe of the genuinely creative English musicians. He was determined to excel in everything he touched; and he excelled in everything. His forms are at once broad and flexible; his harmonies are as daring as Sebastian Bach's; his themes have a great dignity and vigour; and on everything he wrote there rests an early morning freshness. No music has preserved its freshness better; the dew is still on it. ¶ Born just before the Restoration, he felt to the full the anti-Puritan reaction ; he shared in the revival of the sheer joy of being alive ; and his music is filled with a cheerful health such as one finds in no music written since his day. But he experienced the deeper emotions ; and one may find in his works profound utterances of grief and sorrow, of the mystery and terror of all life. He was entirely pagan, and wrote no real religious music—religious as we use the word when we speak of Sweelinck, Palestrina, or Byrde. But power is there, and delicacy, and marvellous beauty ; and above all that external freshness and picturesque quality which give his music the character that stamps and marks it off as his own.

Rameau (rä-mō), (1) J. Philippe, Dijon, Sept. 25, 1683—of typhoid, Paris, Sept. 12, 1764; eminent as theorist, composer and organist. At 7 he could play at sight on the clavecin any music given him; from 10 to 14 he attended the Jesuit Coll. at Dijon; but taking no interest in anything but music was dismissed and left to study music by himself. He was sent to Italy, 1701, to break off a love affair, but did not care to study there, and joined a travelling French operatroupe as violinist. Later he became organist at two churches in Paris, 1717. He studied org. with Louis Marchand, who found his pupil a rival, and in a competition favoured his competitor, Daquin, as organist of St. Paul's; R. went as organist to Lille, later to Clermont (where lived his brother (2) Claude, a clever organist, and his father (3) Jean Fran., a gifted but dissipated organist and poet). After 4 years he returned to Paris, and pub. a treatise on harm. which attracted some attention. He became organist Sainte-Croix-de-la-Bretonnerie; and c. songs and dances for pieces by Piron, at the Op.-Com.; 1726, he pub. his epoch-making "Nouveau système de musique théorique," based on his own studies of the monochord (v. D. D.); in this work among many things inconsistent, involved and arbitrary (and later modified or discarded) was much of remarkable even sensational, novelty, such as the discovery of the law of chord-inversion. He founded his system on (1) chord-building by thirds; (2) the classification of chords and their inversions to one head each, thus reducing the consonant and dissonant combinations to a fixed number of root-chords; (3) a fundamental bass ("basse fondamentale," not our thorough-bass), an imaginary series of root-tones forming the real bases of all the chord-progressions of a composition. His theories provoked much criticism, but soon won him pupils from far and wide and the pre-eminence as theorist that he enjoyed as organist. He followed his first theoretic treatises with 5 other treatises. He now obtained the libretto "Samson" from Voltaire (whom he strikingly resembled in appearance) but the work was rejected on account of its biblical subject. "Hippolyte et Aricie," libretto by Abbé Pelegrin, was prod. at the Opéra, 1733, with so little succ. that he was about to renounce the stage, but his friends prevailed and he prod., 1735, the succ. ballet-opera "Les Indes Galantes," and at the age of 54 his masterpiece "Castor et Pollux," a great succ. as were most of his later works for 23 years, "Les Fêtes d'Hébé" (1739), "Dardanus" (1739), "La Princesse de Navarre," "Les Fêtes de Polhymnie," and "Le Temple de la Gloire" (1745), "Les Fêtes de l'Hymen et de l'Amour, ou les Dieux d'Egypte" (1747), "Zaïs" (1748), "Pygmalion" (1748), "Platée ou Junon jalouse," "Neis" and "Zoroastre" (the "Samson" music with another libretto) (1749), "Acanthe et Céphise," "La Guirlande," and "La Naissance d'Osiris" (1751), "Daphnis et Églé," "Lycis et Délie" and "Le Retour d'Astrée" (1753), "Anacréon," "Les Surprises de l'Amour," and "Les Sybarites" (1757), "Les Paladins" (1760). He c. also others not prod. His mus. is full of richness, novelty and truth, though he wrote only fairly for the voice. He said himself that were he younger he would revolutionise his style along the lines of Pergolesi. 1745 the King made him chamber-composer. His patent of nobility was registered, just before his death. He c. also many books of mus. for clavecin, etc.; of these a complete ed. is pub. by Steingräber. Biog. by du Charger (1761), Nisard (1867), Grique (1876).

Rossini (rôs-sē'-nē), Gioacchino A., Pesaro, Feb. 29, 1792—Ruelle, near Paris, Nov. 13, 1868; eminent Italian opera-composer. His father was inspector of slaughter-houses and also horn-player in strolling troupes in which the mother (a baker's daughter) was prima donna buffa. Left in charge of a pork-butcher, R. picked up some knowledge of the harpsichord from a teacher, Prinetti; 1802 studied with Angelo Tesci; this began his tuition; he made rapid progress, and sang in church, and afterwards joined his parents as a singer, horn-player and accompanist in the theatre. At 14 he studied comp. with Padre Mattei, and 'cello with Cavedagni at the Bologna Liceo. At 15 he prod. a cantata "Il Pianto d'Armonia per la Morte d'Orfeo," which won a prize. Mattei soon told him that, though he had not enough cpt. to write church-mus., he knew enough to write operas, and he ceased to study. At 17 he prod. a succ. 1-act opera buffa 'La Cambiale di Matrimonio" (Venice, 1810); next year, a succ. 2-act opera buffa "L'Equivoco Stravagante," Bologna. He received various commissions, writing 5 operas during 1812. 1813, his "Tancredi" (Fenice Th., Venice) was an immense succ. and "L'Italiana in Algeri," an opera buffa (San Benedetto Th.), was also succ. Two failures followed with disheartening effect, but "Elisabetta" (its libretto curiously anticipating Scott's "Kenilworth") was a succ. (Naples, 1813), and in it he dropped recitativo secco. A failure followed and on the first night of the next work the public resentment at his daring to set to mus. the text of one of Paisiello's operas led to its being hissed. This work "Almaviva" (Rome, 1816) was better received the second night and gradually est. itself in its subsequent fame under the title "Il Barbiere di Seviglia"; 1815–23 he was under contract to write two operas yearly for Barbaja, manager of La Scala at Milan, the Italian opera, Vienna, and Neapolitan theatres. His salary was 12,000 lire (about $2,400). During these 8 years he c. 20 operas, travelling from town to town and working under highest pressure. 1821 he m. Isabella Colbran (d. 1845), who had sung in his operas. The ill-succ. of his most carefully written "Semiramide" (Venice, 1823) and an offer from Benelli, a mgr., led him to London where he was lionised and in 5 months earned £7,000. For 18 months he was mgr. of the Th. Italien at Paris, and prod. several operas with artistic, but not financial succ. He was however "Premier compositeur du roi" and "Inspector-général du chant en France," sinecures with a salary of 20,000 francs ($4,000). He lost these in the Revolution of 1830, but afterwards on going to law received a pension of 6,000 francs. At the Gr. Opéra he prod. with succ. revisions in French, of earlier Italian succs. 1829 he gave there his greatly succ. masterpiece "Guglielmo Tell." At the age of 37, having prod. under his direction Meyerbeer's first opera and having heard "Les Huguenots," R. foreswore opera and never wrote again anything more dramatic than his famous "Stabat Mater" (1832), not performed entire till 1842; "Petite messe solennelle," with orch.; a cantata for the Exposition of 1867; and pf.-pcs. with burlesque names. He retired to Bologna and Florence, returning to Paris in 1855. 1847 he m. Olympe Pelissier. He c. 35 operas, 16 cantatas, canzonets and arias, "Gorgheggi e solfeggi per soprano per rendere la voce agile," "Chant des Titans" for 4 basses with orch.; "Tantum ergo" for 3 male voices with orch.; "Quoniam" for solo bass with orch.; "O salutaris" for solo quartet, etc. Biog. by Stendhal (1823), Azvedo (1865), H. S. Edwards (London, 1869), Zanolini (1875), Struth (Leipzig), Dr. A. Kohut (Leipzig, 1892).

Rossini.

By Irenaeus Prime-Stevenson.

IT is like a page of goldenest sunshine in the volume of musical personalia to review the brief, brilliant, artistic story of Rossini's activity or to glance at his long and happy life. Almost from the first came to him fame, fortune, and opportunity for that amazing fecundity of mind which was so curiously sorted with his indolence of body. Few men of genius have lived and worked and rivalled and succeeded, of whom so little is current that is ungracious or discreditable. ¶ As to Rossini's place in art, albeit a huge fraction of his operas are empty to our ears, and bore us with their flowery ornamentation and feeble dramatic substructure, we have no right to predict that thorough neglect will soon deliver to darkness and dust such scores as "L'Italiana in Algeri," "Il Barbiere di Seviglia," "Guglielmo Tell,"—and possibly "Semiramide"; for the world will have lost too completely a natural irresistible feeling for melody, for restrained elegance of orchestral diction, and above all for the perfect expression of true comedy in music. Only in one other master, Mozart, to whom Rossini felt that he owed so much, and to whom he declared himself so far inferior, do we meet equal sincerity, taste, and eloquence as prolifically put into operatic song and orchestration. ¶ And as to "Tell," with that noble and serious work, a striking variant from the old Italianistic Rossini, a work by a mature and serious-minded composer of the first order, all the great and the little musical world will long have to reckon. ¶ The great influences on Rossini were two: Mozart, whose greatest successor in Italian operatic comedy Rossini certainly is; and a mixture of French form and French dramatic spirit with German importance in every detail of the orchestra. ¶ It cannot be said that Rossini founded a school. He "said it all himself," as the phrase goes; and his imitators either gave over copying (often with most happy and significant advantages to great individualities for themselves, as in the instances of Meyerbeer and Donizetti and Verdi), or else they were not of substance in their efforts to eclipse the dazzling master of Pesaro. His effect upon the whole operatic public of Europe was for a time almost demoralising, paralysing to all other music. ¶ Immediately after the striking renunciation of his career, at only thirty-seven years of age, came the Wagner movement, which is showing not unwelcome signs of sluggishness and eventual disappearance.

Rousseau (roos-sō), (1) Jean Jacques, Geneva, June 28, 1712—Ermenonville, near Paris, July 3, 1778. The great writer; mainly self-taught in mus, but aiming to reform notation by the substitution of numerals for letters and note-heads, read before the Académie, 1742, a "Dissertation sur la musique moderne" (1743); his opera, "Les Muses Galantes," had one private representation (1745); his revision of the intermezzo "La Reine de Navarre" (by Voltaire and Rameau) was a failure; but his opera "Le Devin du Village" (Gr. Opéra, 1752) was succ. for 60 years. He wrote mus. articles for the "Encyclopédie," which were roughly handled by Rameau and others, but revised and re-pub. as "Dictionnaire de musique" (1768). In 1752 he participated in the "Guerre des Bouffons," between the partisans of French and Italian opera, R. siding with the Italianists and declaring that a French national music was impossible and undesirable; for which the members of the opera burned him in effigy. "Pygmalion" (1773) was v. succ. being a novelty—a melodrama, all the dialogue spoken, the orch. furnishing interludes and background. Six new arias for "Le Devin du Village," and a coll. of 100 romances and duets "Les consolations des misères de ma vie" (1781), and fragments of an opera, "Daphnis et Chloé," were pub. (1780). Rozkošny (rōz'-kōsh-nē), Josef Richard, b. Prague, Sept. 21, 1833; pianist; pupil of Jiranek, Tomaschek and Kittl; toured, then lived in Prague; prod. there 9 Bohemian operas; c. also overtures, 2 masses, etc.

Rubini (roo-bē'-nē), Giov. Bat., Romano, Bergamo, April 7, 1795—at his castle, near Romano, March 2, 1854; famous tenor, said to have been the first to use the vibrato and the sob, both since abused; his range was from E–b′ (with a falsetto register to f‴. v. PITCH, D.D.); Bellini wrote many operas for him; toured with Liszt, earning by one concert over $10,000; had one of the largest fortunes ever amassed by a singer.

Rubinstein (roo′-bĭn-shtīn), (1) Anton Gregorovitch, of Jewish parents, Wechwotynecz, Bessarabia, Nov. 30, 1830—Peterhof, near St. Petersburg, Nov. 20, 1894; one of the greatest of the world's pianists. Early taken to Moscow, where his father est. a pencil factory, he was at first a pupil of his mother; at 7, of Alex. Villoing, who was his only pf.-teacher. At 9 he made a tour with Villoing as far as Paris, where, in 1840, he played before Chopin and Liszt, who advised him to study in Germany. He toured further and returned to Moscow in 1843. His brother, Nikolai (v. below), was also musical, and in 1844 both were taken to Berlin, where Anton studied comp. with Dehn. Returning to Russia after a tour through Hungary, with the flutist Heindl, he lived in Petersburg under the patronage of the Grand Duchess Helen; he prod. 2 Russian operas; 1854–58, with the assistance of Count Wielhorski and the Grand Duchess, he made a wide tour, finding himself now well known as composer and pianist; 1858, ct.-pianist and cond. of ct.-concerts, Petersburg; 1859, dir. Russian Mus. Soc.; 1862, founded the Imp. Cons. at Petersburg, and was its dir. until 1867; 1865, he m. Vera Tchekuanoff. 1867–70, he toured Europe, with greatest imaginable succ.; 1872–73, he gave in America 215 concerts, from which he earned $40,000 (£8,000); but he could never be induced to cross the ocean again, though offered $125,000 (£25,000) for fifty concerts. 1887–91, again dir. Petersburg Cons., then lived in Berlin; 1891, in Dresden. The Czar bestowed on him the Order of Vladimir, carrying with it nobility, and the title of Imp. Russian State Councillor; he was an officer of the Legion of Honour, a Knight of the Prussian Ordre pour le mérite, etc. He instituted the Rubinstein prizes of 5,000 francs each for pf.-playing and composition open every 5 years to men between 20 and 26 of any nationality.

He wrote his "Memoirs," also "Die Musik und ihre Meister" (1892), "Gedankenkorl" (1892).

As a pianist R. is second only to Liszt, whom he perhaps excelled in fire and leonine breadth. He was, however, frequently inaccurate in his performance. He chiefly wished to be remembered as a composer and placed great hope in the creation of what he called "Sacred Opera" (oratorio to be enacted with costume and scenery). In this "new form" he c. "The Tower of Babel," "Paradise Lost," "Moses," "Christus." Besides the noteworthy operas "Nero" (Hamburg, 1879), "The Demon" (Russian, P., 1875), and "Die Makkabäer" (German, Berlin, 1875), he c. 11 other operas, a ballet "La Vigne" (Die Rebe), and 2 cantatas with orch. C. also 6 symphs. (incl. the famous "Ocean," op. 42, in C, in 7 movements); op. 95, in D min. ("Dramatic"); op. 107, in G min. (in memory of Gr. Duch. Helen). "Character-pictures" "Faust," "Ivan IV.," and "Don Quixote"; 3 concert-overtures, incl. op. 43 ("Triomphale"), and op. 116 ("Anthony and Cleopatra"); a Suite in 6 movements, op. 119 (his last work); symph. poem "La Russie"; 5 pf.-concertos; fantasia eroica with orch.; vln.-concerto; romance and caprice for vln. with orch.; 2 'cello-concertos; vln.-sonatas; vln.-sonata (arr. for vln. by David), etc. FOR PIANO SOLO: suite; 4 sonatas, 6 preludes, 6 études, 5 barcarolles; "Kamenoi-Ostrow" ("Isle of Kamenoi" in the Neva, a series of 24 "pictures"); "Soirées de St. P.," "Miscellanies," "Le Bal," 10 pcs. op. 14; "Album de Peterhof," etc. FOR PF. 4 HANDS, sonata, "Bal Costumé," 6 Charakterbilder, fantasia for 2 pfs.; over 100 songs, 18 duets, choruses, etc.

Autobiog. "Memoirs" (St. P. 1889; Leipzig, 1893). Biogr. by MacArthur (London, 1889).

Schubert (shoo'-bĕrt), (1) Jos., Warnsdorf, Bohemia, 1757—Dresden, 1812; violinist, and dram. composer. (2) Jn. Fr., Rudolstadt, 1770—Cologne, 1811; violinist, writer and composer. (3) Fd., Lichtenthal, near Vienna, 1794—Vienna, 1859; elder bro. of the great composer (4) and passionately devoted to him; dir. Normal Sch., Vienna; c. church-mus., a requiem for his brother, etc.

(4) Franz (Peter), Lichtenthal, near Vienna, Jan. 31, 1797—of typhus, Vienna, Nov. 19, 1828; one of the most eminent of the world's composers. One of the 14 children of a schoolmaster at Lichtenthal, who taught him the vln.; also studied with Holzer there; at 10, first soprano in the church-choir, and c. songs and little instrumental pcs. 1808, a singer in the Vienna court choir, and also in the "Convict" (the training-sch. for the court singers). He played in the sch.-orchestra, finally as first vln., and studied theory with Ruczizka and Salieri. His earliest extant composition is a 4-hand fantasia of 12 movements written when he was 13. He had a frenzy for writing, and a fellow-pupil, Spaun, generously furnished him with mus.-paper, a luxury beyond the means of Schubert. At 15 he had written much, incl. an overture; at 16 he c. his first symph.; 1813, his voice broke and he left the "Convict," where the unrestrained license allowed him in his compositions accounts for the crudeness of some of his early works and the faults of form that always characterised him, as well as for his immediate and profound individuality; at 17 he c. his first mass. In order to escape military conscription he studied a few months at the Normal Sch. and took the post of elementary teacher in his father's sch. He taught there until 1816, spending his leisure in studying with Salieri, and in comp. particularly of songs, of which he wrote as many as 8 in one day—144 in his 18th year (1815), including "Der Erlkönig"; 1814–16, he also c. 2 operettas, 3 Singspiele and 3 incomplete stage-pieces, 4 masses. 1816, he applied, without succ., for the directorship of the new State mus.-sch. at Laybach (salary $100 (£20) a year). From 1817 he lived in Vienna, except two summers (1818 and 1824), spent at Zelész, Hungary, as teacher in Count Esterházy's family. How S. existed is a matter of mystery, except for the help of such friends as Fz. von Schober, who aided him with the utmost generosity. The famous tenor Michael Vogl, popularised his songs. By his 21st year (1818) S. had c. six of his symphs. and a great mass of work. His mus. farce "Die Zwillingsbrüder" was prod. (Kärnthnerthor Th., 1820, but ran only six nights). 1821, after he had written over 600 compositions, his "Erlkönig" was sung at a public concert of the "Musikverein" and elsewhere, with a wide sale that attended most of his subsequent publication of songs and pf.-pcs.; though he was sadly underpaid by his publishers, sometimes receiving only a gulden (20 cents, less than a shilling) for them. In 1822 he declined the post of organist at the court chapel; but could never obtain a salaried position, though many efforts were made. At 31 he gave his first concert of his own works, with good succ. (1828). In 1822, he had finished a grand opera "Alfonso und Estrella," the libretto bad, the scoring too difficult for the musicians at Graz, where it was put in rehearsal; it was withdrawn, not to be prod. till 1854 under Liszt and in 1881 when Jn. Fuchs rewrote the libretto and prod. it at Carlsruhe with great succ. In 1825 a work, "Rosamunde," was prod. at the Th. an-der-Wien, with applause for the music, but it was withdrawn after a second performance. Other works of his had not even productions, his stubborn refusal to alter a note preventing the profitable performance of dram. scenes, etc. His health finally broke under the strain of composition all day on a little food and revelry till late at night. He died of typhus and was buried, at his own request, in the "Ostfriedhof" at Währing, near Beethoven.

A complete critical edition of his works is pub. by Breitkopf & Härtel. These incl., besides those mentioned, an opera "Adrast" (unfinished), 3-act operettas "Der Teufels Lustschloss" and "Der Spiegelritter"; SINGSPIELE: "Der Vierjährige Posten," "Fernando"; "Claudine von Villabella" (unfinished); "Die Freunde von Salamanca" and "Der Minnesänger"; all written 1814—1816; none performed; 3-act melodrama, "Die Zauberharfe" (Aug. 19, 1820); 3-act opera, "Sakontala" (not finished or performed); 1-act operetta, "Die Verschworenen, oder der häusliche Krieg" (Vienna, 1861); 3-act opera, "Fierabras" (Vienna, 1861); "Die Burgschaft," 3-act opera (c. 1816; prod. by Fz. Lachner, Pesth, 1827); unprod. operas "Der Graf von Gleichen" (1827) and "Die Salzbergwerke"; 6 masses; "Deutsche Messe"; unfinished oratorio "Lazarus," 2 "Tantum ergo" (with orch.); 2 "Stabat Mater," etc. CHORAL WORKS WITH ORCH., OR INSTRS.: "Miriams Siegesgesang"; prayer, "Vor der Schlacht"; hymn, "Herr unser Gott," "Hymne an den Heiligen Geist," "Morgengesang im Walde," "Nachtgesang im Walde" and "Nachthelle," "Schlachtlied," "Glaube, Hoffnung und Liebe," several cantatas and part-songs. Schubert.

BY H. A. SCOTT.

FRANZ SCHUBERT was very nearly the greatest of all composers. If he had lived longer, been more carefully trained when young, and received greater appreciation in his lifetime—three very reasonable "might-have-beens"—who shall set limits to the heights which he might have won? He died at thirty-one. If others of the masters had been cut off at this age what treasures the world would have lost!—in the case, say of Handel, every one of his oratorios; in that of Beethoven, his seven greatest symphonies; in that of Wagner, all his operas after "Tannhäuser" and "Lohengrin"; in that of Brahms, the "German Requiem" and all his symphonies. ¶ It does not follow that Schubert would necessarily have developed in any like manner. But, at least, there are reasons for thinking that he might have done so. We know that in the last year of his life he contemplated taking lessons in counterpoint, that on his death-bed he spoke of "entirely new harmonies and rhythms" running through his head, and that he had the loftiest of ambitions. As it was, and taking his works as they stand, certain weaknesses distinguish them which there is no overlooking. That fabulous fertility which could beget six of the "Winterreise" songs at a single sitting, three of the pianoforte sonatas in as many weeks, and eight operas in a year, was not counterbalanced by a like faculty in the matter of self-criticism and concentration. Too many of his bigger works lack form and proportion. He did not trouble sufficiently to work out and make the most of the inspired thoughts which came to him in such unparalleled abundance. He was a stupendous genius, it might almost be said, with an infinite capacity for not taking pains—whose "profuse strains of unpremeditated art" were at once too profuse and too unpremeditated. ¶ But even so only one or two of the very greatest names can stand before his in music's history. He occupies a position only one degree short of the very highest. In the actual quality of his inspiration indeed perhaps there is not one who could be ranked before him. No composer in the whole history of music was more wondrously endowed by nature, whether one considers either the surpassing beauty of his ideas or the profusion of their supply. ¶ In Schubert's music at its best there is a haunting and unutterable loveliness, an exquisite blending of tenderness, sweetness, and purity, with strength, nobility, and grandeur, to which, for the true Schubertian, there is perhaps no equivalent in the works of all the other masters put together. And this applies, it should be said, not less to his instrumental pieces than to his songs. ¶ The notion that Schubert is great only in his songs is one of those stock judgments which, once accepted, it seems almost impossible to eradicate. In point of fact nothing could be wider of the mark than this belief. Schubert left imperishable works in nearly every branch of music. His songs comprise no doubt his most characteristic and distinctive achievements, inasmuch as nothing like them had ever been so much as attempted before. But, so far as concerns the specific quality of their music, they were equalled, if not surpassed, by such works as the symphonies, his chamber compositions, and those exquisite one-movement pieces for the pianoforte, the "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicals," which in their way, be it said, were only a degree less epoch-making than the songs. ¶ What then is the distinctive place in music of this divinely-gifted tone-poet? His distinction is twofold: he created the song as we know it, and more than any other composer he influenced the development of the romantic movement. As the greatest of all song-writers, Schubert's position is assured. It seems safe to say that his noblest achievements under this head will never be surpassed. The Schubert song, of which the text throughout is mirrored in the accompaniment, in which every bar of the music is conditioned by the words, thoughts, and dramatic or emotional content of the poem illustrated, was a distinctive creation in its way not one whit less wonderful than, say, the Beethoven symphony or the Wagnerian music-drama. Such songs as "Der Erlkönig," "Die junge Nonne," "Der Tod und das Mädchen," "Der Atlas," "Der Doppelgänger," or "Gruppe aus dem Tartarus," to name but half-a-dozen almost at random from his more descriptive examples, were a totally new thing in music, the influence of which upon all succeeding composers, not only of songs but of every kind of dramatic or illustrative music, not excluding opera, it would be hard to over-esteem. ¶ And more remarkable still perhaps is the fact that this superb emotional and dramatic expressiveness was attained without the smallest sacrifice of qualities specifically musical—nay, took shape in music of the greatest beauty, richness, variety and charm, as music alone and without reference to the text. Schubert's creation of the song in truth partakes almost of the miraculous, for he not only invented an absolutely new kind of song, but developed its utmost possibilities, one might almost say, at a blow —in a word did this new thing at the first time of asking and did it supremely well. ¶ Schubert's influence as song-writer it would be hardly possible to exaggerate. It was truly not a reform which he introduced but a revolution. As to his influence on the composers of the romantic school one has only to consider in general the whole character of his music with its all-pervading poetry, and emotional expressiveness, and in particular such works as those already named, his "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicals" to wit, to realise the character of the connection. Here also, in these last-named works, he did that which no one before him had attempted, inventing new forms for the expression of moods too delicate, too intimate, and too personal for treatment in the larger movements of established type, and once again left behind him creations of an entirely novel kind, which later composers have striven in vain to improve upon. ¶ Perhaps in the whole range of pianoforte music there are no passages more ravishingly beautiful—more enchanting to the ear, regarded from the purely sensuous standpoint—than some to be found in these inspired works. Had Schubert left nothing further than this slender volume of "Impromptus" and "Moments Musicals" for the pianoforte his name would live forever in the records of the art. ¶ If Schubert's essays in the larger forms—the symphony and the sonata—are to a certain extent impaired by the qualities alluded to, this is by no means to deny their enormous significance and importance. Schubert in these larger works may have been diffuse at times, may not always have developed to the full the wondrous ideas which came to him in such abundance, his works may sometimes lack proportion ; but what qualities are theirs by way of comparison !—what wealth of melody ! what intoxicating harmonies ! what irresistible rhythms ! what magical modulations ! Recall such creations as the C major and the B minor symphonies, the quintet in C major, the D minor, A minor, and G major quartets, and the sonatas in A minor, B flat, and G among his larger piano works, and of what account seem the dry-as-dusts' and analysts' strictures in the face of such imperishable compositions as these ? Nor should it be overlooked that in these larger works also, Schubert's methods, if he kept within the recognised forms, were all his own, and as such were full of influence upon his successors. Apart from such technical matters as his harmonies, modulations, instrumentation, and the like, under all of which heads he made striking advances, he breathed into these established forms also a spirit of romance, a yearning, wistful, personal note of lyric tenderness and fervour, whereby they are distinguished from all earlier compositions of their kind. ¶Well might it be said by Grove of Schubert that "there never has been one like him and there never will be another" ; by Liszt that he was "le musicien le plus poète que jamais" ; and by the inscription on his tomb that "Die Tonkunst begrub hier einen reichen Besitz aber noch viel schönere Hoffnungen."

Schumacher (shoo'-mäkh-ĕr), (Peter) Paul (H.), Mayence, 1848—1891; conductor, critic, teacher and composer.

Schumann (shoo'-män), (1) Robert (Alex.), Zwickau, Saxony, June 8, 1810—insane, Endenich, near Bonn, July 29, 1856; one of the most individual and eminent of composers. Youngest son of a book-seller (of literary taste and author of a biog. gallery to which R. contributed at 14). Pupil of a local organist, Kuntzsch (pf.), who prophesied immortality for him; at 6 he began to compose, at 11, untaught, he c. for chorus and orch. At 17 he set poems of his own to mus. 1820–28, attended Zwickau Gymnasium; then matriculated at Leipzig Univ. to study law and philosophy. 1829 Heidelberg, where he also studied mus., practising the piano 7 hours a day; played once in public with great succ. 1830, Leipzig, where he lived with Friedrich Wieck, with whom he studied the piano; he also studied comp. with H. Dorn. In trying to acquire independence of the fingers by suspending the fourth finger of the right hand in a sling while practising with the others he crippled this finger and foiled his ambition to be the chief virtuoso of his time. He now made comp. his first ambition. In 1833, his first symph. was performed with little succ., the first movement having been played in public by Wieck's 13-year old daughter, Clara, with whom S. fell in love. The father liked S. as a son, but not as a son-in-law, and put every obstacle in his way, until in 1840, after a year's law-suit, the father was forced to consent and the two lovers, both now distinguished, were united in one of the happiest marriages known in art; she giving his work publicity in her very popular concerts; he devoted to her and dedicating much of his best work to her. 1834 he founded the "Neue Zeitschrift für Musik," and was its editor till 1844. His essays and criticisms (signed FLORESTAN, EUSEBIUS, MEISTER RARO, 2, 12, 22, ETC., JEANQUIRIT, etc.) are among the noblest works in the history of criticism, particularly in the matter of recognising new genius and heralding it fearlessly and fervently. (Chopin, Berlioz, and Brahms, profited by this quality. Of Wagner he did not altogether approve.) In his writings he constructed an imaginary band of ardent young Davids attacking the Goliath of Philistinism. He called this group the "Davidsbündler." His pen-name "EUSEBIUS," represents the vehement side of his nature, "FLORESTAN," the gentle and poetic side. His paper had some succ., which was not bettered by a removal to Vienna, 1838–39, and a return to Leipzig. 1840, Dr. Phil., Jena. 1840 was mainly devoted to his important song-composition; 1841 to symph. work; 1842 to chamber-mus., incl. his pf.-quintet (op. 44) which gave him European fame. 1843 was choral, "Das Paradies und Peri" (from Moore's "Lalla Rookh"), having a great succ.; he also began his choric mus. for "Faust." The same year, on the invitation of his warm personal friend Mendelssohn, he became teacher of pf. and comp., and of playing from score at the newly founded Leipzig Cons.; 1844, after going with his wife on a concert-tour to Russia, he removed to Dresden and resigned the editorship of the "Neue Zeitschrift"; lived at Dresden until 1850 teaching and composing such works as the great C-major symph, 1846, and the opera "Genoveva" (1848; prod. 1850 without succ.; its exclusion of recitative displeasing the public). 1847 cond. of the "Liedertafel"; 1848 organised the "Chorgesangverein." 1850, Düsseldorf as town mus.-dir. (vice Fd. Hiller). 1853, signs of insanity, first noted in 1833 and more in 1845, compelled him to retire. 1854 he threw himself into the Rhine, whence he was rescued by some boatmen; he was then taken to an asylum at Endenich near Bonn, where he remained in acute melancholia, varied by intervals of complete lucidity, when he composed as before. A complete ed. of his comps. is edited by Clara Schumann and publ. by Breitkopf & Härtel. It includes, besides the works mentioned, mus. to Byron's "Manfred," Goethe's "Faust," cantatas, "Der Rose Pilgerfahrt," with orch.; "Adventlied," for sopr., chorus and orch.; "Abschiedslied," chorus with wood-wind or pf.; requiem for "Mignon"; "Nachtlied," for chorus and orch.; ballades "Der Königssohn," "Des Sänger's Fluch" (op. 139), "Vom Pagen und der Königstochter," "Das Glück von Edenhall," and "Neujahrslied"; Missa sacra, and requiem mass, with orch.; 4 symphs. Schumann.

By Richard Aldrich.

SCHUMANN'S music falls into three groups or periods as easily as Beethoven's. There is first, the product of his early, exuberant style, those wonderful series of short piano pieces, slight in form, but soaring into imaginative power; saying little, but vaguely hinting at much. The second period is one of more self-centred activity, of greater poise, of more conservative methods; his ideal had expanded, and was leading him to compose in a larger mould, with a broader sweep of imagination, and with a greater regard for form as itself an element of beauty. And, in his last period, we must group those of his works that show the failing powers, the exhausted imagination of an intellect already overshadowed by its approaching doom. ¶ Schumann's beginnings in music were as nearly the spontaneous outpourings of himself as can well be thought of. It is difficult to derive the sources of even his first attempts from the music of his predecessors. He studied some of Hummel's works, and greatly admired Moscheles, and, the critics say, that the "Abegg" variations, Opus 1, are in the Hummel-Moscheles style. He was devoted to Schubert from his early years, and played his little piano pieces, especially the dances, with great love; perhaps the traces of this may be found in the Papillons, Opus 2. But even here, the influence, if there be any, related more to the concise and sententious form, the poetic content, than to the fibre of the music itself. It is not the kind of resemblance that you will find to Mozart and Haydn all through the earliest works of Beethoven. Bach, too, formed a part of young Schumann's musical daily bread; we may perhaps discern that influence in the instinctive feeling for contrapuntal movement—though of a very free, and, as it were, untechnical sort—in those earliest piano pieces; but here again comparison of the specifically musical style reveals nothing. ¶There is one influence, however, that cannot be overlooked in computing the forces bearing on Schumann's formative period; that is Jean Paul Richter. All readers of Schumann's letters know how steeped he was in the spirit of this singular German fantastic, this overwrought romantic symbolist, a story-teller, philosopher, and poet in one. He was all in all to Schumann; not only the young man's literary style—he was already a copious writer—but his very ideals in music, were moulded on Jean Paul's, and thickly overlaid with his mannerisms. For, in these early years of Schumann's life, music and poetry seem to meet on common ground, and to take their impulse from one and the same starting-point. In Jean Paul, all that charming crew of "Davidites," with "Florestan" and "Eusebius" as their forefront, have their prototypes ; and their appearance in the early Zeitschrift articles is no more characteristic of this influence than their appearance in the "Carnéval" and the "Davidsbündlertänze." ¶ With his attainment of his heart's desire in his marriage with Clara Wieck, in 1840, there seems to have come a mellowing, a ripening force in Schumann's musical inspiration—if you will, a conservative force that led him to see the significance and value of those musical forms to which he had at first been indifferent. Some of his ardent companions in the revolutionary parties of the earlier years saw in this a backsliding from his professions. But the fact that he parted company with "Florestan" and "Eusebius," and erased their names from the reissues of musical works once signed by them, can be for us naught but an indication of intellectual growth. We enjoy those romantic and engaging figures, but we see greater things than they were concerned with in the symphonies, the piano-quintette, the string-quartettes, the piano-concerto, the third part of "Faust," and "Paradise and the Peri." ¶ The contributions of Schumann to the development of the art are important and permanent. What he did to develop the expressive power of the pianoforte is all his own. He wrote for the instrument in a new way, calling for new and elaborate advances in technique—not the brilliant finger-dexterity of Chopin and Liszt, but a deeper underlying potency of expression through interlacing parts, skilfully disposed harmonies, the inner voices of chords, and through new demands as to variety of tone quality, contrasts of colour and the enrichment of the whole through pedal effects. It has been called a crabbed style, but it is no less idiomatic of the piano than the more open and brilliant manner that was developed at the same period by the virtuoso-school of pianoforte-playing and composition. ¶ Schumann's use of short pieces, in connected series, as an exposition of what is really a single poetic idea running through them all, is his own creation, and one that succeeding composers have made the most of. So is his idealised form of programme-music—music, that is, expressing some definite, concrete, external idea. But his wise judgment on music of this kind must always be kept in mind, that it must always be beautiful and intelligible as music without the need of explanation through titles, in which he saw only an aid or stimulus to the hearer's imagination. Space is lacking to discuss his later experiments in modifying or developing the classical or sonata form to increase its unity and its emotional potency, such as are to be found in the D-minor and C-major symphonies, and the piano-quintette. Schumann added something peculiarly his own to the Lied, in his enhancement of the accompaniment's significance, increasing its power of expression in co-operation, sometimes almost on equal terms with the voice, and, in many instances, giving its ritournelles or instrumental postludes an independent elaboration and meaning of their own. ¶ Schumann came of a well-to-do family, and his early general education and social surroundings had been far beyond those of most musicians. The fact that he was not only well read, but a writer himself of peculiar charm and individuality, a critic of quickening insight and generous discernment, reacted, as it needs must, on his music. Though he was, early in his youth, of a lively character, he was always disposed toward moodiness; and by the time he reached manhood he had fallen into a state of remarkable taciturnity and introspection. Wrapped in his own thoughts, he would, when in the company of friends or fellow-musicians, sit silent hour after hour, with his head leaning on his hand, often with an incipient smile upon his face, and with his lips pursed, as though to whistle. His letters show him to have been of a sweet and affectionate nature toward his family and intimates; kindly and generous in his estimate and treatment of others, yet roused to anger by a wrong, and capable of deep and glowing resentment. ¶ Schumann's place in modern music was slowly won, both in his native land and elsewhere, but there is little sign yet, of its being shaken. His symphonies suffer unduly, through their unskilful orchestration, in the estimation of a generation to whom fine feeling for orchestral colour is essential, but the magnificent elegance of the two great overtures (to "Manfred" and "Genoveva") is little discounted in this way; the string-quartettes and the piano-quintette and quartette seem to lose none of their beauty as they recede in historical perspective; the piano concertos, and a great number of the songs are heard repeatedly, every year, with unremitted joy. His solo piano-pieces appeal less and less to the taste of the latter-day piano-virtuoso who cannot utilise music calling so little for nimbleness of finger and brilliancy of effect; but it is impossible to deny that these pieces are still competent, as few others are, to serve deep and sincere music lovers "for the enjoyment of god at home." Schumann will always have a commanding hold, a commanding place in the nineteenth century, the century of evolution, the century that struck off the academic bonds from art. In the noble band of romantic adventurers into new and unexplored realms of music, Schumann was a leader, but he never failed in his bold and chivalrous championship of the rectitude of his art.

Son of poor peasants, who intended him for the church, he ran away, and an uncle, at San Vito, provided him with teaching. At 17 entered the Cons. della Pietà de' Turchini at Naples. 1796, commissioned to write an opera for the Teatro Argentina at Rome, its director having heard some of his church-mus. in Naples, he left the Cons. without permission and prod. succ. opera, "I Puntigli delle Donne"; Piccinni secured his reinstatement and gave him valuable advice. He prod. operas with succ. in various cities and in Palermo, where he was cond. to the Neapolitan court which had fled before the French. After having produced 16 light Italian operas, he went to Paris (1803), where three successive failures and a study of Mozart's works, led him to change his style. After supporting himself as a singing-teacher he won succ. with his substantial 1-act opera "Milton" (Th. Feydeau, Nov. 27, 1804); the Empress Josephine, to whom he had dedicated the score, appointed him "chamber-composer." He c. a cantata "L'eccelsa Gara," celebrating the victory of Austerlitz. The Empress's power secured a hearing for his opera "La Vestale," which after three years of delay and polishing, was prod. with greatest succ. 1807; by a unanimous verdict of the judges, Méhul, Gossec and Grétry, Napoleon's prize for the best dram. work of the decade was awarded to it. It was followed with equal succ. by the grand opera "Fernand Cortez," 1809. 1810, dir. It. opera; dismissed for financial irregularity; 1814, Louis XVIII. appointed him ct.-composer. He c. 2 stage-pieces in glorification of the Restoration. The opera "Olympie" was prod.

1819 without succ., though when revised and prod. 1826 it prospered. 1820, he became ct.-composer and gen. mus.-dir. at Berlin; he prod. his old operas with succ., and c. the festival play "Lalla Rukh" (1821), remodelled as "Nurmahal" (1822); "Alcidor" (1825) and "Agnes von Hohenstaufen" (1829), none of which were widely succ. A period of violent jealousies and quarrels with the Intendant Brühl, and virulent intrigues, culminated after a score of stormy years in his being royally reprimanded, and finally driven out of the theatre by a hostile audience. He retired in 1841 on full pay. He went to Paris, then to Italy. 1844 the Pope gave him the rank and title of "Conte di Sant' Andrea"; he was a knight of the Prussian "Ordre pour le mérite," member of the Berlin Akademie (1839), and Paris Académie, and Dr. Phil., Halle Univ. Steibelt (shtī'-bĕlt), Daniel, Berlin, 1765—St. Petersburg, 1823; a most unvirtuous virtuoso. Under patronage of the Crown Prince, a pupil of Kirnberger; early début; 1790, favourite pianist, teacher and composer at Paris; prod. v. succ. opera "Roméo et Juliette" (1793). He seems to have suffered from kleptomania and general dishonesty, which, with his insolence, snobbery, and his debts, forced him to leave Paris in 1797, for London, where he was equally succ.; the "Storm Rondo" (or the finale of his 3rd concerto "L'Orage, précédé d'un rondeau pastoral"), rivalling the notorious "Battle of Prague," by Koczwara. 1799, he toured Germany, challenging Beethoven at Vienna with disastrous results. He carried Haydn's "Creation" back to Paris and prod. it, 1800, with great succ., with himself as cembalist; but had to leave Paris again, remaining in London, until 1805, when he revisited Paris for 3 years; 1808 toured and settled in Petersburg; 1810, Imp. ct.-cond. and cond. of French Opera; here prod. 2 new operas, as well as earlier ones. In spite of his odious personality, his virtuosity was remarkable, and his compositions show much originality in modulation and scoring. He wrote a pop. pf.-method; c. 6 operas, 5 ballets, and much piano-mus., including 50 études, many programme-pcs. of extraordinary vogue.

Stradella (strä-dĕl'-lä), Alessandro, probably Naples or Venice, ca. 1645—Genoa, after 1681 (the date of his last cantata); important Italian composer, of whom little is actually known, though he is the hero of an extraordinarily melodramatic legend of jealous nobility, paid assassins, and love pursued. In a work by Bonnet-Bourdelot (1715), it is said that his name was Stradel and being engaged to write an opera for Venice, he eloped with the mistress of a nobleman who sent paid bravi to assassinate him in Rome. These men were overcome by the beauty of an oratorio of his and warned him of his danger. He fled to Turin with the woman who passed for his wife, and after being followed here and there, and recovering from numerous wounds, was finally slain in Genoa. Flotow made an opera of this story, in which there is much that is incredible. S. was also credited with being a singer and poet, and a wonderful harpist. In any case, 148 of his works exist in MS. in the Modena Library, and others elsewhere, incl. 8 oratorios, many cantatas, madrigals, duets, etc. The church-aria "Pietà, Signore," and the arias "O del mio dolce ardor" and "Se i miei sospiri," are probably wrongly attributed to him. Monographs by P. Richard, "A. Stradella" (1866), and Calelane.

Stradivari (Stradivarius) (sträd-ĭ-vä'-rē, or -vä'-rĭ-oos), (1) Antonio, Cremona, 1649 (1650?)—Dec. 17 (18?), 1737; maker of vlns., vlas., 'cellos, etc., who established a type and proportion never improved; his tone is also supreme among vlns. (with the possible exception of those of Jos. Guarneri); he probably worked for Niccolò Amati, 1667–79; 1680, he purchased the house in which his workshop thereafter was situated; 1700–25, is his best period, but he worked to 1736; his label reads "Antonius Stradivarius Cremonensis. Fecit Anno . . . (A ✝ S)." Of his eleven children, 2 sons, (2) Fran. (1671—1743) and (3) Omobono (1679—1742), were his assistants. Monographs, by Lombardini (1872), Fétis (1856); Wasielewski, and Riechers.

"Taillefer" (1902). Biog. by Dr. Arthur Seidl (Prague).

Richard Strauss.

By James Huneker.

THAT Richard Strauss was the son of the famous horn-player, may explain his predilection for the beautiful instrument. ¶At Meiningen he met Alexander Ritter, a pupil of Wagner, and this friendship, with Von Bülow's daily coaching, decided Richard Strauss's tendency in art. He became a composer of the future, a man of the new school. He travelled much—he went to Greece, Italy, and Egypt for incipient lung-trouble—and on "guesting" tours, on which he was received with enthusiasm, for he is a modern conductor in all the implications of the phrase. A man of good physique, Scandinavian in appearance, Strauss is widely cultured and well read in classical and modern literature. ¶In music he is a true descendant of Berlioz, Liszt, and Wagner, though early in his career he showed marked traces of a devotion to Brahms. This is more noticeable in his piano and orchestra Burleske in D minor, in the solo sonata and in the "Wanderer's Sturmlied," opus 14, for six-voiced chorus and orchestra. But the Richard Strauss we know to-day stands for all that is revolutionary in the art. ¶He has in his symphonic forms pushed to the verge of the sublime—or the ridiculous,—or both—the poetic programme (Vide D. D., "program music"). His "Don Juan," "Macbeth," "Death and Transfiguration," "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," "Thus Spake Zarathustra," "Don Quixote," and "Ein Heldenleben" are tokens of labours almost Balzacian in their intensity. An emotional strenuousness, a marvellous mastery of the orchestral apparatus, an abnormal colour and rhythmic sense, combined with poetic feeling, bizarre, even grotesque methods of utterance, an utter defiance of formalism either classic or romantic, and a thematic invention not commensurate with his other gifts—all these qualities jumbled in amazing juxtaposition and flavoured by a powerful individuality, easily made Richard Strauss the leader of the New German School and a formidable figure in the musical arena. ¶Since his flaming utterances in "Don Quixote" and "A Hero's Career" the faith of some of his most ardent disciples has been rudely shaken. "Either retreat or madness" is the critical cry, and Strauss is not a man to be moved by prayer or assault. So we find his two new solos for barytone and orchestra, sung at the Lower Rhine Festival, June, 1900, in Aix-la-chapelle, more eccentric than ever. ¶A brilliant composer, a strikingly intellectual man, Richard Strauss to-day may be fairly called the leader of the musical Decadence. As a song-writer his various collections have met with the greatest success, for he has a happy method of welding music and poem into a perfect, if somewhat startling, whole. Form he abandons utterly, striving to capture the idea as he perceives it, in its full bloom. Opera 10, 15, 17, 127, 29, 32, are favourites; the newer songs are very difficult and almost cryptic in sentiment and execution. Richard Strauss is the greatest living master of the orchestra.

Tschaikowsky.

By Ernest Newman.

HALF French in his ancestry, Tschaikowsky's prenatal influences were a blend of East and West. While Westerns regard him as typically Russian, his compatriots think him less "native" than other Russian composers. Like most Slavs, he drew sustenance more from France than Germany. Brahms he thought dull; Wagner he never really understood. He loved music, he said, that came from the heart, that expressed "a deep humanity," like Grieg's. To the delicate brain and nerves of the modern man he added the long-accumulated eruptive passions of his race. He takes the language made by the great Germans, and uses it to express the complex pessimism of another culture. The colour of life in his music ranges from pale grey to intense black, with here and there a note of angry scarlet tearing through the mass of cloud. Almost all his work, like Tourgenieff's, lies within the one scale of emotions; but from relatively few elements he evokes an infinite variety and complexity. In his songs, for example, though melancholy is the dominant note of nine out of ten, each paints a different shade of the generic mood. ¶More interested in personal, dramatic emotion than in music of abstract beauty, he worked his way through and beyond the ordinary symphonic form, to the symphony with a human significance or the symphonic poem pure and simple. His phrases, scoring his general conceptions, are vital, emotional, intimate. Music, he held, must always interest in the first place; and so he avoids the cold displays of technical artifice which Brahms, for example, so often gives us, preferring rather to repeat the old matter with variations of ornamentation. ¶His real contribution to the history of music, apart from the general beauty and expressiveness of his work, is the modification of the symphonic form in obedience to a poetic idea. He takes up the suggestions bequeathed by Berlioz and Liszt, and turns them into accomplished realities.

Verdi (vĕr'-dē), (Fortunio) Giuseppe (Fran.), Le Roncole, near Busseto, Duchy of Parma, Oct. 9, 1813—Milan, Jan. 27, 1901; eminent Italian opera composer. Son of an innkeeper and grocer; pupil, and at 10 successor of the village organist, Baistrocchi, for three years pupil of Provesi at Busseto; 1831 with the aid of his father's friend, Barezzi, he went to Milan, where he was refused admission to the Cons. by Basili, who thought him lacking in mus. talent. He became a pupil of Lavigna, cembalist, at La Scala; 1833, cond. Philh. Soc., and organist at Busseto; 1836 m. Barezzi's daughter Margherita. 1839, his opera "Oberto" was prod. with fair succ. at La Scala, Milan. He was commissioned by Merelli, the manager, to write three operas, one every eight months, at 4,000 lire ($800 or £160) apiece, and half the copyright. The first was a comic opera "Un Giorno di Regno," which failed (1840), doubtless in part because his two children and wife had died within three months. V.'s combined distress drove him to rescind his agreement and renounce composition for over a year, when he was persuaded by Merelli to set the opera "Nabucco" ("Nebuchadrezzar"), prod. at La Scala, 1842, with great applause, the chief rôle being taken by Giuseppina Strepponi (1815–97), whom he m. in 1844. "I Lombardi alla prima Crociata" (La Scala, 1843) was still more succ. and is still played in Italy (in Paris as "Jérusalem"). "Ernani" (Venice, 1844) was prod. on 15 different stages in 9 months. 8 unsucc. works followed, incl. "I due Foscari" (Rome, 1844), "Macbeth" (Florence, 1847; revised Paris, 1865), and "I Masnadieri" (after Schiller's "Robbers" London, H. M. Th., 1847). "Luisa Miller" (Naples, 1849) was well received and is still sung in Italy. "Stiffelio" (Trieste, 1850); later as "Guglielmo Welingrode"; also with another libretto as "Arnoldo" (1857), was three times a failure. "Rigoletto," c. in 40 days (Venice) (also given as "Viscardello"), began a three years' period of universal succ., it was followed by the world-wide successes "Il Trovatore" (Rome, 1853) and "La Traviata" (Venice Th., 1853; also given as "Violetta"), a fiasco at first because of a poor cast; "Les Vêpres Siciliennes" (Paris Opéra, 1855; in Italian "I Vespri Siciliani"; also given as "Giovanna di Guzman") was fairly succ.; "Simon Boccanegra" (Venice, 1857; succ. revised, Milan, 1881), "Un Ballo in Maschera" (Rome, 1859), "La Forza del Destino" (Petersburg, 1862), and "Don Carlos" (Paris, Opéra, 1867), made no deep impression, though they served as a schooling and marked a gradual broadening from mere Italian lyricism to a substantial harmony and orchestration. "Aïda" (written for the Khedive of Egypt) was prod. Cairo, 1871, at La Scala, Milan, 1872, and has had everywhere a great succ. The Khedive gave him £3,000 for it. His "Manzoni Requiem" (1874) made a sensation in Italy; "Otello" (Milan, 1887) was a work worthy of its composer, and in his last opera "Falstaff," written at the age of eighty, he showed not only an unimpaired but a progressive and novel style. He also c. 2 symphs., 6 pf.-concertos, "Inno delle Nazioni," for the London Exhibition (1862), songs, etc.

In 1893 he was given the title "Marchese di Busseto." He lived at his villa Sant' Agata, near Busseto. His funeral brought 100,000 witnesses, though his will ordered that it should be simple and quiet. He left the bulk of his fortune to the home for aged and outworn musicians.

Giuseppe Verdi.

By W. J. Henderson.

VERDI has been the representative Italian opera composer of his time and his personal development in art is that of his country, which has followed his dominating influence. He began to write in the prevalent style of the old Italian school, but even in his early works, which had striking resemblances to those of Donizetti and Bellini, he showed a rude vigour not possessed by either of them. ¶ This vigour came conspicuously into notice in his "Ernani," though the most familiar example of his style in this period of his development is "Rigoletto." The early works show fecundity of melodic invention, but a close adherence to the elementary dance rhythms used by the Neapolitan school. The dramatic element and the virile power of the man, however, continually pressed toward the front till in "Aïda," in which the Egyptian subject lured him away from conventions into originality of colour, he entered upon a new field and established himself as a new individuality in music. He idealised the old aria, employed all the resources of modern instrumentation in the orchestral part, and sought for truthful dramatic expression as none of his predecessors had. "Aïda" has been the model of the younger Italian school and its influence can be traced through the works of such writers as Mascagni, Leoncavallo, and Puccini. ¶ In "Otello" Verdi left the old Italian patterns still further behind him, yet without ceasing to be Italian in style or individual in ideas. The voice parts are dominant and essentially melodious at all times, but the determination of the composer to be faithful to the spirit of the text is more manifest than ever before. The work is a monument of genius. In his "Falstaff" Verdi produced a comic opera which stands next to Mozart's "Nozze di Figaro" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." The freshness and spontaneity of the score, the marvellous eloquence of the orchestral details and the infinite significance of the recitative make this work one of the masterpieces of modern times. The advance of Verdi from the "drum and trumpet" operas of his youth to the highly organised, subtly significant and opulent scores of his old age, is the feature of his artistic career, and where he has led, Italy has followed. He was the master and the moulder of Italian musical thought for half a century.

(10) (Wm.) Richard, Leipzig, May 22, 1813—(of eyrsipelas) Venice, Feb. 13, 1883; eminent opera composer; son of a clerk in the city police-court, who died when W. was six months old; the mother m. an actor and playwright, Ludwig Geyer of Dresden. W. attended the Dresden Kreuzschule until 1827; he transl. 12 books of the Odyssey, and at 14 wrote a bombastic and bloody Shakespearean tragedy; 1827, he studied at the Nikolai Gymnasium, Leipzig, where the family lived while his sister Rosalie was engaged at the City Theatre there. Wagner was impelled music-ward by hearing a Beethoven symph. and took up Logir's "Thoroughbass." He then studied theory with the organist Gottlieb Müller and c. a string-quartet, a sonata and an aria. 1830, after matriculation at Leipzig Univ., he studied six months with Th. Weinlig (comp.) and c. a pf.-sonata, and a 4-hand polonaise. He studied Beethoven's symphs. very thoroughly. At 19 he c. a symph. in 4 movements, prod. at the Gewandhaus, Leipzig, 1833. He wrote the libretto for an opera, "Die Hochzeit," an introduction, septet, and a chorus 1832, but his sister Rosalie thought it immoral and he gave it up; 1833 his brother Albert, stage-manager and singer at the Würzburg Theatre invited him to be chorusm. there. He c. a romantic opera in 3 acts "Die Feen," to his own libretto (after "La Donna serpente," by Gozzi); it was accepted but never performed, by the Leipzig th.-dir. Ringelhardt (given at Munich, 1888). 1834, he became cond. at the Magdeburg Th. Here he c. (text and music) "Das Liebesverbot (after Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure"), performed by a bankrupt troupe, 1836. Th.-cond. at Königsberg, and m. (1836) an actress Wilhelmine Planer, who d. 1866, after they had separated in 1861.

He c. an overture "Rule Britannia." 1837 cond. Riga opera. Moved by Meyerbeer's triumphs at the Gr. Opéra at Paris, W. went there, July, 1839, by sea. The voyage lasted 3½ weeks and was very stormy; the experience suggested to him the opera "Flying Dutchman." Meyerbeer gave him letters to musicians and pubs. in Paris; here he suffered poverty and supported himself by song-writing, arranging dances for piano and cornet, preparing the pf.-score of Halévy's "Reine de Chypre," and writing articles. His operas were scornfully rejected and he could get no hearing till the v. succ. "Rienzi" was prod., Dresden, 1842, and "Der Fliegende Holländer," Jan. 2, 1843. The novelties in this work provoked a furious opposition that never ceased. 1843–49 he was cond. of Dresden Opera, also cond. Dresden Liedertafel, for which he wrote a biblical scene, "Das Liebesmahl der Apostel," for 3 choirs, a cappella, later with full orch. "Tannhäuser" was prod., Dresden, 1845, with succ. in spite of bitter opposition. In 1848 "Lohengrin" was finished; but the mgr. of the Opera did not care to risk the work. He now wrote out a little sketch "Die Nibelungen, Weltgeschichte aus der Sage"; a prose study on "Der Niebelungen-Mythus als Entwurf zu einem Drama" (1848), and a 3-act drama with Prologue, written in alliterative verse, "Siegfried's Tod," preparations for the great work to follow. A rashly expressed sympathy with the revolutionary cause (1849) made flight necessary; he went to Weimar with Liszt, but had to go on to Paris to escape the order for his arrest. 1849 he proceeded to Zurich, were he wrote a series of remarkable essays: "Die Kunst und die Revolution" (1849), "Das Kunstwerk der Zukunft," "Kunst und Klima," "Das Judenthum in der Musik" (1850), "Oper und Drama," "Erinnerungen an Spontini," a prose drama "Wieland der Schmiedt," and the 3 poems of the Niebelungen trilogy (privately printed 1853). The music of "Das Rheingold" was finished 1854, "Die Walküre," 1856. He cond. orch. concerts with much succ., lectured on the mus. drama, prod. "Tannhäuser" (Zurich, 1855); 1855 he cond. 8 concerts of the London Philh. Soc. 1857 he left "Siegfried" unfinished and c. "Tristan und Isolde." 1860 he gave concerts of his own works, winning many enthusiastic enemies and some valuable friends. The French Emperor ordered "Tannhäuser" to be prod. at the Gr. Opéra, March 13, 1861. It provoked such an elaborate and violent opposition (for omitting the ballet) that it was withdrawn after the third performance.

W. was now permitted to return to Germany; "Tristan" was accepted at the Vienna ct.-opera, but after 57 rehearsals the singers declared it impossible to learn. In 1863, he pub. text of the "Nibelung Ring" despairing of ever completing the mus. When his financial state was most desperate, King Ludwig II. of Bavaria (1864) invited him to Munich and summoned von Bülow as cond. to prod. "Tristan und Isolde" (June 10, 1865); but opposition was so bitter that W. settled at Triebschen, Lucerne, and completed the scores of "Die Meistersinger" (prod. Munich, 1868) and "Der Ring des Nibelungen," "Siegfried" (1869) and "Götterdämmerung" (1874).

1870 he m. Cosima, the divorced wife of von Bülow and natural daughter of Liszt. Since his death she has had charge of the Bayreuth Festivals. Though King Ludwig's scheme for a special Wagner Theatre in Munich was given up, there were by this enough Wagner-lovers and societies throughout the world, to subscribe funds for a theatre at Bayreuth, where the corner-stone was laid in 1872, on his 60th birthday. In August, 1876, complete performances of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" were given there under most splendid auspices, but with a deficit $37,500, paid off by a partially succ. festival in London, 1877, and by the setting aside of the royalties from performances at Munich. He now set to work on the "Bühnenweihfestspiel" (Stage - consecrating - festival - play). "Parsifal," finished, and prod. in 1882. The same year ill-health sent him to Venice, where he d. suddenly. His writings (extravagantly praised and condemned) are pub. in various eds. There is an English translation in 8 volumes, by Wm. Ashton Ellis. Besides his operas and the other works mentioned he c. a symph. (1832); 6 overtures, incl. "Konzertouvertüre ziemlich fugirt," "Polonia," "Columbus," "Rule Britannia"; "New Year's Cantata"; incid. mus. to Gleich's farce "Der Berggeist" (Magdeburg, 1836); "Huldigungsmarsch" (1864, finished by Raff); "Siegfried Idyll" (1870, for his son then a year old), "Kaisermarsch" (1870), "Festival March" (for the Centennial Exposition Philadelphia, 1876), "Gelegenheits-Cantata" (for unveiling a statue of King Friedrich, August, 1843), "Gruss an den König" (1843, pf.), "An Weber's Grabe" (Funeral March for wind-instrs. on motives from Weber's "Euryanthe," and double quartet for voices, 1844). FOR PF.: sonata; polonaise, for four hands; fantaisie, "Albumsonate, für Frau Mathilde Wesendonck" (1853); "Ankunft bei den Schwarzen Schwanen" (1861); "Ein Albumblatt für Fürstin Metternich" (1861), "Albumblatt für Frau Betty Schott" (1875). SONGS: "Carnavalslied" from "Das Liebesverbot" (1835–36); "Dors, mon enfant," "Mignonne," "Attente" (1839–40), "Les deux Grenadiers" (1839); "Der Tannenbaum" (1840); "Kraftliedchen" (1871), "Fünf Gedichte;" 1, "Der Engel"; 2, "Stehe still"; 3, "Im Treibhaus"; 4, "Schmerzen"; 5, "Träume" (1862).

Wagner.

BY HENRY T. FINCK.

WHEN Richard Wagner was living as a political refugee in Switzerland, at the age of thirty-six, he elaborated his theory of the "art-work of the future" in a long essay. Reduced to one sentence, this theory was, that music, poetry, painting, sculpture, and architecture had run their course as separate arts, and that the art-work of the future was to be a combination of them. At a later period he tried to make Beethoven responsible for this theory, so far at least as the union of poetry and music is concerned. Beethoven, he argued, wrote his first eight symphonies for instruments alone, but when he composed the Ninth, the greatest of them all, he reached a point in the last movement, where the orchestra no longer sufficed for his purposes, so he called in the aid of the human voice and poetry —Schiller's "Ode to Joy." This symphony thus became "the gospel of the art-work of the future"; and beyond it, Wagner maintained, progress was possible only in the direction of the genuine music-drama; "the key to which was thus forged by Beethoven." And when the corner-stone for the Bayreuth Theatre—in which the "art-work of the future" was to be presented to the world—was laid, Wagner significantly made it the occasion for the performance of this epoch-making Ninth Symphony. ¶ Undoubtedly it was a stroke of genius on the part of Wagner thus to turn the tables on his enemies—who had decried him as a heretic and a foe to music—by claiming their very idol as the sire of his new doctrine. In truth, however, it is not at all probable that Beethoven had in mind any such purpose as Wagner imputes to him. There is no reference to anything of the kind among the biographic documents, whereas, it is known, on the other hand, that Beethoven had been intending nearly all his life to set to music Schiller's "Ode to Joy." According to Czerny, he subsequently even pronounced this experiment of incorporating the Ode in his symphony a mistake (Missgriff). The voice, in truth, was never congenial to him. "Songs I do not like to write," he said to Rochlitz, in 1822, the very time when he was at work on the "Ninth Symphony." In both this work and the "Missa Solennis," of the same period, Beethoven, moreover, uses the human voice like an instrument, and it is probable that in each case his object in employing it was not so much to secure an alliance with poetry as to increase the power of his musical forces, and to enlarge the variety of tone-colours by adding to the orchestra the human voice, alone, concerted, and in massive choral combination. ¶ Wagner's musical pedigree must therefore be sought elsewhere. His ancestry might be traced back as far as Peri and the other originators of Italian opera who (strange as it may seem to us who know only the later Italian opera which Wagner reviled) represented a protest in favor of poetry against the tyranny of music in the marriage of these arts. Wagner's whole art was such a protest, and his more immediate progenitor in this respect was Gluck, who found that Italian opera had gradually become ridiculous through the "vanity of singers and the unwise compliance of composers;" and who, therefore, endeavoured to reduce operatic music to its proper function; that of seconding the poetry and deepening the feeling it arouses. Gluck's idea that the relation of poetry to music was much the same as that of a sketch to the colour, "which animates their figures without altering their outlines" was cordially endorsed and adopted by Wagner. ¶ The next step in the evolution of Wagnerism is represented by Weber, his indebtedness to whom Wagner frankly acknowledged in several places. He declared that the last scenes in Weber's "Euryanthe" realised the ideal of musico-dramatic art, as here the orchestra "interpenetrates the recitatives as the blood does the veins of the body." What Weber himself wrote about this opera: "'Euryanthe' is a purely dramatic work, which depends for its success solely on the co-operation of the sister arts, and is certain to lose its effect if deprived of their assistance," shows that his ideal was the same as Wagner's. Had he lived longer, and had he possessed Wagner's pugnacity and iron will, he might have been the man to annihilate the old-fashioned opera and triumphantly establish the modern music-drama. He even made use of leading motives [vide D. D.]. His early opera "Abu Hassan" has a melody which is afterwards repeated in a reminiscent way. The "Freyschütz" has eleven recurring melodies, and "Euryanthe" has eight. ¶ While the germs and main principles of Wagnerism may thus be found in Peri, Monteverde, Gluck, and Weber, it remained for Wagner's genius to develop and apply them. Gluck's operas were still far from being perfect works of art. To cite Wagner's own words: "In Gluck's operas we find the aria, the recitative, the ballet still placed side by side without any connection;" while opera in general remained after him, as before, a mere variety show, with here a pretty tune, there a graceful skip of a dancer or a brilliant feat of vocalisation, here a dazzling scenic effect, there a volcanic outburst of the orchestra, and the whole without artistic coherence. If a painter put on a canvas a number of human figures and diverse objects totally unrelated to each other, no one would call it a work of art, however well done each figure might be in itself. The opera before Wagner was such a canvas. He was the first who made a genuine picture of it—an art-work organically united in all its parts. He did this by means of the leading motives—the typical melodies and characteristic harmonies which accompany each of the dramatis personæ throughout the score, just as their social and moral character accompanies them, with such modifications as the situation calls for. Weber had used leading motives as we have seen, but only in an elementary way. It remained for Wagner to make them the very framework of the music-drama. He thus taught music to speak a definite language, so that we can almost tell by listening to the orchestra alone what is going on on the stage. ¶ His whole aim and desire was to make the drama impressive and intelligible. For this reason he discarded the tuneful style of vocalism in vogue in Italian opera and developed a new vocal style—a sort of melodious declamation or "speech-song." This led to the ridiculous accusation that there was "no melody" in his operas, whereas the orchestral score usually bubbles over with melodies—often two or more at a time. After the singers had begun to master the new vocal style, it was found, moreover, that an artist like Lilli Lehmann or Jean de Reszké can make this speech-song sound smooth, and melodious, too—as smooth and melodious as the bel canto of Rossini and Mozart. And after the singers had learned how to act, and to enunciate distinctly, opera-goers learned that Wagner had written stage-works which were quite as impressive poetically as they were musically. He had an immense advantage over all other composers in being able to write his own poems. His best ten operas—"The Flying Dutchman," "Tannhäuser," "Lohengrin," "Rheingold," "Walküre," "Siegfried," "Götterdämmerung," "Tristan," "Meister- singer," and "Parsifal"—apart from the music, rank among the best plays ever written in Germany ; though to be sure they must not be judged apart from the music any more than the music must be judged apart from the poems. The ludicrous opinions on these works formerly expressed by so many professional musicians and critics were due chiefly to the fact that they did not bear this in mind, though Wagner protested on every possible occasion that he must not be judged from the stand-point of the separate arts, but of the combined arts. The greatest defects in the present-day performances of his operas is owing to this, that few stage-managers have yet learned that he expects them to be artistic, too, familiar with every detail of the work, so that they can show how every incident on the stage is mirrored and emphasised in the orchestral score. There is much delightful pantomimic music in these operas, the meaning of which is lost if the stage-manager is a bungler, and the singers poor actors. ¶ With all these reforms and innovations, Wagner never could have become the most commanding figure in the modern music-world had he not been endowed at the same time with the faculty for creating an extraordinary abundance of ideas, melodic and harmonic. Wilhelm Tappert has truly observed that there is more melody in Wagner's "Meistersinger" than in all the operas of the melodious Mozart. In the field of harmony and modulation Wagner was an innovator of unprecedented originality. There can be no tragic expression without discord, and he was the greatest of all masters of discord—the musical tragedian par excellence. In orchestration, too—the art of clothing his ideas in beautiful garbs of various colours—he was without a rival. ¶ As Schubert influenced all song-writers after him, Chopin all the pianoforte-composers, and Beethoven all the symphonists, so Wagner has cast his spell on every writer for the stage. "Wagner is the oxygen, the atmosphere which modern opera breathes," writes Ferdinand Pfohl ; and he hardly exaggerates when he adds that "modern opera, apart from Wagner's art is an empty word, a phantom. It does not exist." The minor composers of all countries have been indulging for nearly half a century in a very bacchanal of plagiarism at his expense, while even the greatest of living masters—Dvořák, Grieg, Saint-Saëns, Richard Strauss—have honestly profited by his example in various branches of music. Rubinstein committed suicide by trying to swim against the current. The German school of opera, the French, and even the Italian have followed Wagner in abandoning colorature song and elaborate arias, in giving greater coherence to their scores, and in showing a decent regard for their texts. In these respects even Verdi, greatest of the Italians, has in his last period, paid homage to Wagner's genius.

(12) K. Maria (Fr. Ernst), Freiherr von, Eutin, Oldenburg, Dec. 18, 1786—(of consumption) London, June 5, 1826; son of the second wife of (2) and cousin, by marriage, of Mozart; the founder of German national opera (Wagner shows his influence deeply), and of the Romantic Sch.; perhaps the most widely influential German composer of the cent. More important, in cold fact, as a path-finder, and an influence, than as an artistic individuality; he was also a notable pianist (he could stretch a 12th), and a pioneer in modern pianistic composition. At first a pupil of his step-bro. (11). His mother, Genoveva (d. 1798, of consumption), was a dram. singer, and the family led a wandering life. At 10 he became pf.-pupil of J. P. Heuschkel. As a chorister in the cathedral at Salzburg, 1797, he had gratuitous lessons in comp. from Michael Haydn, to whom he dedicated his first published comps., six fughettas (1798). 1798–1800, at Munich, he studied singing with Valesi, and comp. with Kalcher. At 12 he c. an opera (the MS. lost or burned). He also appeared as concert-pianist. He met Aloys Senefelder, the inv. of lithography, and engraved his own op. 2, 1800, and made improvements in the process. At 13 he c. and prod. with succ. the opera "Das Waldmädchen" (Freiberg, also played at Chemnitz, Prague, Vienna and St. Petersburg). In 1801, he c. a third opera "Peter Schmoll und seine Nachbarn" (Augsburg, 1803?); 1803, in Vienna, he became a pupil of Abbé Vogler. 1804, cond. Breslau City Th.; resigned 1806; supported himself by lessons, then mus.-intendant to Duke Eugen of Würtemberg; 1807, private secretary to Duke Ludwig at Stuttgart, and mus.-master to his children. In a turmoil of intrigue and dissipation he forgot his art, until he became involved in a quarrel leading to his banishment in 1810. This sobered him and awoke his better self. Going to Mannheim, he prod. his first symph.; then rejoined Abbé Vogler, at Darmstadt. His opera "Silvana" was prod. (Frankfort-on-Main, 1810), and "Abu Hassan," a comic Singspiel (Munich, 1811). He made a concert-tour to various cities. 1813, cond. of the Landständisches Th. at Prague, where he reorganised the opera, and won such note that in 1816 the King of Saxony called him to Dresden to reorganise the Royal Opera. At 20 he began "Der Freischütz," but gave it up till later (the incid. mus. to Wolff's "Preciosa" took 3 weeks). In 1817, he m. the singer Karoline Brandt, a member of his company to whom he had long been engaged. They toured together as pianist and singer. "Der Freischütz" was prod. with tremendous succ., Berlin, 1821; its strong nationalism provoking a frenzy of admiration. But "Euryanthe" (Vienna, 1823) had much less succ. 1824, he was commissioned to write "Oberon," for Covent Garden, London, but consumption delayed its completion; it was prod. (London, 1826) with much succ. He lived only eight weeks longer; his body was taken to the family vault at Dresden. [See also pages 785 and 786.]

Place of action: Egypt, in the early Christian Era.

Act I.— Scene I. A settlement of hermit Cenobites on the Nile. Twelve holy men are eating their frugal meal, among them Palémon. They are awaiting the return of Athanaël. He returns from Alexandria fagged and dejected, and describes the power of a priestess of Venus named Thaïs, whom he had known in his youth and whom now he wishes to save. Palémon and the others warn him not to meddle with such evil, and Athanaël falls asleep. In a vision he beholds a crowded theatre where the half-naked Thaïs postures. As the vision vanishes, he awakens with horror and vows to save her, praying for aid to the God of Pity (Toi qui mis la pitié dans nos âmes). The Cenobites anxiously bid him farewell.

Scene II. The terrace of the palace of Nicias. Athanaël with difficulty persuades a slave to summon his master. While he waits, he contemplates the panorama of the terrible city (Voilà donc la terrible cité). He calls upon the angels to purify its corruption, as Nicias appears laughing with two slave girls, Crobyle and Myrtale. He welcomes Athanaël as an old friend. Athanaël speaks of Thaïs, for whom Nicias has bankrupted himself. He warns Athanaël against her, but consents to arrange their meeting. In fact she is expected for supper this night. Athanaël asks for decent raiment, and the slave girls laughingly adorn and perfume him, until they find him beautiful as a young god. A great throng of revellers and philosophers pour in, preceding Thaïs. She arrives for her last visit with Nicias after "one whole long week of constancy." She meets Athanaël and demands why he is so severe (Qui te fait si sévère). She swears that nothing is real but love, and invites him to wreathe his head with roses and watch her posturing again as Aphrodite. But he flees in horror.

Act II.— Scene. The home of Thaïs. She dismisses her friends wearily, and, left alone, begs her faithful mirror to reassure her that she will always be beautiful (Dis-moi que je suis toujours belle). She sees Athanaël, who declares that he loves her, but not as she understands. A duel between sacred and profane love ensues, and each begins to influence the other strangely. Thaïs sprinkles incense on the altar of Venus, and Athanaël trembles. But he tears away his gorgeous robe and reveals himself as a monk, cursing her life and bidding her forsake it. She throws herself at his feet and the voice of Nicias heard in the distance fills her with loathing. Athanaël tells her that he will wait for her on her doorstep until dawn, but she turns against him and drives him out; then falls weeping on her pillows.

After a symphonic interlude in the form of religious meditation, the scene changes to a square before her house.

In the moonlight Athanaël is seen lying on the steps. In the distance, the home of Nicias is brilliant and noisy with revelry.

Thaïs appears and Athanaël promises to lead her to a monastery in the desert. But first she must destroy all the monuments of her shame. She must burn her house and her goods. She consents, but asks only to save one little ivory image of Cupid, for "Love is a virtue rare" (L'amour est une vertu rare). She wishes to take this image to the convent; it was a gift from Nicias. Athanaël hurls the statuette to the ground. Thaïs meekly submits and they go within to burn the palace. Nicias and a crowd of revellers fill the square. The two slave girls sing of a new charmer, who is more beautiful than the Queen of Sheba (Celle qui vient est plus belle). At the end of this duet and during the dance, Athanaël appears with a lighted torch, leading Thaïs meanly clad and followed by her sorrowful slaves. While the palace burns, the crowd turns on Athanaël and Thaïs and would stone them, but Nicias saves them from violence by throwing gold into the mob.

Act III.— Scene I. The oasis, with the white cells of the retreat of the nuns of Albine. Thaïs and Athanaël, greatly fatigued, struggle in. He is rough with her until she swoons; then a change comes over him and his heart bleeds for her bleeding feet, which he kisses, hailing her as a saint. He goes to the well for water, and she blesses him as a messenger from God (O messager de Dieu). He brings her water and fruits while the white nuns of Albine appear singing a Latin hymn. Athanaël greets Albine and presents Thaïs to her. Thaïs bids Athanaël farewell forever. The word shocks him, and as he sees her led away in Albine's arms, a cry of anguish escapes him.

Scene II. The Cenobite settlement again with a night of storm coming on. Athanaël has returned and spent twenty days of fasting. He comes out of his hut and asks Palémon to confess him. In saving the soul of Thaïs, he has lost his own. His mind is filled with visions of Aphrodite. He falls asleep and sees her again in all her fleshly charms. The vision vanishes in strident laughter, giving place to a new vision, the Monastery of Albine, where Thaïs, all in white, is dying, surrounded by the kneeling nuns. Athanaël awakens in a frenzy of revolt and dashes out to reclaim her.

The scene changes to the Convent garden, where Albine and the nuns moan over the saintly Thaïs, who has saved her soul, but worn out her life with her penances. Athanaël appears and is greeted with respect as a venerable saint. He drags himself on his knees to the side of Thaïs, who weakly reminds him that his promise of Heaven and redemption are fulfilled. She sees the angels and God. But Athanaël protests that nothing is true but life and love. And when she dies, he falls to the ground with a terrible cry.

Act I.— Scene. The Square of a Bohemian village during a Spring Church Festival. The chorus is rejoicing in the coming of Spring, but Marie is sad. Hans, her lover, asks her why, and is told that she is to be the bartered bride of the son of Micha. She is puzzled at the calmness of Hans, and asks him to explain the mystery of his origin. He tells her that he is the son of a rich man, but he left home on the death of his mother. He bids her to be of good cheer and goes. She hides as her father and mother, Kruschina and Kathinka, come in with the marriage broker, Kezal. Kezal has arranged a marriage for Marie with the son of Micha, whose elder son has disappeared. Kezal sings the praises of the younger son, Wenzel. Marie appears and refuses the match declaring her love for Hans. Kezal shows the agreement with Micha, but Marie knocks it out of his hand. Kezal promises to talk to Hans, and the act ends with a country dance, called "the hen."

Act II.— Scene. A room in the inn, Hans at one table, Kezal at another. A beer-chorus is sung and Hans toasts love, while Kezal toasts cash. After a wild dance called a "furiant" the scene is emptied, and Wenzel enters stuttering a song about his mother's advice to her "Dear Son" (Theu' . . . theurer Sohn). Marie appears and is amused at her prospective bridegroom, but Wenzel does not suspect her identity. She persuades him that Marie will be a wretched wife, and promises to find him another. He repeats her oath that he will forswear Marie, and follows her when she runs away. Kezal drags Hans in and begs him not to interfere with the wedding. Kezal described love as a folly (Wer in Lieb' entbrannt). He promises to get Hans another bride and to give him three hundred gulden. Hans consents on one condition, that Marie shall marry no one but Micha's son. The duped Kezal hurries away in delight to draw up the contract, and Hans rejoices in the happiness awaiting him (Es muss gelingen). Kezal returns with the others and reads the marriage contract by which Hans gives up all claims to Marie in favour of the son of Micha. Hans signs the paper while the villagers revile him for selling his bride.

Act III.— Scene. The same room. Wenzel is grieving that Marie has escaped him, when Springer, a circus man, arrives with his troupe, including Esmeralda, the tight-rope walker, a wild Indian chief and a great trained bear. A brief performance is given and Wenzel falls in love with Esmeralda. The Indian chief tells Springer that the actor who plays the trained bear is drunk. In his desperation Springer appeals to Wenzel to join the troupe and promises him a life of joy with Esmeralda, who teaches him how to dance as a bear. His mother, Agnes, his father, Micha, and Kezal arrive to lead him to the ceremony; but he declines the marriage. Marie rushes in in an agony of grief because Hans has betrayed her and sold her. Left alone, she broods upon her sorrow (Wie fremd und todt ist Alles umher). Hans rushes to her, but is repulsed, and she announces that she will marry Wenzel. Kezal appears and Hans still appeals for trust (Gesegnet, wer da liebt und auch vertraut!) The others return and Hans is recognized by his father and mother. Marie, understanding his plot rushes to his arms, and Kezal dashes away from the general ridicule. Loud cries are heard that the bear has escaped and there is a general panic, but the bear exclaims "Don't be afraid! I'm only We-We-Wenzel!" and the opera ends in cries of "Long life to the Bartered Bride."

SALOMÉ.....sopr.

The story is based upon the account in the New Testament. Salome is the daughter of Herodias by her first husband, Herod Phillip. The second husband, Herod Antipas, has imprisoned Iokanaan (John the Baptist) in a well because he denounced Herod for marrying his own brother's wife.

Scene. A terrace of Herod's palace above the banquet hall. At the back, an old cistern. Soldiers are leaning over the balcony and watching the banquet, discussing the beauty of Salome, the quarrelsomeness of the Jews and the gloom of Herod. Narraboth, a young Syrian, Captain of the Guard, stares with idolatry at Salome. The voice of Iokanaan is heard from the well, prophesying the coming of a mightier than he. The Cappadocian thinks that the cistern is a strange prison for a man, but a soldier tells him that Herod kept his elder brother, the first husband of Herodias, imprisoned there for twelve years, and then sent his ring to the executioner, Naaman, who strangled him. Narraboth exclaims that Salome is leaving the table, and Salome enters, complaining that she could not endure the strange stare of Herod. She is glad to be in the garden away from the crowds; she hears the voice of Iokanaan, and asks about him. A slave comes from Herod to beg her to return, but she refuses, and insists that the soldiers bring Iokanaan forth from the cistern. They are afraid, but she beguiles Narraboth into disobeying Herod's orders, and the Prophet is brought forward, denouncing Herod and Herodias. He terrifies, yet fascinates, Salome, and she speaks to him. He denounces her and her mother, but she grows all the more amorous of him. Again he rebukes her as a daughter of Babylon. She turns upon him in fury, only to grow ardent again. She longs to caress and to kiss him. Narraboth's heart breaks with jealousy and he slays himself and falls between Salome and Iokanaan. The young page of Herodias, who had foreseen omens in everything on this fateful evening, bewails the death of Narraboth, but Salome does not even see the body, so fiercely is she pleading for the lips of Iokanaan. He reviles her, and bids her go seek One whom she will find by the Sea of Galilee, but she will not cease demanding his love, and he curses her and returns to the well.

Herod and Herodias and the Court appear, Herod demanding why Salome had not returned to the banquet as he commanded. He notes that the moon has a strange look like a mad woman. Herod calls for torches and wine that he may do honour to Tigellinus, the Ambassador of Cæsar. He slips on the blood of Narraboth, and finds that an ill omen. He sees the corpse of Narraboth and learns that he has slain himself. Herod remembers that Narraboth looked too much at Salome. Herodias says that Narraboth is not the only one who looked too much at Salome, and bids him go within. But he calls again for wine which Cæsar himself sent him, and asks Salome to sip from his cup.

She refuses, and he calls for fruit, but she will not eat. Herodias in fury denounces Herod as the son of a camel driver. He invites Salome to share his throne. The voice of the Prophet comes from the well denouncing Herod. The Jews ask that Iokanaan be delivered into their hands, but Herod answers that Iokanaan is reputed to be the prophet Elias returned. Iokanaan predicts the coming of the Saviour of the World. Tigellinus protests that this is a title of Cæsar's. Other Jews describe the miracles of Christ, and Herod wishes Jesus apprehended and forbidden to raise the dead. The Prophet's voice still thunders from the well, and Herodias demands his life, but Herod refuses it. He stares always at Salome and begs her to dance. She refuses. He commands her. She refuses. He pretends indifference and loudly declares himself happy and content. But again he begs Salome to dance away his gloom, promising her whatsoever she may ask, even to the half of his kingdom. Salome takes off her sandals in spite of her mother's protests. Herod warns her that she will dance upon the blood on which he has slipped: but she dances "The Dance of the Seven Veils."

Herod, overjoyed, now asks her her fee, and she, to her mother's delight, calls for the head of Iokanaan on a silver charger. Herod is aghast and protests and pleads, but Herodias and Salome remind him of his oath. He offers jewels and fifty white peacocks, but she is immovable. He warns her of the evil omens and promises her all manner of gifts, even to the Veil of the Sanctuary, but she repeats, "Give me the head of Iokanaan." At last he yields. He draws from his hand the ring of death and gives it to a soldier who bears it to the executioner. The executioner, with a look of terror, descends into the cistern. Salome leans over the edge and describes what she sees. The executioner is afraid and will not strike. But at last, his huge black arm comes forth from the cistern, bearing on a shield the head of Iokanaan. Salome seizes it as Herod hides his head in his cloak. Herodias smiles and the Nazarenes kneel in prayer.

Salome gloats over the head, and taunts it with having refused the kisses she demanded. She kisses the helpless lips of the dead Iokanaan, and cries out her love for him.

Herod sickens and cries out against her as a monster. He orders the torches quenched, and as the cloud hides the moon and the hideous courtship of Salome, Herod cries, "Kill that woman!" The soldiers hurl their shields upon her.

The story is based upon the Greek legends somewhat as treated in the tragedies by Sophokles and Euripides.

Elektra was the daughter of King Agamemnon and his wife, Klytaemnestra. During the absence of Agamemnon at the Trojan war his wife carried on an intrigue with Aegisthus. When Agamemnon returned home he was slain in his bath by his wife and her paramour. The Queen treated her children, Elĕktra and Orestes, with great cruelty, and they finally conspired to murder her and her lover.

The German author has introduced the character of Chrysothemis as a sister of Elektra.

Scene. A courtyard of the palace showing the servants' quarters and a well. Five serving maids are grouped about the well under the direction of the Overseer. They are discussing the ferocious and uncanny behaviour of Elektra, who is a veritable wildcat. Some of the maids have sympathy for her because she is beaten and treated like a beast. When they have gone, Elektra appears, brooding over the murder of her father, which she sees enacted before her. She longs for the day when her father shall be revenged, and when she shall dance over the bodies of her guilty mother and the wicked Aegisthus. Her sister, Chrysothemis, appears and warns Elektra that she is to be thrown into a dungeon. Chrysothemis longs for a life of love and motherhood, but Elektra rebukes her for her weakness and sends her away, as Klytaemnestra appears with torches and retinue. Klytaemnestra is worn out with guilt and sleeplessness, and asks Elektra if there is no rest for her. Elektra answers in riddles which imply that Klytaemnestra's repose shall only come when the right blood shall flow under the axe; when a certain woman and a certain man shall be slain by another man. Elektra asks if Orestes may not be allowed to return from his years of exile, and accuses her mother of trying to have him murdered. Elektra warns her that she will die for her crime.

As the two women confront each other, the Queen's confidant hurries in and whispers news to her which gives her great joy. As she hurries away, Chrysothemis comes in screaming that Orestes is dead, and that two strangers, an old man and a young man, have brought word that he had been trampled to death by his horses.

A young servant darts in demanding a horse, as he must carry a message quickly. Elektra pleads with Chrysothemis to join her in the vengeance which the dead Orestes should have wreaked. She praises the younger sister for her strength and beauty, and offers to be her slave if she will aid her. Chrysothemis is afraid and reluctant, and flees. Elektra creeps toward the house to do the slaughter herself, but meets Orestes himself, who enters. Brother and sister do not recognize each other at first, because he has grown to manhood and she has lost her beauty. An old servant prostrates himself before Orestes' feet, and Elektra embraces him with joy. Orestes' foster-father hurries in to warn the brother and sister not to betray themselves. A servant appears to invite Orestes to the presence of Klytaemnestra, who does not suspect him. Orestes enters the palace and shortly afterward the wild shrieks of Klytaemnestra are heard as she is being slain. Elektra braces herself against the door and keeps out the servants, who are in a panic. Aegisthus arrives hastily and Elektra, taking a torch, invites him to enter, and pays him ironical homage, dancing before him. Much puzzled, Aegisthus enters the house and is heard crying for help. He appears at the window, struggling and tearing down the curtain. He is dragged away and his cries are silenced. Chrysothemis speaks to Elektra and tells her that the palace is in an uproar, the retainers of Orestes having attacked the partisans of Aegisthus. Elektra crouches by the door brooding with uncanny rapture over the great revenge. She tries to dance, but falls prostrate.

The action takes place in the Hella Forest, and in the neighbouring town of Hellabrunn.

Act I. — Scene. A glade near the Witch's hut. The Goose-girl is neglecting her flock, and idly humming to herself, when the Witch pops her head out, berates her for letting her geese stray, then calls her into make a poisoned pasty of acorns. The Goose-girl stares at a stunted lily and wonders why her flowers will not grow as others do. She asks of her own childhood, begs her "Grandmother" to let her go forth into the world, but the Witch tells her she has cast a spell over bush and briar, and she cannot escape. The girl, left alone, sings to the beloved linden tree (O liebe Linde) and to her own reflection in the water. The King's son appears in a shabby hunting costume, with a bundle on his shoulders. She questions him ignorantly, and he finds her beautiful. She asks what a King is, and he tells her that a King guards his people as she guards her geese; but that he, being youthful, has found the life of a Prince too gloomy and fettered and has fled (Fort! Hinaus!) She longs to go with him, and he takes her in his arms, asking her, "Wilt thou go maying with me?" (Willst du mein Maienbuhle sein?) The wind blows the wreath from her hair, and he puts it in his doublet as a token. He unties his bundle and takes out a golden crown, but she refuses it and he tosses it aside. He takes her hand to lead her away, but she feels the charm and is frightened. He is angry and finds her unworthy with her beggar's blood (Königsblut und Bettelblut). He dashes away and leaves her weeping. She hears the Witch calling, and fearing lest the crown betray her, begs one of the geese to hide it, and hangs it on the goose's neck. The Witch quizzes her closely, and she confesses that she has seen a man. The Fiddler is heard singing, "Three fools went out one day for an egg that a cock did lay" (Drei Narren zogen aus). The Witch drives the girl into the house and follows her in. The Fiddler, the Wood-cutter and the Broom-maker appear. They knock at the door loudly, and when the Witch finally appears, the Fiddler sings an ironical love song to her beautiful red eyes (Deine schönen roten Augen). He and his friends have come to say that the King of Hellabrunn had died and his heir had disappeared. They ask her whom they shall choose to rule over them. The Witch says that at the Hella feast the next day, when the noon strikes, the gate of the city must be open, and whosoever enters the town must wear the crown. The Broom-maker and the Wood-cutter go back to the city, but the Fiddler, having caught a glimpse of the Goose-girl, demands that she be given her liberty. When she appears, he questions her. He thinks that she is of royal blood, but the Witch sneers that she is the shameful child of a hangman's daughter. Nevertheless, the Fiddler hails her as royal, and she calls to the gray goose to bring back the crown. She puts it upon her head as she kneels in prayer and the light of a star falls upon the stunted lily, which opens wide in full bloom. Crying that she is free, the Goose-girl darts away, followed by her geese and the Fiddler. The Witch knocks down the lily with her staff.

Act II. — Scene. A square near the gate of the city. The Gate-keepers are on guard and the Inn-keeper's daughter is quarrelling with the Stable-maid, as the King's son comes out of the inn yawning. He has slept with the swine, and the girls treat him with contemptuous familiarity. The Inn-keeper's daughter brings him food, but it is too coarse for his palate. She makes love to him and advises him to marry, but he asks if it is a linden tree under which they sit. She embraces him, but he pushes her hands away and she boxes his ears. He turns to leave the hateful town, when he finds in his doublet the Goose-girl's wreath. The leaves seem to whisper to him, "Do not go." The townspeople appear, and the Gate-keepers keep them from the gates lest one of them claim the crown. There is a Spring dance. The King's son asks the Inn-keeper for employment. He is offered the post of swineherd and reluctantly accepts. The Broom-maker appears, followed by his thirteen daughters, each of the children riding a broom and trying to sell it. The youngest child of the Broom-maker asks the King's son to play with her, and they dance a ring-around-a-rosy. The Councillors and the rich Burghers with their families arrive and seat themselves in the Tribune. The Wood-cutter describes for them his journey to the Witch's hut, which he dresses up with dangers and wild animals. He announces that at the opening of the gates the King will arrive in glory upon a golden car. The King's son asks if the King might not come in rags, but everybody laughs at the idea. He describes what a true King should be, but they mock him; the Inn-keeper demands pay for the food which the King's son could not eat. He is about to be roughly handled by the crowd, when the first bell rings. The crowd is hushed with awe. At the twelfth stroke the Gate-keepers throw open the gates, and the Goose-girl enters with her flock, followed by the Fiddler. The King's son hails her as his Queen, and she him as her King, but the crowd bursts into derisive laughter at her bare feet and his rags. The King's son draws his sword and protects the girl, and the Fiddler proclaims them King and Queen, but the mob drives them out all three with sticks and stones. The Broom-maker's littlest daughter weeps. The Senior Councillor asks her if she weeps because her broom has vanished. She answers, "No, it was the King and Queen you banished."

Act III. — Scene. The same as the first act, but it is now bleak winter. The water trough is frozen and the linden tree is bare. The Witch's hut is dilapidated, for she has been burned at the stake on account of her prophecy. The Fiddler has been jailed and broken on the rack for defending the two pretenders. He is living alone in the hut, hoping for the return of the two children. He feeds the doves that gather, and questions them for knowledge of the outcast royal children, but they flutter away. The Wood-cutter and the Broom-maker appear, shivering with the cold. The Broom-maker brings his littlest daughter, and the Fiddler greets her with gratitude because when he was perishing in jail she was the only one to bring him bread. The Wood-cutter brings word that the town has forgiven the Fiddler, and the children, who have followed, beg him to come back and play for them, promising him cakes and kisses, but he has sworn an oath not to revisit the hateful town. The Broom-maker describes the desolation that has fallen upon the city, the hostility of the children toward their parents. The little child tells the Fiddler that the children know the King and Queen were driven away. They want them brought back. The Fiddler says he hopes that when the Spring comes he can go forth and find them. The child says that May is a hundred years away, and the Fiddler, taking up his fiddle limps off into the wood with the children. The Wood-cutter and the Broom-maker remain and search the hut, while the Fiddler is heard singing, "Whither hast thou wandered, oh, my Royal Maid" (Wohin bist du gegangen). His voice dies out, and the King's son and the Goose-girl enter, starved and chilled. The King's son goes to the door of the hut and knocks. The Wood-cutter opens the window, but slams it shut when the King's son asks for bread. The Goose-girl regrets that they have left the cave where they have been in hiding, but the King's son explains that hunger was their compulsion, and that he was lured back to his rightful realm. He contrasts the gayety with which he ran away from home and the sorrow of his exile. To cheer him, she throws off her fatigue, and dropping her cloak and tearing her furs from her feet, she dances barefooted in the snow until she drops at the foot of the linden tree. He wraps her in her cloak and in his own robe. He resolves to sell the useless crown for bread, but breaks it in two lest any one else should wear it. He knocks at the hut door and the Wood-cutter and the Broom-maker, who have found nothing in the hut but the poisoned pasty, greedily exchange it for the gold. The King's son takes it to the Goose-girl, and they quarrel lovingly over which shall have the larger share. They eat, and as the poison fills their veins they dream of Spring and happiness. Wrapped in each other's arms and kissing, they fall asleep. The snow begins to fall more heavily and gradually covers them over.

The Fiddler comes back with the children, and the Wood-cutter and the Broom-maker shows the pieces of the crown and describe the ragged outcast from whom they had taken it. The Fiddler calls wildly into the woods, "Königskinder!! Königskinder!" A dove circles about the Fiddler, and flies to the linden tree, where the Fiddler finds the royal children in the sleep of death. The children from the town gather about and place the two bodies on a bier of pine branches, on which they are borne away to a royal grave on the mountain, the Fiddler vowing to sing them one last song, then fling away his fiddle forever.

WAGNER, WILHELM RICHARD

Parsifal (pär'-sĭ-făl)

"A consecration festival-drama" in three acts.

In 1848 Wagner made plans for a work, "Jesus von Nazareth," which were gradually modified into the project for "Parsifal," on which he was engaged as early as 1854. But the poem was not finished until 1877, in which year it was published. He began the music the next year at the age of 65. The prelude was privately performed at Bayreuth, Christmas, 1878, but the work was not completed until January 13, 1882. The first performance was at Bayreuth, July 28, 1882; sixteen performances were given during the following month.

It was Wagner's earnest wish that the work should never be given except in the theatre to which it was sacred, though it was performed almost entire in concert form in London in 1884, under Sir Joseph Barnby. After much controversy and an effort at legal prevention, the work was performed at the Metropolitan Opera House, under Conried's management, with Burgstaller as Parsifal, Blass as Gurnemanz, Van Rooy as Amfortas, and Ternina as Kundry. In 1905 it was produced at Amsterdam.

At its original production there were alternating casts as follows:

The story concerns the legend of the Holy Grail (the chalice from which Jesus drank at the Last Supper, and in which blood from His wounded side was caught and kept). The Grail and the spear that pierced Christ's side fell to the care of the Knights Templars, whose chief, Titurel, built the castle Montsalvat for their sanctuary. The power of the Grail was renewed annually by the Holy Ghost, in the form of a dove, from which the Knights also received miraculous virtues.

The Knight Klingsor, failing to obtain admission to the circle, laid violent hands on himself, and avowed undying enmity to the Grail Knights In the wilderness near Montsalvat he established, by evil magic, a garden filled with flower-women of infernal charm. Among his enchantresses was Herodias, who laughed at Christ on His way to crucifixion and was cursed. She now exists as Kundry, only partly under the spell of Klingsor. At his behest she works evil sorceries, for which she tries to atone when she is free.

The Knights know her only as the wild Kundry, but it was she who, under Klingsor's spell, once enchanted Amfortas, the son of Titurel, who had abdicated in Amfortas' favour. During Amfortas' enchantment Klingsor had robbed him of the sacred spear, and with it inflicted on him a wound which could not be cured save by the same spear, which should be recaptured by a pure-souled fool. Meanwhile, Klingsor has continued to entice away the Knights one by one, and the Castle of the Grail is the home of despair.

Act I. — Scene I. A forest near a lake, in the demesne of Montsalvat, the castle of the Keepers of the Holy Grail. The elderly Gurnemanz is asleep at the foot of a tree and two squires are asleep at his feet. A reveille of trombones wakes them; they kneel in prayer. Two Knights enter and Gurnemanz asks after Amfortas' health. He is about to be brought to his bath though Gurnemanz says that his only hope is in one man.

Kundry enters like a witch, bringing a small flask of balsam which she has fetched from Arabia. Amfortas is brought in on a litter, bewailing his wound. He thanks Kundry for her gift and is carried on to his bath. The squires revile Kundry, but Gurnemanz defends her, and outlines to the squires the whole previous history as described above, and the prophetic dream of the guileless fool (der reine Thor).

A commotion is heard from the lake, and a wounded swan flutters dying to the ground. Other squires drag in the half-witted Parsifal, whose arrow has slain the swan. Gurnemanz reproaches him for the wanton cruelty. Parsifal, now first realizing what he has done, weeps and breaks his bow and arrows. The swan is borne away in state. Gurnemanz, questioning Parsifal, learns that, though he has no name himself, his mother was called Heart's-Grief (Herzeleide). Kundry hoarsely explains that he was born after his father, Gamouret, had been slain in battle, and was reared in solitude by his timorous mother. Parsifal says that he was lured from home by seeing a glittering company of Knights ride by, and had had to defend himself from wolves and robbers.

Kundry says that she saw his mother die. At this news Parsifal, in a frenzy, seizes Kundry by the throat. Gurnemanz takes him away and rebukes him. He turns faint and Kundry restores him with water from a brook; then Kundry, unnoticed, struggles in vain against the slumber that marks Klingsor's spell, and falls behind a thicket.

The Knights return with Amfortas and pass on. Gurnemanz, half-hoping that Parsifal is indeed the pure-souled fool, invites him to the castle; magically the woods flow back beneath their feet, till they arrive in Scene II, a lofty cathedral, on whose shrine stands the Holy Grail. Parsifal, overawed, stands in motionless wonder throughout the long ceremony of the Eucharist. Knights and squires gather at tables singing, and Amfortas is brought in. From an unseen crypt comes the voice of the aged Titurel ordering his son to celebrate the feast. Amfortas in an agony of pain and remorse reluctantly consents, crying aloud for forgiveness or death. The Grail is unveiled and placed before him, and, in a shaft of light from heaven, Amfortas elevates the Host.

The cups of the Knights are seen to be filled with wine. Gurnemanz motions Parsifal to sit by him and partake of the Communion, but Parsifal does not move. At the end of the repast Amfortas' pain breaks out afresh and he is carried out, and the others withdraw. Gurnemanz, finding Parsifal still stupefied, asks him if he understands what he saw. Parsifal shakes his head. Gurnemanz in disgust orders him off, with a warning to leave the swans alone and seek the geese, since he is one.

Act II.— Scene. Klingsor's Magic Castle. In the inner keep of a tower, Klingsor stands amid his magic implements, and with necromancy summons Kundry. Her form rises from the earth, resisting vainly and protesting. Klingsor exultantly commands her to change her form and enchant Parsifal, whom he sees approaching. The other enchanted Knights are heard resisting him, but in vain. With triumphant hopes of possessing the very Grail itself, Klingsor sends Kundry to her task, and sinks into the earth with his tower, revealing Scene II: the flowery terraces of the palace, and Parsifal staring into the garden. From all sides beautiful women rush upon him with caresses and laughter, each proffering him her love. At first fascinated, he grows colder, and is about to flee when he hears Kundry's voice call him by the name "Parsifal." The word reminds him of his mother's voice and he pauses.

Kundry in the form of a beautiful woman on a flowery couch dismisses the other enchantresses. Parsifal asks her how she came to call him, the nameless one, "Parsifal." She tells him of his mother, her loneliness for her son, and his death. Thus she brings Parsifal to his knees at her side. Then she offers him the consolation of her own love, and kisses him. Her lips burn him, and he remembers Amfortas' pain and his outcry against the enchantress whose charms ensnared him. He denounces Kundry as the destroyer of Amfortas.

Kundry tries all her wiles, appealing for pity because of her ancient sufferings since she laughed at Christ, and can only be healed by the returning Christ. She begs Parsifal to take her to his arms and redeem her, but he cries that her love would only make him share her damnation. She seizes him, but he breaks from her. She curses his pathway and calls for help, and the enchantresses rush out. Klingsor also appears on the castle wall. He raises the sacred spear and hurls it at Parsifal. But it pauses in air over his head. Parsifal, reaching upward, grasps it, makes the sign of the cross, and the palace and garden fall into instant ruins. Parsifal calls to the prostrate Kundry, "Thou knowest where alone thou see'st me again."

Act III.— Scene I. A meadow and grove in Montsalvat. A hut wherein dwells Gurnemanz, now much older and in hermit's garb. Hearing groans, he comes out and finds Kundry lying among brambles. He restores her to life with difficulty, and her only answer is the words "To serve! To serve!" As she brings water from the spring, she sees a strange warrior approaching in complete black armour, with visor down. The mysterious Knight will not answer Gurnemanz' questions save by noddings of the head. Gurnemanz informs him that the day is Good Friday, and that he should disarm. He does so slowly and in silence, kneeling before his own spear. Gurnemanz tells Kundry softly that the stranger is the fool he had banished long ago. Parsifal rises, recognizes Gurnemanz, and tells him of his long, long wanderings. Kundry's curse upon his pathway had kept him from finding his way back till now. He shows the sacred spear which he has carried undefiled. Gurnemanz welcomes him with rapture, and tells him that since the day of his departure Amfortas would no more elevate the Host, and the Grail has remained unrevealed. Lacking its aid, the Knights have grown old and weak, and Titurel has died.

Parsifal, blaming himself for his long delay to return, grows faint. Kundry, like a Magdalen, washes his feet and anoints them, and dries them with her hair, while Gurnemanz, like a John the Baptist, baptizes him, and at Parsifal's behest anoints his head, for Parsifal is to be the King. Parsifal now baptizes Kundry and redeems her.

Seeing how fair the landscape is, Parsifal wonders that nature should not grieve on the day of agony, but Gurnemanz answers that everything glows with gratitude to the Saviour. (This scene is known musically as The Spell of Good Friday and the Flowering Meadow intermezzo.) Parsifal kisses the brow of Kundry, and the peal of bells in the distance calls him. Gurnemanz brings out armour and a mantle of the Grail Knights, and he and Kundry fasten them on Parsifal. Once more the landscape flows magically beneath their feet, but in the opposite direction from Act I. Once more they arrive in the Hall, Scene II: but now the Communion tables are missing.

The Knights bring in Titurel's body in its coffin, and Amfortas in his litter, preceded by the covered shrine of the Grail. Amfortas has consented once more to reveal the Grail. He blames himself now for his father's death and implores the dead body to mount to heaven and pray: "Saviour, give my son peace."

The Knights demand the uncovering of the Grail, but he asks them rather to slay him. Baring his wound, he begs them to thrust in their swords and slay him. They shrink back, but Parsifal, advancing with the sacred spear, puts it forth and touches Amfortas' wound, saying that only the weapon that made the wound can heal it. Amfortas, released from pain, thrills with ecstasy as Parsifal announces that he himself will reign thereafter. The Grail glows and a halo of glory streams down from heaven, in which a white dove descends and hovers over Parsifal's head. He rises and elevates the Grail. Kundry sinks slowly into a blissful death. Amfortas and Gurnemanz kneel in homage to the guileless fool.

TROUBLE, Cho-Cho-San's Child

Place of action at Nagasaki, Japan.

Act I.— Scene. A Japanese house and garden, with the harbour in the background. A United States naval officer, Lieutenant B. F. Pinkerton, has hired a Japanese marriage broker, Goro, to procure for him the pretty Japanese girl, Cho-Cho-San, with whom he has become infatuated. The broker has arranged the contract and leased this house — both leases for nine hundred and ninety-nine years, and both breakable at will. At the rise of the curtain, Goro is explaining to Pinkerton the conveniences of the little house and the conveniences of Japanese marriage-law. The two servants come in and prostrate themselves, but are dismissed with scant courtesy by Pinkerton. Goro explains that the bride's relatives must be present in large numbers at the ceremony. Sharpless, the American Consul, comes in, out of breath with the climb. Refreshments are served and Pinkerton gayly exalts the Yankee spirit, but Sharpless warns him that his course is dangerous. Pinkerton describes his infatuation — "love or whim" (Amore o grillo)? Sharpless begs Pinkerton not to crush this butterfly. Pinkerton laughs at his old-fogy notions, and drinks to the day when he will marry "in true marriage an American."

Butterfly enters singing of the breath of Spring (Spira sul mare). She kneels and orders her friends to kneel. Sharpless asks her of her people, and learns that she comes of a wealthy family whose sudden poverty drove her to the life of a geisha. Her father is dead, but she has two uncles; one of them is a toper; the other is the Bonze, a great man. She is fifteen years old.

The High Commissioner and the official Registrar and the relations now arrive. Pinkerton laughs at the farce (Che burletta). Refreshments are served and the papers are drawn up. Meanwhile, Butterfly takes from her big sleeves her possessions. She throws away her jar of paint at his protest. She has brought also the sword the Emperor had sent to her father with instructions to commit hara-kiri; brings out the images of the souls of her ancestors; to please him she has gone to the mission, forsworn her religion and taken his; and now she throws the images away.

The marriage bond is signed, and the guests are dispersing, when the Bonze enters in a rage and demands of his niece what she was doing at the mission. Learning that she has renounced her religion, he curses her and, gathering the relatives together, leads them all away, renouncing her. Butterfly weeps. Pinkerton consoles her tenderly, the servants close the sliding walls, and Butterfly, aided by her maid, Suzuki, prepares her toilet. Pinkerton muses on her ways of a little squirrel (Con moti di scojattolo), her childlike charms (Bimba dagli occhi). She compares herself to the moon-goddess (La piccola Dea della luna), tells of her fear of him when the marriage-broker proposed marriage to a foreign barbarian, and now of her love. She begs him to be good to his butterfly and not to thrust a needle through her heart, as Americans do with butterflies. She points to the star-filled night (Dolce notte! Quante stelle!) and he leads her to the marriage chamber.

Act II.— Scene. Three years later. Inside the same house. Suzuki is praying and ringing a prayer-bell. Butterfly says that the God of her husband must have overlooked them, for they are near to starvation and Suzuki has only a few coins left. Butterfly is sure that her husband will return, and quotes his promise to come back when the robins nest. "Some fine day we'll see the smoke of his ship" (Un bel di, vedremo). Sharpless and Goro appear. The Consul brings a letter from Pinkerton. She asks when robins nest in America. "They have already nested thrice in Japan; perhaps they nest less often in America." Goro laughs and Butterfly explains that as soon as Pinkerton left her, Goro tried to bribe her to marry the Prince Yamadori, who enters now and declares his love. They insist that Butterfly is already divorced through her husband's desertion. Goro whispers that Pinkerton's ship is already signalled. Sharpless has had a letter asking him to break the news to Butterfly that Pinkerton is married and does not want to see her. Yamadori rejected again, goes away dejected and Sharpless reads the letter to Butterfly, trying to prepare her. But she is furious and orders him out, then begs his forgiveness, and to prove that she could not be forgotten, brings in her baby, born after Pinkerton left her. Surely the mother of so wonderful a child could not go back to the geisha life.

Sharpless rises in despair, kisses the child and asks its name. Butterfly says his name is "Trouble" till his father returns; then it shall be "Joy." When Sharpless goes, Suzuki drags in Goro, saying that he has been spreading a scandal that nobody knows who is the baby's father. Butterfly is about to kill him with her father's sword, but spurns him and he slinks away. A cannon is heard from the harbour. Butterfly mad with joy, gets her telescope and reads the name of Pinkerton's ship, the Abraham Lincoln.

Flowers are gathered and scattered everywhere. She is made beautiful, and her wedding obi donned. They make three little holes in the wall to watch for Pinkerton. The vigil is prolonged till Suzuki and the child fall asleep, but Butterfly stands like a statue. The slow passage of the night is indicated by the orchestral intermezzo, accompanied by the humming of an unseen chorus.

Dawn comes, sailors are heard in the distance, Suzuki wakens and begs Butterfly to rest. She takes the child up the stairs, crooning to it (Dormi amor mio). Sharpless arrives with Pinkerton. Pinkerton will not let Suzuki call Butterfly. She sees a woman in the garden. It is Pinkerton's American wife. Sharpless explains that she is willing to adopt the child and rear it.

Suzuki refuses to carry the proposal to Butterfly. Pinkerton looks about at the flowers, in remorse (Oh! l'amara fragranza). He cannot face Butterfly, but gives the Consul money for her and hurries away.

His wife, Kate, comes in and Butterfly returns, hearing voices. Kate explains the situation. Butterfly is majestic in her grief, and promises that Pinkerton shall have his child if he will come for it himself in half an hour. Sharpless and Mrs. Pinkerton go, and Butterfly, driving out the heartbroken Suzuki, prays to Buddha, takes her father's sword and reads the legend on the blade, "With honour die whoso cannot with honour live." She is about to kill herself when Suzuki thrusts the child into the room. She embraces the child frantically (Tu, tu, piccolo Iddio) and tells him that she is dying for his sake, that he may cross the ocean. She begs him to remember her, then seats him with an American flag and a doll, and bidding him play, goes behind the screen. The sword is heard to drop, and she comes from behind the screen with a white veil wrapped around her throat. She falls at the child's side, and as Pinkerton rushes in with the Consul, she points to the child and dies.

The action takes place at Rome, June, 1800, and concerns the activities of the Baron Scarpia, Chief of the Police in his efforts to recapture Angelotti, the Consul of the fallen Roman Republic. Just before the rise of the curtain Angelotti has escaped from the prison of San Angelo, and has made his way to the Church of Sant' Andrea alla Valle, where his sister has concealed in the Attavanti Chapel a woman's costume to aid his escape. It happens that a painter, Mario Cavaradossi, who has been painting frescoes in this chapel, has made a sketch of Angelotti's sister as she has knelt at prayer. This hasty portrait is the cause of a quarrel with Mario's sweetheart, the celebrated singer, Floria Tosca; and her jealousy is the weapon which Scarpia uses for the eventual destruction of everybody concerned.

Act I.— Without any overture, the curtain rises with the first music from the orchestra. Angelotti in convict garb steals into the empty church, finds a key at the foot of the Madonna's statue, and lets himself into the Attavanti Chapel, just as the Sacristan, who is cleaning Mario's paint brushes, comes in followed by the painter, who ascends the dais and uncovers the picture of Mary Magdalen, which is the portrait of Angelotti's sister. The Sacristan recognizes the likeness and Mario confesses that he has made the sketch without the model's knowledge. As he paints, however, he takes out a miniature of La Tosca and, comparing the two, avows his heart's fidelity to La Tosca (Recondita armonia). The Sacristan points out to him the basket of food, but Mario tells him to leave it and go.

Later Angelotti, thinking the church empty, comes from concealment and is discovered by Mario, to whom he tells his story. Mario gives him the basket of food and he hurries back into hiding as La Tosca enters, jealously insisting that she heard voices. Mario only partially convinces her, but she tells him to meet her at the stage door after the performance that they may retreat together to their villa in the country (Oh al tuo fianco sentire). She catches sight of the portrait, recognizes it, and her jealousy is again suppressed with difficulty. He swears he prefers her black eyes to the blue eyes in the portrait (Quale occhio al mondo), and she departs after a duet of love. Angelotti returns from the chapel with the woman's costume his sister has left for him, but Mario thinks it unnecessary for him to put it on and offers the protection of his own villa. A cannon shot is heard announcing the prisoner's escape, and the two men hurry away as the Sacristan and the choir-boys enter with the glorious news that Napoleon has been defeated. Their joy is silenced by the unexpected entrance of Scarpia, with his aide, Spoletta. Scarpia finds that the Attavanti Chapel has been opened with a new key, and inside he finds a fan with the family coat of arms. He recognizes also the portrait on the easel, and discovers that the basket of food brought for Mario has been emptied, although the Sacristan insists that Mario refused to eat it. Tosca returns, and Scarpia, who loves her, devises a scheme to play upon her jealousy for a double purpose: to make her betray Mario and to bring her into his own power. He shows her the fan, which he claims to have found upon the easel, and convinces her that the blue-eyed woman has been meeting Mario secretly. She swears revenge and hurries out, and Scarpia, giving instructions to Spoletta to follow her in a closed carriage, remains to exult over his triumph and then to kneel in prayer.

Act II. — Scarpia's apartments in the Farnese Palace. Scarpia is dining alone and rejoicing over the assured capture of Mario and Angelotti. He has sent word to Tosca, who is to sing for Queen Caroline in the Palace, that she must come to his apartments at once "for the sake of her Mario." His gendarme, Sciarrone, is sent to bring Spoletta, who comes to say that he has arrested Mario, and searched his villa, but has been unable to find Angelotti. Scarpia orders Mario brought into his presence, and stands listening to the music which is being sung for the Queen, and in which Tosca's voice is audible.

Mario is brought in with Roberti, the executioner, and a judge. Mario is indignant at his arrest and denies all knowledge of Angelotti. Tosca is brought in in great alarm and, as she embraces Mario, he warns her to say nothing. Scarpia orders him taken away, and murmurs to the executioner that he is to be tortured. Then he turns to Tosca with suave politeness and questions her about what she has learned at Mario's villa. She says that her jealousy about the fan was unfounded and that Mario was entirely alone when she arrived at his villa. Unable to move her otherwise, he tells her that Mario is being tortured with a steel band about his temples. He is heard groaning and she calls to him, but he warns her to keep silence. At last, however, Scarpia permits her to look into the torture chamber and she is overcome by what she sees. She confesses that Angelotti is concealed in an old well in the garden. Mario is brought in swooning, and Spoletta is ordered to go search the well in the garden. Mario, overhearing, accuses Tosca of treachery and repulses her. Sciarrone brings word that Napoleon has won the battle of Marengo and the royal troops have been defeated.

This brings a cry of joy from Mario. Scarpia orders him hanged. He is dragged away, and Tosca remains to plead for his life. Scarpia will save it if she will pay the price — herself. He pours out his love for her with ardour that she detests. She repulses him until she hears the drums of the death march, and is told that the gallows awaits her lover outside the window. Spoletta enters to say that Angelotti took poison when captured, and Scarpia orders Mario shot. Tosca consents with a silent nod to pay Scarpia's price, and he promises that there shall be a mock execution with blank cartridges. He instructs Spoletta that Mario's execution is to be conducted "like that of Palmieri." Spoletta, understanding his duplicity, hurries away. Tosca insists that Scarpia must write a safe conduct to take her and Mario out of the country. While Scarpia is writing it she picks up a sharp knife, and when Scarpia moves to take her in his arms, she stabs him to death. As soon as he is dead she forgives him, and finding the safe conduct clenched in his fingers, takes it from them, and puts out all the lights, except two candles, which she places on either side of him. She removes also a crucifix from the wall, and, placing it on his breast, slinks out of the room.

Act III. A platform of the castle with a trap-door and a flight of steps. It is almost daybreak and the voice of a shepherd leading his flock to the hills is heard dying in the distance. Mario is brought in under guard. The jailer records Mario's name and grants his request for the privilege of writing a letter of farewell. As he begins to write he muses upon Tosca coming into his garden under the starlight (E lucevan le stelle). He breaks down and weeps as Spoletta appears, followed by Tosca, who rushes to him and shows him the safe conduct. Perceiving the signature of Scarpia, he demands what price she paid. She says that he demanded "your blood or my love," and describes how she had killed him. He wonders at such a deed at such gentle hands (O dolci mani). She explains the plan of escape and informs him that he must simulate death after the volley. There is a love duet (Amaro sol per te).

The firing party enters. Mario is led to one side. He refuses to have his eyes bandaged. The soldiers fire. Mario falls. The soldiers are led away, leaving Tosca alone. She hurries to Mario bidding him to make haste. She finds that he is actually dead, Scarpia has duped her after all; she throws herself upon his body in agony of grief. Spoletta and others return, exclaiming that Scarpia has been assassinated by Tosca. As Spoletta rushes to seize her, she springs upon the parapet and leaps to her death.

MEN OF THE CAMP

Place of action, California in the days of the gold fever, 1849–1850.

Act I.— Scene. Interior of the "Polka," a barroom and dance hall. On the wall a placard offering a reward of five thousand dollars for the stage-robber, Ramerrez. The room is full of miners gambling and drinking. From the distance comes the homesick voice of Jake Wallace, singing his song of "Way Back Yonder" (Là lontano). Larkens, another miner, breaks down with homesickness and a subscription is taken up for him. Sid is caught cheating at faro. Jack Rance, the Sheriff, saves him from being lynched, but pins a badge on him in token of dishonour and has him kicked out. Rance and others play poker as Ashby, the Wells-Fargo agent enters. Ashby tells them that he is hard on the track of Ramerrez and expects to catch him soon. Nick enters with whiskey and glasses, telling the boys that Minnie has sent it to them. They all join in drinking to Minnie. Rance impressively tells them that Minnie will be Mrs. Rance shortly. Sonora bursts out with rage that Minnie is only fooling Rance, whereupon ensues a fight, which is stopped by Minnie's entrance. She separates and subdues them all.

The boys gather around her, giving her presents. Sonora hands her a little bag of gold to clear up his debt to the bar, and Minnie signs for it and places it in the barrel. She then takes out her Bible and holds her school for the boys, treating them all as little children. The pony-express boy enters with letters, and tells Nick that a greaser has been seen hanging around, and to be on his guard. Ashby asks him if he knows an adventuress by the name of Nina Micheltorena. Minnie interposes that she has heard of this creature, who tries to make love to all the boys. Ashby tells the Sheriff that he will catch Ramerrez that night, as Nina has betrayed his movements.

As the boys read scraps of their home letters aloud, Rance makes love to Minnie and asks her to marry him. Minnie asks him what will become of the wife he already has. He tells her that for her sake he will desert his wife. Minnie, drawing a pistol, warns Rance to cease his dishonourable proposals. Rance goes angrily to the faro table, and Minnie follows to say that she has only done what she was taught down at her home in Soledad (Laggiù nel Soledad).

Nick reënters with Ramerrez, alias Dick Johnson, whom Minnie greets and seems to remember. They recall to each other their meeting on the road to Monterey and vow that neither ever would or ever could forget. He asks her to dance with him; some of the others follow. Sounds of shots are heard and Ashby enters dragging José Castro. Castro, seeing Johnson's saddle, believes that his master is captured, but when he is questioned by Rance concerning Ramerrez he gives them a false scent; and they decide to follow it. The door opens and Castro meets the eyes of Johnson and secretly tells him that Johnson's following are near at hand and will give the signal when they are ready to come to him. Rance and the others gallop away on the false scent, taking Castro. Nick goes into the dance hall to put out the lights. Minnie and Johnson talk together. A whistle is heard and Johnson realizes it is the signal of his men. Minnie is frightened and tells Johnson that the gold, representing all the labour of the boys, is in the barrel under her care, but she will fight for it with her life. Johnson is so moved that he cannot take the gold as he intended. He tells her that he wants to come and see her in her cabin by the hillside, and that she has the face of an angel. He goes, and Minnie is left alone, repeating as the curtain falls, "The face of an angel."

Act II.— Scene. The interior of Minnie's cabin. The act opens with Wowkle, the Indian woman, singing to her baby (Il mio bimbo). Billy, the Indian, enters and they discuss marriage till Minnie appears and makes preparation to receive Johnson. Johnson enters and they have a love-scene. Minnie sings "You should see my little pony" (Ho un piccolo polledro). Wowkle enters with candles and Minnie sends her home, telling Johnson that he may stay for an hour longer. During their further love-scene, the snowstorm increases, till Minnie tells Johnson that it will be impossible for him to go at all. Minnie sends him to rest on her bed, while she wraps herself in a blanket to sleep by the fire.

Nick is heard knocking and calling at the door. Minnie forces Johnson to hide, as she fears the jealous Rance has come and brought the others. As she opens the door, Rance, Nick, Ashby, and Sonora enter. They tell Minnie that they feared for her safety, and that Johnson is in reality Ramerrez, who had come to the "Polka" to rob it. Rance convinces Minnie that Johnson is Ramerrez, and has been betrayed by his woman, Nina Micheltorena, showing her the picture of Johnson given them by Nina. Minnie, concealing her jealous agony, sends them away, and then orders Johnson to come out of hiding. She accuses him violently, and Johnson bursts out in self-defence, confessing "I am Ramerrez, vagabond by birth," (Sono Ramerrez: nacqui vagabondo). Minnie, moved at the story of his life, says that she could forgive him anything but his having taken her first kiss: that she cannot forgive; she sends him out into the blizzard. He goes and immediately after, shots are heard. Minnie opens the door and Johnson staggers in wounded. He struggles to go away again, but Minnie helps him to hide in the loft, declaring that she loves him. Rance, knocking excitedly, Minnie runs to admit him, feigning surprise as Rance declares he has tracked Ramerrez to her cabin. Minnie denies having seen Johnson, and Rance makes violent love to her. As she repulses him, a drop of blood falling on his hand from above leads to the discovery of Johnson. Minnie helps Johnson down the ladder, and as he faints, she bargains to gamble with Rance — she is to have Johnson's life if she wins; she gives herself to Rance if she loses. During the game, Minnie contrives to exchange her cards for others hidden in her stocking. Rance, believing that she has fairly won, goes and Minnie is left sobbing on the inert body of her lover.

Act III.— Scene. Early dawn on the edge of the great California forest. Nick and Rance talk of Johnson, cursing his love for Minnie. Men come and go on horseback and there is pursuit. Sonora rides in with the news of Johnson's capture. Rance exulting, sings "Your turn to weep now Minnie" (Minnie, ora piangi tu)! The men dance and sing pointing to the tree where Billy is preparing the noose for hanging. Johnson appears in the midst of a crowd of horsemen. Ashby hands him over to Rance and demands that justice be done without delay. The men insult Johnson. He tells them that he does not fear to die, but only begs that Minnie shall not know. He sings "Let her believe me free and far away" (Ch'ella mi creda libero e lontano). As they take him to the tree where Billy holds the noose, Minnie rides in wildly crying, followed by Nick. She throws herself in front of Johnson, holding a pistol toward the men, who close in threateningly. She pleads with them: "I claim this man as mine" (Ora quest' uomo è mio). So appealing to them each in turn for some favour or service she has rendered in the past she melts their hearts. Sonora frees Johnson, and together Johnson and Minnie take up the trail toward the mountains singing "Good-bye, My California."

A PHYSICIAN

Act I.— Scene I. A forest in Allemonde. Mélisande is seated by a fountain weeping. Prince Golaud, who is hunting and has lost his way, asks her why she weeps. She shrinks from him. She has dropped into the fountain her crown, but will not let him regain it. He persuades her to let him lead her away, as the night is coming on. Scene II. A room in the castle. King Arkel is listening to a letter read to him by his queen. It is Golaud's letter to his half-brother, Pelléas, telling how he had found Mélisande and later married her, and now fears to bring her home lest Arkel refuse to receive her. Golaud has been a widower devoted to his little son, Yniold. Pelléas enters to say that he is called away by the illness of his friend Marcellus. Arkel tells him he must await Golaud's arrival. Scene III. In front of the castle. Mélisande is complaining to Geneviève of the gloom of the surrounding forests. Pelléas appears and they watch a ship putting out with the coming storm. Geneviève leaves them and Pelléas helps Mélisande to descend. She hopes that he will not go away.

Act II.— Scene I. A fountain in the park. Pelléas and Mélisande enter, and Mélisande tries to reach down into the dark depths. She plays with the ring Golaud gave her. It falls and is lost. She is afraid and wonders what to tell Golaud. Pelléas says "The truth, the truth, the truth!" Scene II. An apartment. Golaud is ill; his horse has thrown him. Mélisande stands by his bed, she begins to weep. She is not happy at the castle. She wants Golaud to take her away. He questions her closely of Pelléas. He notes that his ring is gone. She is confused and tells him she lost it in the sea while gathering shells for Yniold. He bids her go hunt for it. She is afraid of the dark. He tells her to take Pelléas with her; she goes weeping. Scene III. Before a grotto. Pelléas would lead Mélisande within so that she may describe it as the place where she lost the ring. The moon reveals three poor old men asleep. She is afraid and will not enter.

Act III.— Scene I. A tower. Mélisande at a window sings as she combs her long hair (Mes longs cheveux descendent). Pelléas appears and praises her hair. He tells her he must leave on the morrow, and would kiss her hand. As she bends over, her hair falls about him; he embraces and kisses it. It "inundates" him, it "loves" him. To hold her prisoner, he ties it to a willow. Two doves are frightened by her outcry and fly off. Golaud appears and calls them mere children. He leads Pelléas away. Scene II. A vault under the castle. Golaud leads Pelléas in, speaking of the odour of death and the deep abyss. Pelléas feels suffocated and they go. Scene III. A terrace. Pelléas comes gasping from the vaults. Golaud warns him that there must be no more of these games of children. Scene IV. In front of the castle under Mélisande's window. Golaud takes his little son Yniold on his knees, questions him of his stepmother, Mélisande. The child says that Pelléas is always with her. Golaud's grasp makes the child cry. Golaud promises him toys. Yniold says that Pelléas and Mélisande do not send him away. They are afraid not to have him there. They are always afraid. Did they ever kiss? Once when it was raining. Now a light appears in the window above. Golaud lifts the child so that he can see into Mélisande's room. He sees Pelléas there, but the two are apart, just gazing at one another.

Act IV.— Scene I. A corridor. Pelléas meets Mélisande. He has just come from talking with Arkel, who has advised him to set out on his voyage. He has made up his mind to go. Arkel enters and speaks tenderly to the sorrowful Mélisande. Golaud appears. His forehead is bleeding. He says he tore it on a thorn. He repulses Mélisande and demands his sword. He seizes Mélisande by the hair and drags her about; then strides away. Mélisande sighs "He loves me no more. I am not happy." Scene II. A dark terrace. Yniold is trying to lift a rock behind which his ball has rolled; he pauses to watch a flock of sheep driven by in a panic. Scene III. A fountain. Pelléas broods over the snares of destiny. Mélisande comes. She is fearsome, but he suddenly seizes her in his arms and she confesses her love. In the midst of their mutual rapture they hear the noise of the castle gates closing. They hear some one approaching. They kiss as Golaud rushes upon them with drawn sword. Pelléas falls and Mélisande flees in wild terror with Golaud in pursuit.

Act V.— Scene I. An apartment. Mélisande lies in a bed. A physician tells Golaud and Arkel that she should not die from so little a wound. Golaud is bitterly remorseful, "They were embracing like little children — and I did it in spite of myself. I did it in spite of myself." Mélisande wakens. Arkel tells her she has been a little delirious for days, and she has borne a child. She asks Golaud to come close. He asks the others to withdraw and begs her forgiveness. As she is about to die, he implores her to tell him truthfully if she loved Pelléas. She says that she loved him, but there was no guilt in them. Golaud cannot believe her. The servants gather unbidden with an ominous prescience. Golaud begs again to question her; but Arkel tells him not to disturb her, "The human soul is very silent. The human soul loves to steal away alone." He leads the sobbing Golaud from the room. "It was a little being, peaceful, so timid, so taciturn. It was a poor little mysterious thing, like everybody else. She lies there as if she were the elder sister of her child. It must live in her place. It is the little one's turn now."

Place of action: Naples. Time: The present day.

Act I.— Scene. A small open square by the sea; Carmela's house, Gennaro's workshop, Biaso's hut and tavern. It is the afternoon of the festival of the Madonna, and the square is crowded with merrymakers of all sorts. The Children of St. John and others pass by in procession. When the crowd is somewhat dispersed, Gennaro works at his anvil on a wrought-iron candelabrum. Totonno quizzes him for being so serious. When he is gone, Gennaro kneels before the anvil as at an altar and pledges the gift to the Madonna (Madonna, con sospiri). Maliella rushes out of the house in disarray, rebuked by her foster-mother, Carmela. Gennaro, her foster-brother, protests against her recklessness, and she accuses him of jealousy. Biaso, the scribe, gives her a paper cap and she sings the "Canzone di Cannetella," while a chorus of Camorrists come over the bay. Then Maliella dashes out followed by a crowd of young men; and Gennaro pours out to his mother, Carmela, his jealous anguish. The mother tells how, when Gennaro was a sick baby about to die, she vowed to adopt an infant girl begotten in sin if the Madonna would spare Gennaro's life (T'eri un giorno ammalato bambino). Maliella has turned out badly, but Carmela hopes that marriage with an honest man will reform her. Gennaro goes out with his candelabrum, as the Camorrists chase Biaso and threaten him because he has protested against their pursuit of Maliella. Among them is Rafaele, their chief. He seizes the girl in his arms with a song of love (Si, perchè t' amo, bella assassina). She tries to escape, but they surround her and sing a mock serenade (Olà Plam, Plam!) She defends herself with a sharp hatpin, and stabs Rafaele in the hand. He kisses the wound made by her "kiss of steel" (Bacio di lama), and thrusts a flower in her bosom. She throws the flower down.

The crowd now appears to watch the procession of children in white, preceding the image of the Madonna. During the procession Rafaele pours out his love and asks her if she wishes to be adored kneeling (Adorarti in ginocchio) and if she wishes him to steal the Jewels of the Madonna for her. Gennaro appears and warns her against Rafaele. When Maliella defends him, Gennaro orders her into the house, and is about to attack Rafaele; but the procession reappears, and all must kneel. Rafaele throws a flower to Maliella. She picks it up, puts it in her lips and hurries into the house.

Act II.— The garden of Carmela's house in the evening a few hours later. Maliella stands near the railing looking longingly toward the sea. She is still holding the flower. Carmela bids them good-night and goes in. Maliella turns on Gennaro saying that she is sick of this gloom and is going away. She goes inside and can be seen at her window packing her things, as she sings a popular love song (E ndringhete, ndranghete). She comes out with her bundle and Gennaro checks her, lovingly embraces her and pours out his devotion (Si, perchè t'amo, t'adoro). She is astounded, but says she could love only a man of reckless courage like the one who had offered to steal for her the Jewels of the Madonna. Gennaro is horrified, but when she starts to go, prevents her, and she storms back to her room in a rage, leaving him alone with a sacrilegious temptation. At last, he goes to a tool chest and taking out skeleton keys and files, steals away like a thief.

A group of serenading Camorrists, among them Rafaele, appear and call upon Maliella to open her window (Aprila, o bella, La finestrella). Maliella appears, and Rafaele makes love to her, and promises to make her queen of his band. At last she embraces him through the bars of the gate just as a warning is given that Gennaro is returning. Rafaele disappears as Gennaro comes back in a mood of horror. He carries a bundle, which he opens at Maliella's feet. It contains the Jewels of the Madonna. Maliella is terrified, but Gennaro, with mystical passion declares "The Madonna knows that I am guiltless" (No, la Madonna sa che non l'offesi). Irresistibly fascinated, Maliella takes up the necklace and notes that it smells of incense. She puts on the diadem and the bracelets, wishing that Rafaele might see her so. Gennaro embraces her with wild fervour and she, almost in a trance of horror, thinking him to be Rafaele yields herself to him.

Act III.— Scene. The headquarters of the Camorra. Among the crude and vulgar ornaments is a fresco of the Madonna, and a little altar behind a curtain. The Camorrists are drinking stupidly, and three women join in their revel. When Rafaele appears, the girls twit him with his infatuation for Maliella, but he sings in her praise. "You don't know Maliella's charm" (Non sapete — di Maliella). A curtain is drawn in front of the fresco of the Madonna, and a wild orgy begins. In the midst of it Maliella pounds on the door and rushes in, appealing for help against Gennaro and revenge. She faints in Rafaele's arms, and he orders the Camorrists to bring him Gennaro alive or dead. "Were you his?" Rafaele demands. She covers her face and sobs. The others ridicule him. He turns against Maliella, crying, "You belong to Gennaro, go to him," and hurls her to the ground. As she falls, her shawl falls open and exposes the jewels. The other women surround Maliella in amazement, not knowing whence the jewels had come. In the distance Gennaro is heard bewailing his sin. Then the noise of the attack upon him is heard and he bursts into the room pursued by the Camorrists. He bares his breast, calling on them to kill him. Rafaele rushes upon him in a rage, but is dragged away. Gennaro, seeing Maliella, moves toward her with a despairing cry, but she looks on him with loathing, tearing off the jewels and flinging them at his feet, crying to all the crowd that Gennaro had stolen them from the Madonna. The men recoil, and the women drop to their knees mumbling the Litany. Rafaele cries out that Maliella's soul is damned, and she dashes out to drown herself. Rafaele protects Gennaro from the attacks of the Camorrists, saying that he shall be left to die there like a dog. In the distance the church bells ring the alarm, showing that the theft is discovered. The women flee in terror; the men, bowing before the Madonna's fresco, retreat backward, leaving Gennaro alone. He gathers up the jewels, kisses them with reverence and staggers to the altar, where he lays them before the portrait of the Madonna begging her pity. A ray of light from the rising sun shines through the window and falls on the jewels. Gennaro takes it for a sign of forgiveness and in his delirium seems to hear the angels of paradise. Finding a knife on the ground, he calls aloud for his mother not to weep for him, and in a mystical ardour, slowly presses the knife into his breast. As he falls, he sees Maliella's scarlet wrap on the ground. He kisses it, and pillows his dying head on it as the birds break out into song. The angry mob appears at the door, but halts on the threshold seeing Gennaro dead.

The action concerns a men's club in Venice, whose mottoes are "No Women Admitted" and "Friendship" (L'amicizia!) and the efforts of the wives and sweethearts of the members to discover what goes on in the club.

Act I.— Scene I. A room in the club-house. The members are variously engaged at chess and arguments. Florindo is sighing like a furnace for his sweetheart, Rosaura, the daughter of Ottavio. The members describe the efforts of their wives and daughters to find out the secrets of the organization, but Florindo sings of his sweetheart (Ma, allor ch'io vedo tremulo). Leandro, who is a bachelor, suggests a dinner for the evening, and they all agree to allow old Pantalone to pay for it. He comes in and falls into the trap. His servant, Arlecchino appears and is told to order a fine supper for that evening at ten o'clock. Pantalone reminds him that the club's secrets must be kept from the women.

Scene II. A room in the home of Ottavio, who is late for dinner, detained, of course, at his horrid club. His wife, Beatrice, and his daughter, Rosaura, are complaining. Beatrice is sure they gamble there. Rosaura's theory is that they meet women there. Eleonora a neighbour, appears, and she is positive that the men are alchemists trying to discover the philosopher's stone. She sings of her tragic experience with the dressmaker (A trovare la mia sarta). Colombina, a maid, runs in breathlessly and announces that she has discovered that the club is engaged in digging for buried treasure (Ne ha di belle). And now Arlecchino, who is secretly courting Colombina, comes in. The women pounce on him with their theories as to the object of the club and he agrees to all of them. They turn upon him in a rage and he runs out, leaving the women as mystified as ever, but each still positive of her own theory. Ottavio comes home and announces that Florindo will dine with him. He is figuring out some accounts in his notebook, and his wife tries to wheedle from him the secrets of the club. He leaves in a huff and she follows him. Florindo appears, but Rosaura will not give him her heart until he tells her the secret of the club. He pleads for mercy (Io sento, ahimè). Colombina returning, suggests to Rosaura that she should try the effect of swooning. She pretends to faint. Florindo is frantic and Colombina advises him that the only way to regain Rosaura's affections is to tell her the secrets of the club. She manages to wheedle from him the rule of the club that no women shall be admitted, the motto "Friendship," the fact that there is to be a supper at ten o'clock, and that every member has his own key. Colombina then gets rid of him and speedily resuscitates Rosaura.

Act II.— Scene I. A room in the house of Lelio. His wife is going through the pockets of his clothes (Che bestion di marito). She finds two new keys with a letter from Pantalone saying that the locks have just been changed. She cries "Victory! Victory!" and restores the letter, but not the keys. Lelio comes in and she asks him if he is going back to the alchemist's furnace. He is furious at her quizzing, and they storm out at opposite doors.

Scene II. A room in Ottavio's house. Colombina announces all that she has learned. Only one thing is lacking — the key to get in with. Ottavio and Florindo appear and Beatrice tries to get her husband to change his coat so that she may search the pockets of it, and Colombina, as if by accident, spills coffee on Ottavio's coat. And now Ottavio takes it off to have the spots removed. Ottavio begins to sneeze while waiting for another coat. Colombina brings back the things she has found in the pockets, but secretly informs Beatrice that she has substituted the cellar keys for the club keys, and Ottavio goes with Florindo leaving the women rejoicing in their triumph. Beatrice seizes the keys and tells Rosaura that she is too young to go to a men's club. Rosaura, left alone, muses over Florindo (Ah, tutto per te, mio bene). He steals back. but she refuses to relent unless he gives her the keys. He pours out his despair (Voi lacerate il mio povero cuore), but finally yields to her determination, and they are reconciled in a duet (Il cor nel contento).

Act III.— Scene I. A street in Venice before the clubhouse. At the back is a canal. Pantalone comes out of the clubhouse looking for Arlecchino, who appears with bottles, but has forgotten the candles. Arlecchino goes inside to unload before he returns for them, and Pantalone follows him in. A gondola draws up to the landing and Eleanora steps from it as Arlecchino comes from the clubhouse. Eleonora in her terror drops her keys and runs. Arlecchino pockets them and goes on his way, as Colombina, disguised as a man, enters with Beatrice from a side street. Beatrice hides as Pantalone comes out, and seeing Colombina gives the password, "Friendship." He soon discovers that Colombina is only a disguised woman, and snatches the keys from her. She runs off, leaving Pantalone to wonder who is the traitor who has given up the club keys into women's keeping. Pantalone goes back into the club. Lelio and Ottavio come up. Lelio is puzzled at not finding his keys in his pocket. Florindo appears. Ottavio twits him about his love for the capricious Rosaura (Bravo mio genero). Ottavio, about to open the club door, finds that he has the cellar keys instead. He turns to Florindo for his. Florindo in some confusion says that he left them at home. The three locked out members knock, and Pantalone comes to the door in a bad temper and shows the keys that have been found. Lelio and Ottavio follow him into the club, but Florindo remains, seeing a servant with a lantern preceding a woman. He conceals himself and Rosaura, masked, follows her servant in. The servant is about to put the key in the door when Florindo snatches it from him. Rosaura drops her mask and the servant runs away. Florindo reproaches Rosaura for trying to betray him, and entering the Club, slams the door behind him. Arlecchino, who has seen this quarrel, catches Rosaura as she faints. While he is wondering what to do with his burden, Beatrice and Eleonora appear. Beatrice, recognizing her daughter, faints in Arlecchino's other arm. Colombina runs and prepares to faint also, but Arlecchino reminds her that he has not arms enough for three. The women recover and begin to cry, reviling the door that will not open. They now turn upon Arlecchino. Colombina tries to bribe him with caresses. Beatrice offers him money; Rosaura offers him earrings; Colombina offers him a dinner and kisses. But he refuses them all. Then they turn upon him with their finger-nails, and he surrenders the keys. They open the club door and enter while Arlecchino picking up the lantern looks up and down the street, ironically calling out, "Are there any others who want to get in?"

Scene II. A room in the clubhouse, with an opaque door leading to the dining room. The members of the club are saluting Pantalone, who warns them not to give to a woman the keys to a door or to their hearts. Arlecchino announces supper and the members enter the banquet room. When the door is closed the four women steal from their hiding places, somewhat surprised to find that the mysterious activity of the club consists of a simple stag supper. The men are heard laughing and the women, taking turns at the keyhole, describe what is going on. They grow hungry at the sight of the banquet, and when Arlecchino comes in at a side door with a dish of tarts, they rob him of them. They begin now to struggle so frantically for the privilege of peeping through the keyhole, that they push the door open. The club members arise in amazement from the table, and Pantalone exclaims that he has heard of showers of frogs and showers of larks, but never before showers of women (Piova de sorzi). The women apologize for their suspicions and are forgiven. One of the members begins to play the spinet and Pantalone chucks Colombina under the chin. Arlecchino protests that her hand belongs to him, and she gives it to him — over the ear. A minuet is begun, and it gradually develops into a livelier and livelier dance, during which Pantalone gives Arlecchino a clip over the head and sends him face downward into a large dish of whipped cream. The dance breaks up with a general cry of the club's motto, "Friendship" (Amicizia).

Place of action, Amiens in the year 1721.

Act I.—Scene. Courtyard of an Inn. Morfontain, the old Minister of Finance, and Brétigny with three actresses are demanding food and drink. The host appears and they order dinner. The landlord leads them to a pavilion. A bell rings and the townsfolk gather to see the coach arrive. Among them is Lescaut, who has come to meet his cousin, Manon. The coach appears and the passengers descend and wrangle with the porters. Manon is among them and greets her cousin with a kiss. She describes her impressions of the voyage and tells how one moment she wept and another she laughed (Je suis encore tout étourdie). Her cousin goes in search of her luggage, and Morfontain, seeing Manon, starts an immediate flirtation. She is amused rather than offended. His companions join in the merriment. As Morfontain in a low voice states that his carriage is at her service, Lescaut returns. He advises her to be prudent and good (Ne bronchez pas, soyez gentille) and returns to his brother officers. Manon resolves to go to the convent and have done with her dreams (Voyons, Manon, plus de chimères). Suddenly she sees in the pavilion Morfontain and the actresses, and she envies their jewels and their splendours, their life of pleasure. The young Chevalier Des Grieux appears on his way to meet his father. Seeing Manon, he is greatly struck with her and makes her acquaintance with little difficulty. She explains that she is only a simple maid, not wicked, but longing for happiness and now on her way to a convent. He cannot endure the thought of her being so entombed, and offers her his protection. She accepts and they decide that they will live in Paris together (Nous vivrons à Paris tous les deux). At her suggestion they will elope together in the carriage that Morfontain has placed at her disposal. They hurry away, leaving Morfontain and Lescaut to amazement and wrath.

Act II.— Scene. An apartment in Paris. Des Grieux is writing at his desk. He reads his letter to her. It is a description of her charms written to his father. He goes to mail the letter, but notices some flowers, and she explains quickly that they were thrown in at her window. He promises not to be jealous. The maid enters to announce that two officers are present. One of them is Lescaut and the other De Brétigny. They come in and Lescaut denounces Des Grieux for dishonouring his family. He demands that Des Grieux marry Manon, and is shown the letter just written. As the men read it together at the window, De Brétigny warns Manon that her lover is to be kidnapped that evening by his father's order, and advises her to let him be taken, lest poverty engulf them. Once she is free, he will make her the Queen of Beauty. The two visitors depart and Manon is troubled, though Des Grieux is full of rapture and love. He goes to post the letter and she makes up her mind that for his sake she must sacrifice him, especially as she is not worthy of him. She hears a voice which calls her (J' entends cette voix qui m' entraine). He returns and tells her of a dream he had, seeing a little cottage (En fermant les yeux je vois là-bas). A loud knock is heard at the door and he is about to answer it, but she is overcome with fear for him and tries to restrain him. He releases himself and going to the door is gagged and dragged away. She runs to the window crying, "Oh, my poor Chevalier!"

Act III.— Scene. The promenade of the Cours la Reine. It is a holiday and there are booths and a dancing pavilion, where the three actresses beckon to youths to join them. Lescaut appears singing of his Rosalinda. Morfontain sees the actresses and greets them, complaining that not one of the three is faithful to him. De Brétigny ironically begs him not to rob him of Manon. Morfontain says that he has heard that De Brétigny refused Manon a favour, and steals away. Later Manon appears on the arm of De Brétigny and receives much homage. She is delighting in her conquests, and advises everybody to heed the call of love and youth. As she moves on, the Count Des Grieux, father of the Chevalier appears and tells De Brétigny that his son has taken holy orders and become an Abbé. Manon seizes an opportunity to speak to the Count and is told that her lover has learned his lesson and forgotten her. She determines to see him and orders her chair to take her to the Seminary of Saint Sulpice.

Scene II. The parlour of the Seminary. The Count congratulates his son on the eloquence of his sermons, but begs him not to take final orders; rather to find some worthy maiden and marry her, especially as the next day he will receive a fortune from his mother. Des Grieux, left alone, is tormented by the image of Manon (Ah, fuyez, douce image). Soon she appears and hearing the choir within, says a prayer. On seeing Des Grieux, she appeals for his forgiveness. He warns her that she cannot speak of love in such a place, but she clings to him, and at length he throws his arms about her, defying heaven's vengeance.

Act IV.— Scene. A fashionable gambling house. Lescaut is playing and winning, but the sharpers are watching him hopefully. The three actresses appear, and he tells them that his sweetheart is the queen of spades (C'est ici que celle que j'aime). Des Grieux and Manon appear, and Des Grieux tells her that he both hates and loves her. She has brought him here to recoup their squandered fortunes. Lescaut encourages him to play. Morfontain challenges Des Grieux to a game, and as they gamble Manon revels in the excitement, which is life to her (A nous les amours et les roses). Morfontain accuses Des Grieux of cheating, and the crowd turns against him just as the place is raided by the police. Morfontain denounces Des Grieux and Manon as accomplices. The Count enters and orders his son and Manon arrested. He tells his son that he shall be released at once, but that Manon must "go where many of her sort have gone."

Act V.— Scene. The road to Havre. Des Grieux is seated by the roadside to watch Manon pass by under guard; for she is to be transported to a penal settlement. Lescaut appears and Des Grieux discusses with him their plan to release Manon. The soldiers are heard singing (Capitaine, ô gué, es-tu fatigué?) Des Grieux is desperate enough to attack the guard single handed, but Lescaut drags him behind some bushes, promising him that he shall see Manon. The soldiers appear and Lescaut leads one of the sergeants aside. The soldiers move on, dragging with them the women who are prisoners. Later Manon comes down the path greatly exhausted. She is remorseful for her fickleness and feels at last a pure flame in her heart (Ah! je sens une pure flamme). The evening stars appear To her coquettish heart they are jewels. "You know I was always fond of jewels." She grows weaker and weaker, and dies of exhaustion murmuring "This is the story of Manon Lescaut."

Le Jongleur De Nôtre Dame (lŭ zhôn-glĕr' dŭ nōt-rŭ däm) F. The Juggler of Nôtre Dame.

A "miracle" in three acts. Book by Maurice Lena (based on an old miracle play).

Produced, Monte Carlo, February 18, 1902.

CHARACTERS

JEAN (zhäñ),
The juggler.....ten. or sopr.
BONIFACE (bôn-ē-făs),
Cook of the abbey.....bar.
THE PRIOR.....bass.
THE MUSICIAN MONK
THE SCULPTOR MONK
THE POET MONK
THE PAINTER MONK

The part of the Juggler, though originally sung by a tenor, was taken by Miss Mary Garden on its production at the Manhattan Opera House in New York.

Place: Paris. Time of action: Fourteenth Century.

Act I.— Scene. The Place Cluny, in front of the abbey with a statue of the Madonna over the door. It is market day and the Square is filled with merchants, and with merry-makers who dance in honour of the Madonna and the "Dauphin, Jesus." The sound of a vielle is heard approaching. It is recognized as the music of a Juggler Joyous anticipations are quenched by the appearance of the meagre and poverty-stricken Jean. He is hailed as "His Majesty, King Famine." He plays for them to dance, holding out his cup with little success. They ridicule him, and when he suggests the various songs that he knows, they refuse to hear any of them. They demand a drinking song, and he consents to sing "The Hallelujah of Wine," first praying the Virgin to pardon his sacrilege, for though his heart is Christian, his stomach is pagan. As he is singing reluctantly, the Prior rushes out of the abbey, and all flee except the Juggler, who drops to his knees craving pardon. This the Prior refuses, declaring that the gate of hell is yawning for him. Jean weeps in terror, and the Prior, relenting, tells him he can save himself, but only by taking holy orders. Jean recoils at the thought of renouncing Liberty, his heart's mistress (C'est elle que mon coeur pour maitresse a choisie). The Prior warns him that Liberty will let him starve, while the convent will feed both soul and body. He points to Boniface, the cook, who arrives on a donkey laden with flowers, food and wine. The cook sings of the three: the flowers for the Virgin, the food and the wine for her servants (Pour la Vierge d'abord). The breakfast bell rings in the abbey, and the monks are heard reciting the Benedicite in the refectory. The Prior invites Jean to the feast, and he enters taking with him the Juggler's outfit.

Act II.— Scene. Study room and garden of the abbey. Among the monks is a Sculptor who has finished a statue of the Virgin, which the Painter is colouring. A Musician monk is rehearsing the others in a hymn to the Virgin, which he has composed for the occasion; Assumption morning (Ave coeleste lilium). Jean is bemoaning the fact that he cannot join their praises because he does not know Latin, but only profane songs in the vulgar tongue. The monks joke with Jean because he is taking on flesh, but he regrets that he is only an ignorant monk who can simply eat and drink and do nothing in honour of the Virgin (Depuis qu'en ce couvent prospère). He asks to be turned out into the world again, but the Sculptor advises him to study sculpture, pointing with pride to his statue (Vois: des flancs du marbre se lève). The Poet monk cries "Not so; give poetry the place of honour (Non pas la place d' honneur). The Musician upholds music as the direct echo of the great mystery (Pour moi, je me figure). The Painter joins the quarrel until the Prior silences them all and compels them to be reconciled. They carry the statue out into the Chapel, leaving Jean alone with Boniface the cook. Boniface declares that the art of the cook is the true glory (S'il faut s'enfler de gloire). He tries to console Jean with the statement that the Virgin understands French as well as Latin, and tells the legend of the rose and the sage-plant (Marie avec l'Enfant Jesus). As for himself, he serves the Virgin by looking to his oven. Jean is uplifted with a sudden ray of light (Quel trait de soudaine lumière), and hopes that perhaps the Virgin will accept a Juggler's offering.

Act III.— Scene. The chapel of the Abbey. In the distance the monks are singing the new hymn to the Virgin. The painter is alone before the statue he has coloured, taking a last look at it. He sees Jean dressed as a monk, but carrying his vielle and his kit. Jean approaches and appeals to the Mother of Jesus (Mère adorable de Jesus), to accept his homage. Throwing off his monk's robe, he appears in the Juggler's costume, spreads his carpet and begins to play on his vielle while the Painter hurries out to warn the Prior. Jean, declaring himself to be the King of Jugglers from force of habit, begins to pass his cup about a circle of imaginary bystanders, but stops in confusion. He begins to sing a song of war, but fears it will frighten the Virgin. He tries two other songs, but his memory fails him, and sings the eternal pastoral of Robin and Marion (A l'orê'du joli bocage). As he sings, the Prior, the Painter and the cook appear. The cook restrains the Prior from interfering, and Jean, not knowing he is observed, jovially offers to evoke flying devils for Her. He apologizes to the statue and permits himself the honour of dancing before her. The cook reminds the indignant Prior that David danced before the Ark, and Jean dances a bourrée faster and faster until he falls exhausted, kneeling in adoration. The other monks have gathered and are furious at the blasphemy. They are about to attack Jean when the cook orders them back, "The Virgin protects him." A strange light begins to shine on the statue, and on the mouth a smile is about to awake. The voices of angels are heard singing "Hosannah! Glory to Jean." The Prior and the monks approach the Juggler reverently. Startled from his prayer, Jean kneels for forgiveness from the Prior. But the Prior says that it is Jean who should forgive them, for he is a great saint. Thinking they are mocking him, he is horrified, but they point to the intense radiance now illuminating the altar and the aureole, which descending from the hands of the Virgin, gleams on the head of the Juggler. Jean swoons with ecstasy. When the monks have chanted the Kyrie Eleison, he says feebly, "At last I understand Latin." He swoons again while two unseen angels sing of Heaven's Gate opening before him. There is a snow of lilies and bluebells about him and a cloud of incense. The Virgin mounts to the skies and Jean sees her surrounded by the angels in Heaven. In his death ecstasy, he sees Paradise welcoming him (Spectacle radieux) and the Virgin beckoning him. He dies in his rapture.

Ariane et Barbe-Bleue (ăr-yăn' ā-băr-bŭ-blĕ'). Ariane and Blue Beard.

A lyric story in three acts. Book by Maurice Maeterlinck.

Produced, Opéra Comique, Paris, 1907.

CHARACTERS

ARIANE.....sopr.
THE NURSE
SÉLYSETTE (sā-lē-zĕt)
YGIANE (ē-zhăn)
MÉLISSANDE (mā-lĭs-sănd) BELLANGÈRE (bĕl-lăn-zhăr)
ALLADINE (ăl-lä-dēn)
BLUE BEARD

Act I.— Scene. A hall in Blue Beard's castle, showing six doors with silver locks. Outside the window the angry peasants are threatening to kill Blue Beard for bringing home another wife. The windows close magically as Ariane enters with the nurse. The nurse is terrified because the peasants insist that Blue Beard killed his first five wives. Ariane feels sure that they are not dead, but alive, and thinks Blue Beard loves her so much that she will gain his secret. She shows the keys her husband has given her; six silver keys, which she is permitted to use, and one gold key, which is forbidden to her. Woman-like, she throws away the silver keys and keeps the gold one. The nurse, picking up the keys, opens the doors in succession. Out of them tumble great heaps of precious stones; first, amethysts, second, sapphires third, pearls, fourth, emeralds, fifth, blood-red rubies, and sixth, a cataract of diamonds. These last fascinate Ariane and she bedecks herself with them. (O mes clairs diamants!) Inside this cell she finds a door with a golden lock and, in spite of the nurse's terror, opens it. From the depths a smothered chant arises from the five imprisoned wives, the five daughters of Orlamonde (Les cinq filles d'Orlamonde). Blue Beard enters in a rage. The imprisoned wives have all disobeyed him just as Ariane has done: some of them after a few days; the last of them after a year. "It was the last one alone that deserved to be punished," said Ariane. Blue Beard seizes her, but she and the nurse scream so loudly that the peasants come to the rescue. Blue Beard draws his sword, but Ariane gently pushes the peasants back and says: "What do you want? — He hasn't done me any harm."

Act II.— Scene. The dungeon. Ariane, with a lamp, and the nurse move forward till they discover in a huddle the five wives. Ariane rushes to them with kisses and caresses, crying: "Ah! I have found you" (Ah! Je vous ai trouvées). She is sure that they are beautiful, but they are in rags and unkempt and frightened. She asks their names and comforts them. A drop of water from the dank roof extinguishes the lamp, but the wife, Sélysette is used to the dark and leads the others to a trap door. Ariane breaks it open, and the music of wind and sea, mingled with the song of birds and the sound of shepherd bells invades the room. Sélysette waves her long hair as a signal flag to a distant peasant, and as the clock strikes noon the women scramble out joyously.

Act III.— Scene. The same hall as in the first act. Open coffers are overflowing with gorgeous robes. The wives before large mirrors are dressing their hair and donning gleaming raiment, while Ariane goes from one to the other assisting them. They have been unable to escape from the castle walls, but Ariane hopes to make them so beautiful that Blue Beard will fall in love with them again. The nurse appears with the terrifying news that Blue Beard is returning. But the peasants are armed and lying in wait for him. From the window they see Blue Beard arrive with warriors who fight the peasants. At length the peasants conquer, and tying the wounded Blue Beard, they burst into the hall with their prisoner. They deliver him to the wives for punishment. When the peasants have gone, Ariane and the wives, overcome with pity, release Blue Beard and dress his wounds, kissing him furtively. He stares at his victims, but turns to Ariane. She tells him farewell and asks the other wives if they will go with her. She points to the open door and the moonlit sky (Vois, la porte est ouverte), but they prefer to remain with Blue Beard, and she leaves them, wishing them happiness.

TABLE of PRONUNCIATIONS

Giving the Code of Symbols used in this Book; and also a Guide to the Pronunciations of sixteen Languages, arranged in a novel Tabular Form by Letters

This top row gives the phonetic meaning of the letters and symbols AS USED IN THIS BOOK.	A as used in this book: ä as in father; ā as in fate; ă as in fat; ăn and ăṅ, see Note 1.	B as in bob.	C see ch, at end of the alphabet.
ARABIAN: very difficult even for sojourners among the people.	as in fat; before r as in far.	as in bob.	as in English; ch like German ch, see Note 3.
BOHEMIAN: See Note 4. In diphthongs the vowels are pronounced separately, as in Italian.	as u in fun; á as in father.	as in bob.	c like ts, or German z; č like ch in child.
DANISH: doubled vowels are simply prolonged.	as in father; aa as a in fall.	as in bob.	like Swedish c.
DUTCH: e in be and ge; i before k, g and ng; and ij in the suffix lijk are silent.	when short as in half; also before ch; when open as in father: aa, aai (see ai), prolonged as in father.	beginning a syllable, as in bet; ending, as p in trap.	only in foreign words; like s before e, i and y; like k, otherwise.
FLEMISH: dead as a literary language, but of great historic importance.	a or â, as in father or mica; aa or ae, the same prolonged.	as in bob.	like k; ch like German ch.
FRENCH: a silent final consonant is usually sounded with the following word when that begins with a vowel. This is called liaison. French syllables have duration rather than accent; the tendency is, to give a slight stress to the final syllable. In this book accent is rarely marked.	as in făt; â as in father; see ai, au, and Note 1.	as in bob.	as s before e, i and y; as k otherwise, except that ç is always s. See ch.
GERMAN: long words usually accent the first syllable most strongly, and give a lesser accent to one or more of the others.	as in father; ä, see Note 2; ä is sometimes spelled ae; ai = i in bite; for äu and aeu, see au.	beginning a syllable, as in bet; ending a syllable, as p in trap.	like ts in hats before e, i and ä; like k before a, o and u; ch. See Note 3.
HUNGARIAN: long and short vowels are so rather in duration than in sound. There are no silent letters and no accents.	as in what; á is prolonged, as in father.	as in bob.	cs = ch in church; cz = ts, as in hats.
ITALIAN: doubled consonants are distinctly pronounced, as fred-do. Doubled vowels are also separately pronounced.	as in father and mica; á as in far.	as in bob.	before e and i as ch in chime; cc before e and i = tch, as wretched; ch = k.
NORWEGIAN:	a as in father; aa as o in no; au as o in no.	as in bob.	only in foreign words; as s before e, i and y; as k otherwise.
POLISH: consonants strongly sounded are accented thus: ḃ, ć, ḟ, ṁ, ṅ, ṗ, ṡ, ẇ, ż.	as in father; ą as in ball.	as in bob.	c = ts, as in hats; ch = German ch; cz = ch in church.
PORTUGUESE: a very difficult language; placed usually just back of the teeth. The nasal vowels are also unique. Note 5.	as in father; when two as occur in a word the first is more like a in fat; ă, see Note 5.	nearly as in bob; but softer.	like s before e, i and y; like k otherwise; ç always like s; in cc the first c is like k, the second is determined by the following letter.
RUSSIAN: has 36 letters, including 12 vowels. It is usually written phonetically in German pronunciation as follows:	when accented, as in father; unaccented, as in bat; at the beginning, as ya in yacht; if unaccented, as in yank.	this letter resembling our f is pronounced v, as in vane, or f, as in foe; the equivalent of our b sounds as b or p in bet or trap.	as in cent or zone; ch = German ch at the end; at the beginning, as in chest.
SPANISH: a language of ideal regularity and precision; all vowels are separately pronounced.	as in father or in hat; å as in father.	like v in very.	before e or i, as th in think; otherwise as k; ch as in church; cu as qu in quart.
SWEDISH:	as in father or in mica; å as o in go, when long; when short, as a in what; ä as in hare.	as in bob.	before e, i or y, as in cent; otherwise as in cash; ch = k, except in foreign words.
WELSH: all vowel combinations are separately pronounced; the letter w = oo in moon.	as in fat; â as in dare.	as in bob.	always like k; ch = German ch, see Note 3.

D	E	F	G
as in deed; dh as th in these; dj as in adjoin.	ē as in bean; ĕ as in pet—at the end of words almost like ŭ.	as in fife.	as in gig.
soft like Italian d.	as in prey; ĕ as in pet.	as in fife.	as in gig.
as in deed. For d', dĕ and dï, see Note 4.	as in pet; é as in ere; ĕ = ya, as in beatitude. See also Note 4.	as in fife.	as in gig.
beginning a syllable as in date; ending as th in bathe; after l, n, and r, silent; ds = ss in hiss.	as in prey and there; ej like ī in bite.	as in fife.	as in gig; after e or ö like y in yoke; between vowels often mute.
at the beginning of syllables as in date; at the end as t in hot.	when short as in met; when open as in prey; ee simply prolongs the sound; see also eu.	as in fife; fl as in flow; fr as in fresh.	like German g; ng as in looking.
like German d and dt.	e or é as in pet; eu like French eu; e after a vowel usually simply prolongs it; ee = a in fate or as in seen; see eu.	as in fife.	as German g, very guttural.
at the beginning or in the middle as d in deadlock; usually silent at the end of the word; in liaison it becomes t.	as e in father or u in cut; as a final syllable generally silent; é as in prey when it has stress, otherwise as in pet; è as ai in fair; ê as in pet; see ei, d, s, t, z, r.	as in fife, not silent at the ends of words, except in clef; in liaison it becomes v.	as in gate except before e, i and y, then as s in pleasure (marked here as zh); silent when final, becoming k in liaison; gn as ni in minion.
beginning a syllable as in date; ending a syllable as t in hat; dt = t in hat.	when long as in prey; when short as in pet; ei = i in right; see eu.	as in fife.	at the beginning of a syllable as in gate, but softer; at the end, see Note 3; ng when final vanishes in a faint k sound as sang = zangk.
as in deed; dj same as 'gy; djs = j in judge.	before m or a sharp consonant as in fat; otherwise as e in ten; é as in prey.	as in fife.	as in gig; gy = d in due (not doo); ggy = gygy or d' d'.
as in deed, but softer and more palatal.	as in prey when long; when short as in pet; è as in pet.	as in fife.	before e and i as in gem; gg as dj in adjoin; gli = ly' like ll in million, gn = ny' or ni in pinion; gu = gw; gui = wē.
as in deed.	as in prey; but when final as e in father.	as in fife.	as in gig, but before j and y as y in yoke.
as in deed; dz as in adze; dž as dge in judge,	e as in met; ę = French in, see Note 1; ę́ = a as in pate.	as in fife.	as in gig.
as in deed.	e and é usually as in prey; ê has a curious closed sound.	as in fife.	as in gate; but before e, i and y as in gem.
as in deed.	at the beginning of words = yo in yolk if accented; if unaccented as ye in yesterday; otherwise as e in pet.	usually represented by the German v or w.	at the beginning usually as in go; sometimes at the beginning, always at the end as German ch; see Note 2.
much like th in those (marked in this book by dh); when two ds occur in a word, only the second has this sound, the first as in date.	as in prey when long; when short as in pet; é as in prey or pet.	as in fife.	as in gate; but before e and i, as a very harsh h in hate; gue = ga as in gate; gui = ge as in gear; gn as in ignite; gl as in glow.
as in deed, but silent in ndn and nds and before j or t.	as in film when long; when short as in pet; er as ar in bare.	as in fit at the beginning of syllables or after a short vowel; at end of syllable like v in slave; before v silent.	as in gate; before ä, e, i, ö, y and after l and r, like y in yoke; silent before j; gn = ng in sing.
as in date; dd as th in these.	as in pet; ê as in bean.	like v in revive; ff like f in off.	as in gate; ng as in wrong.

Phonetic meaning of the letters and symbols AS USED IN THIS BOOK.	H as in hate.	I ī as in fight; ĭ as in pin.	J as in jug.	K as in kick; kh = German ch or g; see Note 3.
ARABIAN :	strongly aspirated at end or beginning of a word.	as in pin; i as in bird.	as in jug.	strongly guttural.
BOHEMIAN :	as in hate.	as in pin; i as in machine.	like y in yes; after vowels it prolongs their sounds somewhat as y in day, whey, etc.	as in kick.
DANISH :	as in hate but silent before j and v.	as in machine; after a, e, o, ö, and u like y in yoke.	even with vowels aj, ej, like y in yoke.	as in kick.
DUTCH :	as in hate.	when short as in pin; when open as e in rely; ie prolongs the open sound only before r, otherwise as e in rely; ij same as ei.	as y in yoke.	as in kick; ks = x in fix; kw = qu in quart.
FLEMISH :	as in hate.	i or ĭ as in pin; ü or ie the same prolonged; ieu sounds like ē-ŭ.	as y in yoke.	as in kick; ks = x in fix.
FRENCH :	always silent.	as in pin, see ei, oi; î as i in machine, but see ai.	as s in measure (marked in this book as zh).	as in kick.
GERMAN :	as in hate.	as in machine; ie as in believe.	as y in yoke.	as in kick.
HUNGARIAN :	as in hate.	as the quick e in rely; í as in machine.	as y in yoke; jj as y in paying.	as in kick.
ITALIAN :	silent; after c or g it has simply a hardening effect.	as in machine, but when short as in pin; at the beginning of words like y in yoke.	same as i; at the beginning of words like y in yoke; as a vowel like i in machine.	.....
NORWEGIAN :	as in hate.	as in machine; at the beginning as y in yoke.	as in yoke.	as in kick; before i and y like h; kv = qu in quarter.
POLISH :	as in hate; see c, l and n.	i as in machine; after a consonant it has the effect of the imaginary y in due (not doo); iu = u in gun.	as y in yoke.	as in kick.
PORTUGUESE :	silent.	as in machine.	as in jug.	only in foreign words, as in kick.
RUSSIAN :	used only in a few native words, and in foreign derivations.	as in machine, but well back in the throat; after labials (b, f, m, p and v) as i in pin.	as y in yet.	as in kick; before k, t and ch softly as in German ch.
SPANISH :	usually silent or very slight; see c.	as in machine when long; when short as in pin; i as in machine.	as a very harsh h in hate; almost like German ch.	.....
SWEDISH :	as in hate; silent before j or v.	as in machine.	as y in yoke.	as in kick but before ä, e, i, ö and y in the same syllable like ch.
WELSH :	as in hate.	as in machine.	.....	as in kick.

L as in lull.	M as in mum.	N as in nun; n̈, see Note 1.	O ō as in note; oi as in noise; oo as in moon or foot; ô as in wrong; ow as in cow; ôn̈, see Note 1.	P as in pop.

as in lull, but when followed by another consonant a short e is interpolated, as if elk were spelt elek.	as in mum.	as in nun.	as in bother when short, when long as in over; oo = o in over; ooi = o in over followed by i in pin; see oe.	as in pop; ph = f.
as in lull.	as in mum.	as in nun.	o as in note or not; oo or oe usually the same prolonged, sometimes like wa in was, oei or oey as ō-ē.	as in pop.
as in lily, l sometimes l (called "l mouillé") is liquid, as y in yoke or paying.	at the beginning, as in mate. See note 1.	at the beginning, as in name. See Note 1.	as in not; often almost as ŭ in nut; ô as in note; see oi.	at the beginning and middle, as in paper; p u i = almost p w e; ph = f; silent when final.
as in lull.	as in mum.	as in nun.	as in wrong; ö see Note 2; ö is sometimes spelled oe.	as in pop.
as in late; ll or ly = y in paying.	as in mum.	as in nun; ny = n as in new (not noo); nny = nyny, or n' n'.	o as in note; ó is prolonged as in slow; ö = French eu; ō or ö = German long ö.	as in pop.
as in lull; see g.	as in mum.	as in nun; see g.	as in note; ô as in wrong.	as in pop.
as in lull.	as in mum.	as in nun.	as u in full, but often as o in note or not; oe = a in sale; ö like French eu long or short.	as in pop.
as in lull; t is sounded by closing the teeth on the tip of the tongue as l is pronounced.	as in mum.	as in nun.	o as in note; ó is between note and move.	as in pop.
as in lull; lh like lli in million.	as in meet, but at end of syllables or after e, like French nasal n. See Note 1.	as in note; but at end of syllables or after e, like French nasal n, see Note 1; nh = ni in minion.	as in note or in not; ŏ see Note 5.	as in pop; ph = f.
as in lull; before a or o, as ll in collar.	as in mum.	as in nun.	as in not.	as in pop.
as in look: ll like lli in billiards.	as in mum.	as in nun; ñ divides into ny as ni in minion, thus cañon = canyon.	when long as in note: when short o as in not; ó as in note.	as in pop; silent before s, n and t.
as in lull, but usually silent before j.	as in mum.	as in nun; gn = ng in sing.	as in move or not, according to complex rules; ö = German ö.	as in pop.
as in look; ll has a curious mingling of th and l	as in mum.	as in nun.	as in gone: ô as in bone; the sound oo is represented by w.	as in pop; ph = f.

ST	TH as in thing; the th in those is represented by dh.	NOTES
.....	.....	No. 1.—The French nasal sounds are easily obtained: (1) Though spelled with an m or n (and indicated in this book by an ṅ) they have really no n sound in them, much less the ng sound that some foreigners give them. Though variously spelled they are reducible to four vowel sounds pronounced as we say, "through the nose," though actually with closed nasal passages. If one will pronounce or rather snort the word "wrong" without producing the final g at all, one will have exactly the French on (1); the word "thank" similarly sounded without the k will give the French in (2); the word "trunk" without the k gives the French un (3); the word "donkey" (not pronounced like monkey) contains the French en (4). These four are indicated in this book by (1) ȯn ; (2) ăn ; (3) ŭn ; (4) ăn.
.....	.....	The French nasals may be grouped as follows: Those pronounced like (1) are om, on, and eon after g ; like (2), im, in, aim, ain, ein and also en as an ending; like (3) ŭn, un and evn ; like (4) am, an, ean, aen, aon and en at the beginning of words.
.....	.....	These letters m and n, however, lose their nasal quality when doubled or when preceding a vowel; onne is pronounced as one in done, ome or omme as in come, eme as in em in them, etc.
as in stone.	.....
.....	.....	No. 2.—French u (which is the same as the German ü when long) is easily pronounced if one will pucker his lips to say oo, as in moon; and keeping them strongly puckered, say e as in bean. Those who have eaten green persimmons, or had their lips distended with peach fuzz, have the correct position for this e sound. There is really no oo sound in the French u at all, and if one cannot say the u correctly he will come much nearer the truth if he uses a plain English long e, as in bean, rather than the sound of u, as the spelling might suggest.
.....	.....	The German ü when short is formed by keeping the lips puckered and saying i as in fit, instead of e in serene.
like sht in washtub.	like t in tot.	The other German modified (or umlauted) vowels are (2) ä, pronounced, when long, almost like a in sale, but verging on a in care (it is marked here simply as ā); when short much like e in pet; (3) ö when long can be secured by puckering the lips for a round, full o, as in note and then saying a as in sale (it is marked in this book simply as ā to avoid the danger of saying a plain o); when it is short the lips should be puckered for the round o, and a short e as in pet then pronounced. The caution must be emphasised that in the experiments the lips must be firmly kept in the first, or puckered position, in spite of the temptation to alter it.
.....	.....	No. 3.—German ch is not difficult, once caught. Our sound th as in think will be found if prolonged to be produced by the simple device of holding the tip of the tongue lightly between the teeth and then breathing. The German ch results from pressing the two sides of the tongue firmly against the bicuspid teeth (the two upper teeth on each side back of the canine or eye teeth) and leaving the tip of the tongue free, then breathing the necessary vowel as in ach, ich, etc. German g is much the same but even softer. Both are indicated in this book by kh.
as in stone.	.....
.....	.....	No. 4.—Certain Bohemian letters and combinations insert the sound y closely allied to a consonant, as in the French diable and tien, or the English "How d'ye do?" or "I've caught*tye.*" Bohemian d, n and t are given this d'y and t'y sound when followed by e or i or by an apostrophe as d', ñ or t'.
.....	.....	Many Bohemian combinations of consonants seem unspeakable because they are spelt with no vowels between. They are no harder to say, however, than such words of ours as "twelfths." Among such consonant chains are drn, kb, kd, krl, prst, skrz, sr, wl and zr. They must be run together as smoothly as possible.
.....	.....	No. 5.—Portuguese diphthongs are of three sorts; the first two cannot be distinguished here, they are simply combinations of vowels (sometimes of three vowels or triphthongs) in which each vowel is sounded independently; in the first class the first vowel takes the accent, in the second class the second vowel is accented. The third class contains a nasal vowel marked ã, õ or ũ, and pronounced with a strong nasal twang.
.....	.....	No. 6.—In vowel combinations other than those specially mentioned here, the vowels are pronounced separately, each in its own way.
.....	like t in tot.	No. 7.—Combinations of consonants other than those mentioned here will be found under their first letter.
.....	.....	No. 8.—As Greek and Latin pronunciations are matters of controversy and personal taste, no system is attempted here. Chinese, Japanese, Hebrew, Hindu, and various other languages are usually spelled phonetically, but on such different national or personal standards that they can hardly be generalised.
